Slovik's widow loses appeal to Army

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Army Friday expressed "sympathy and compassion" for Antoinette Slovik but declined to reverse her husband's World War II conviction as a deserter and denied her $70,000 in insurance benefits.

Army Sec. Clifford Alexander, affirming a decision by a board of appeals, said there was no basis to change the record of Pvt. Eddie D. Slovik, the only American soldier executed for desertion since 1864.

Mrs. Slovik, who is 63 and lives in poverty in Detroit, may appeal the decision in federal court, the Army said, or ask her congressman to introduce a private relief bill on her behalf.

THE ARMY announced its decision in a two-paragraph statement.

"Although the report of the board expressed sympathy and compassion for Mrs. Slovik, it found no basis for changing Private Slovik's military records," the statement said. "It therefore recommended unanimously denial of the application.

"The record clearly reflects that Private Slovik deserted to avoid combat duty. The law covering the payment of National Service Life Insurance benefits precludes payment in the case of individuals who are convicted of desertion."

If the board had agreed to Mrs. Slovik's request, she would have been entitled to her husband's $10,000 GI insurance which, with interest, would now be worth about $70,000.

MRS. SLOVIK suffers from epilepsy and has no income aside from a small Social Security payment.

Slovik was executed Jan. 31, 1945, by a U.S. Army firing squad at Saint Marie Aux Mines, France, after his second desertion. But it was not until 1954, when Mrs. Slovik was interviewed by William Bradfod Huie for a book on the execution, that she learned how her husband died.

Slovik deserted twice and vowed in his confession "I'll run away again if I have to go" into battle.

Slovik, who had a record as a juvenile delinquent, gave himself up at an Army camp at Rocherath, Belgium, Oct. 9, 1944, after he deserted for the second time in France.

New information on Slovik, was released Friday after Alexander refused to reverse his World War II conviction.

Eddie Slovik

HIS CONFESSION, written in ink on a green U.S. Army Post Exchange flower order form, contained several mispellings.

"I Pvt. Eddie D. Slovik 36896415 confess to the desertion of the United States Army. At the time of my desertion we were in Albuff in France. I come to Albuff as a replacement. They were shilling the town and we were told to dig in for the night.

"The flowing morning they were shilling us again. I was so scared nerves and trembling that at the time the other replacements moved out I couldn't move. I stayed their in my fox hole till it was quite and I was able to move. I then walked in town. Not seeing any of our troops so I stayed over overnight at a French hospital. The next morning I turned myself over to the Canadian Provost Corp."

"After being with them six weeks I was turned over to American M.P. They turned me lose. I told my commanding officer my story. I said that if I had to go out their again Id run away. He said their was nothing he could do so I ran away again and I'll run away again if I have to go out their."

On Nov. 11, 1944, a general court-martial of the 28th Infantry Division at Rotgen, Germany, convicted Slovik on two counts of desertion "to avoid action against the enemy" and sentenced him "to be dishonorably discharged, total forefeitures, and to be shot to death with musketry."

ANTOINETTE SLOVIK received sympathy and compassion from the Army but no money from her husband's $70,000 in insurance benefits.

'Slick' landing for space shuttle

The big 75-ton spaceplane popped smoothly off the back of its 747 carrier plane 24,100 feet above the Mojave Desert and glided at high speed to a 7½-mile long runway on a dry lakebed.

The solo flight lasted 5½ minutes and test manager Donald "Deke" Slayton said, "we're very, very happy with the whole thing."

"I'M VERY HAPPY," Haise said at a news conference three hours after the landing. "Everything went super slick. It went better than I had hoped for."

Fullerton, too, was ecstatic about the flight of the machine engineers call an orbiter.

"The orbiter flies like a good fighter aircraft rather than a transport, which in reality is what it is," he said. "I feel very fortunate to be part of this first step."

Enterprise's four rear wheels touched down at 210 miles per hour, kicking up a long plume of beige dust from the clay and silt plain that has been dry thousands of years.

THE SHIP'S NOSE slowly settled down and Enterprise rolled two miles before coming to a stop.

"Congratulations, it was a beautiful flight," astronaut Karol Bobko radioed the Enterprise pilots from Mission Control in Houston.

The black and white ship, 122 feet long with a wing as wide as a DC9 jetliner, came down on a landing approach that was three times steeper than that followed by commercial aircraft.

The weather was excellent, but the astronauts nevertheless relied on computers and instruments for the landing as planned.

"I THINK history will show this is probably the second most important flight that has ever been made," said Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., a reserve Air Force Brigadier General. "The first important flight was the Wright Brothers. This opens up all of space for man's use."

Goldwater was one of two thousand VIPs watching the landing from the hot desert viewing area. In addition there were many more thousands of spectators observing from distant hills overlooking the Air Force test center.

A national television audience also watched the spectacle, receiving pictures from one of four little T38 jet trainers that followed the Enterprise like flies.

THE SPACE SHUTTLE is the key to the nation's future in orbit. It is designed to be reuseable to make at least 100 flights to and from space every few weeks. It can carry seven men and women, satellites weighing up to 65,000 pounds and orbiting laboratories.

The capacity to land at an airport instead of parachuting into the ocean as did its predecessors gives the shuttle the versitlity and economy required to make space operations routine in the next decade.

Friday's test proved that the shuttle is able to make an airport landing without engines, relying on a battery of five computers an dthe most advanced guidance and control system ever installed in a spacecraft.

"She's flying good," he radioed the control center in Houston which directed the flight as if it were a space mission.

Enterprise flew a U-shaped course from separation to landing which required two sharp left turns. Haise did most of the piloting, but Fullerton 40-year-old Air Force Lieutenant Colonel, who has yet to fly in orbit, took the single stick control for awhile.

Enterprise was traveling a little faster than desired on its landing approach, so Haise applied the brakes — opening a tail structure like a clamshell to create more drag. The craft slowed as expected.

"It looks super," reported the Houston controller responsible for monitoring the flying qualities of the Enterprise.

The craft was 200 feet above the ground when its conventional airplane landing gear dropped out of the black underside.

Enterprise touched down at 11:54 a.m. EDT. The two pilots climbed out of the ship's roundside hatch 16 minutes later, smiling broadly and shaking hands with technicians who stood on airplane-like stairs that had been rolled up to the ship

An hour later, the spacemen met their wives, hugging them in front of a crowd of photographers.

Haise and Fullerton began their day when they were awakened at the base's officers quarters at 4 a.m. They had a breakfast of steak and eggs, which is a tradition for astronauts about to make a flight.

The Enterprise is scheduled to make three to five more flights. Astronauts Joe Engle and Richard Truly are due to make the next one Aug. 30.

Enterprise will be flown piggyback on the 747 to the Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala., next March for a vibration test.

A second shuttle, known now only as No. 102, will make the initial space flight. It is scheduled to be ferried from its Rockwell International assembly plant at nearby Palmdale next August to the Cape Canaveral, Fla. launch site.

RTA to begin feeder bus service in autumn

Commuter bus routes to railway stations in downtown Arlington Heights and Arlington Park Race Track will be started in mid-October or November, a Regional Transportation Authority official said Friday.

The two routes will serve residents in the southern areas of Arlington Heights and the south and southeast portions of Rolling Meadows, Richard L. Brazda said.

"Essentially, the service will be designed to meet three or four trains in both the morning and evening rush periods," Brazda said.

SPECIFIC ROUTES will not be developed until officials in Arlington Heights and Rolling Meadows have submitted comments on the bus route plan, he said.

"One route will probably run as far south in Arlington Heights as Central Road and White Oak Street and we hope the other will go west of Ill. Rte. 53 briefly to serve parts of that area. Of course, there is a limit to what you can serve and still meet a number of trains," Brazda said.

Unlike most RTA bus services, the two new routes will be put out for bid to private bus companies, Brazda said.

"We decided to do it this way because there aren't any carriers that are clearly operating in that area. Also, because of various problems at the national level, only a limited number of buses have been built and so we're short of equipemnt," he said.

Specific routes should be known in early September and the program will then be let for bids, Brazda said.

Residents on the north side of Arlington Heights have been served for more than a year by a commuter bus that makes runs between Buffalo Grove and the downtown railway station.

Ft. Knox clerk recalls days with Sam suspect

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI)—A civilian employe at nearby Ft. Knox recalls the man accused of the "Son of Sam" slayings as "very shy, but completely normal" during several weeks of close association when he broke her in on her clerical job.

"I just couldn't believe it was the same guy when I saw him on television," said Mrs. Diana Heaberlin, who was still single when she knew David Berkowitz at the Army post from March, 1974, until his discharge June 24, 1974.

"I really don't know if he was especially shy around women because my contact with him was strictly a working relationship."

IN A TELEPHONE interview from the Ft. Knox office where she works, Mrs. Heaberlin said she couldn't remember a single incident of abnormal behavior on the part of Berkowitz. He was assigned to a training brigade at the base after Army duty in Korea.

"I guess the biggest thing out of the ordinary was that he said he was a bird-watcher," said Mrs. Heaberlin, who married a soldier assigned to the same headquarters after Berkowitz left the Army.

Mrs. Heaberlin, 24, the same age as Berkowitz, said she also found it difficult to believe reports that his personality was warped by taking the drug LSD during Korean duty. The New York Daily News reported Friday that letters written to unidentified friends revealed a drastic transformation in his personality while in Korea.

"He just never showed anything like

Thomson hearing Monday

A 23-year-old Michigan junk yard owner faces arraignment Monday in criminal court after being extradited from Michigan for the July 7 murder of Mark VanDellen, 22, of Prospect Heights.

Brian Thomson of Ypsilanti, Mich., was brought Friday to the Cook County Sheriff's headquarters in Maywood from Ypsilanti. Thomson had earlier said he would fight extradition to Illinois, but he changed his mind after he retained a lawyer in Chicago, police said.

Thomson's attorney, Robert McGee, said Thomson will be arraigned before Judge Richard Fitzgerald in the Cook County Criminal Courts Building, 26th Street and California Avenue, Chicago.

THOMSON is charged with the stabing murder of VanDellen in what police believe was a love triangle involving Thomson's former girlfriend, Angela Morgan, 21, with whom VanDellen was living.

Thomson was arrested July 12 by Washtenaw County and Ypsilanti police at his parents' home in Ann Arbor Township, Mich., police said.

VanDellen's body was found July 7 in a hallway otside Miss Morgan's apartment at 16E. Willow Rd., Prospect Heights.

Police have said Thomson confronted VanDellen in the apartment hallway near Miss Morgan's door. Miss Morgan later told police she heard VanDellen's cries and the noise of the struggle but did not open the door.

Thomson had dated Miss Morgan for seven years until seven months ago when they broke up, police said. VanDellen, a truck driver for the Pedian Rug Co. warehouse in Morton Grove, had moved to Miss Morgan's apartment from Glenview three weeks before his death, police said.

Scavengers take over when crew leaves ship

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — As soon as it became apparent the tuna boat Mary Lucille would have to be abandoned, skiffs from other tuna boats moved in to wait — not to help the crew, but to rush the stricken ship and strip her before she went down.

Permitted under salvage laws of the sea, scavengers from Mexican and American boats fishing with the Mary Lucille Sunday night went aboard and ripped out equipment and supplies the minute the crew abandoned ship 130 miles to the south in the Pacific, crewmen reported Friday.

Sam Parmigiani, chief engineer of the vessel which later sank, described a distressing sight as his fellow mariners rushed to the advantage of the ship's misfortune.

HE SAID MEN from U.S. and Mexican tunaboats gathered all around the Mary Lucille in their skiffs.

"They were just waiting for us to get off. As soon as we went off, they were all over the boat."

Parmigiani said the salvagers took electronic eqiupment, outboard motors and "everything they could."

"I even saw some brand new sheets my wife had bought for me being taken off by the Mexicans."

HE SAID THE boarding party took shoes, clothes, "the big food mixer out of the galley, the toaster, pots and pans, everything that could be moved.

"They even ripped the fire hoses off the walls," he said.

Raul P. Lira, 43, skipper of the stripped and sunken boat, said "it always hurts to see that, but I guess they have the right to do that."

Lira and his crew of 14 abandoned ship to a skiff and were rescued by the J.M. Martinac, another San Diego tuna boat, after abandoning efforts to pump water out of the Mary Lucille's flooding hold.

Bard-quoting hijacker gets quick hook

BRINDISI, ITALY (UPI) — a crazed Egyptian teenager shouting "To Be Or Not To Be" hijacked an Air France jumbo jet Friday, but was overpowered by police while talking to ground personnel during a refueling stop at Brindisi Airport.

The crew slammed the door of the plane on the air pirates, identified as Tarek El Sajed Khater, 19, of Cairo, as he stepped outside. Airport Police then rushed him and took him into custody.

No injuries were reported.

The hijacker, dabbing his neck with perfume as he spoke to the 242 passengers and crew over the jet's public address system during the drama screamed out Hamlet's soliloquy in a jibberish of English, French and Arabic.

"I have 1,000 pounds of dynamite in here and I can blow up all the passengers and the plane," He said, holding a biscuit tin aloft. Passengers quoted him as saying he was "fighting for the rights of the Islamic people."

The French airbus, hijacked after a stopover in Nice, France, on flight from Paris to Cairo was forced to fly to Benghazi, Libya, but was not allowed to land.

The aircraft then flew over the Greek Island of Corfu to Brindisi on the Southern heel of the boot of Italy, landing with only 11 minutes of fuel left.

Police backed by marksmen rushed forward to the floodlit plane as the crew members slammed the plane's door on the hijacker's back, locking him out.

Police grabbed an ax and some small boxes containing an unidentified but nonexplosive material from the hijacker, bundled him into a waiting car and rushed him to Brindisi police headquarters.

A YOUNG SAUDI Arabian passenger said about 10 minutes after the plane had taken off from Nice he saw the young man, wearing blue jeans, a sports shirt and sweater, head for the cockpit.

Another passenger, who said her name was Miss Thanaa, said the air pirate shouted confused messages to the pasengers over the address system.

"To be or not to be" she said he shouted.

She said he had claimed to have three comrades aboard whom he identified as K1, K2 and K3. But neither she nor any of the other passengers reported seeing the other three alleged hijackers.

The hijacker demanded a million francs — he did not say what kind of francs — and diplomatic passports for himself and his accomplices.

BEFORE HIS arrest about 20 passengers, mostly women and children, had been allowed to leave the French Airbus, the same type of plane hijacked last June to Entebbe, Uganda. Israel freed the passengers in a stunning commando raid.

Italian officials negotiated the release of the initial 20 Brindisi passengers in exchange for fuel for the plane.

Air France said the plane, Flight 120, carried 230 passengers and a crew of 12. Most of the passengers were reported to be Egyptians although at least 26 were French tourists, according to a travel firm in Paris.

Police sources in Rome who had been communicating with Brindisi police said the hijacker was a 19-year old Egyptian. They said the hijacker said he wanted to "Fly to Athens, Cairo or Benghazi, Libya, after the plane was refueled.

Police marksmen took up strategic positions around the floodlit airliner while the Brindisi chief of police negotiated with the plane by radio.

"He seemed to be very young and very excited. He was speaking an almost incomprehensible language. A sort of mixture of English and Italian," the pilot said.

Seats on space shuttle hard to get

by JOHN F. SIMS

NEW YORK (UPI) — I tried to reserve a seat on the first commercial passenger-carrying space shuttle flight, but the National Aeronautics and Space Adminstration said it could not accept my booking.

"We're open to offers for carrying payloads," said NASA spokesman Miles Wagner. "But carrying people is going to be a little more difficult."

Rockwell International manufactures the space shuttle that made its first free-fall flight under NASA auspices Friday. Both companies are predicting that the future will see the shuttle used for commercial purposes.

NASA is preparing a list of potential passengers, but only of space and aviation writers who want to be the first newsmen in space.

"There is room on board each shuttle for one passenger," Wagner said. "At some time in the future we'll work out a way of choosing a writer to be that passenger and be a pool reporter on behalf of all the news media."

Even so, that's not expected to happen until the early 1980s.

"It's all a bit hazy," said Wagner.

NASA has said the space shuttle could carry a 200 pound payload into space for as little as $3,000 in the mid-1980s.

By 1985 I think I could afford the $3,000, and I hope I won't weigh more than 200 pounds. So I thought I would get my booking in early.

The trouble is that some enterprising company will have to build a passenger compartment that would fit into the cargo hold of the space shuttle. And so far nobody has announced plans to spend the few million that would take.

"Apart from the mechanical considerations, there will also be some restrictions on passengers — health standards that you don't have to fulfill to fly an airliner," Wagner said.

Persons with heart conditions and other ailments would not be able to stand the shock of take-off, when acceleration imposes gravitational forces several times the norm.

"I'm sure some travel agent will start selling seat reservations," said Wagner. "But for the moment it would be a little like buying the Brooklyn Bridge."

Vandals cause $1,500 damage to Rob Roy lawns

Vandals struck at Rob Roy Golf Club early Friday, making it the third area golf course to be vandalized in the last three weeks.

The vandals drove a car across the course at 505 E. Camp McDonald Rd., Wheeling Township, causing an estimated $1,500 damage to fairways and greens.

Tire tracks showed the small car left Wheeling Road and cut across several fairways, stopping at three greens to skid and gouge out chunks of sod.

THE VANDALS then drove through the Rob Roy practice range and onto Euclid Avenue.

On Aug. 5, vandals caused $5,000 in damage to Buffalo Grove Golf Course, wrecking five golf carts and tearing up three greens.

On July 30, 45 golf carts were destroyed in a fire at Rolling Green Country Club, Wheeling Township, about a mile from Rob Roy. Fire officials suspect arson in the incident, which caused $90,000 damage.

Local authorities said there is no apparent connection between the incidents.

ROB ROY course workers discovered the damage about 6:30 a.m. Friday. The damage was most severe to greens on the third, sixth and seventh holes.

Bob McDonald, the club pro, said this was the third time vandals had struck the course this summer but that other incidents had been minor.

"With the wet weather lately, the ground was soft and easy to tear up," he said.

The softness of the turf may make repairs easier, McDonald said. The moisture is deep enough to allow new sod to be placed on the greens, he said.

Golfers at Rob Roy Friday were angry about the damage, which interferred with play on the three greens.

"IT'S LIKE tearing my own skin off," one golfer said. "But I hope they catch those — and give them what they deserve," he said.

"They ought to shoot 'em," another player said.

"I wouldn't want to be those guys if we catch them," said Keith McDonald, a course worker who was replacing sod.

Local authorities say several factors make golf courses likely targets for vandals.

"Golf courses are largely unprotected at night, and there usually isn't anyone around," said Sgt. Peter Lippert of the Buffalo Grove police.

"WE'VE TRIED putting officers on patrol on a course at night, but it is still a big area," he said.

A golf course offers rolling terrain that attracts thrill-seeking drivers, said Capt. Paul Buckholz, Arlington Heights Police.

"Where else can you ride cowboy style in the suburbs?" said Buckholz.

A WORKMAN REPLACES sod ripped from a green early Friday when vandals caused an estimated $1,500 damage to the Rob Roy Golf Course, 505 E. Camp McDonald Rd., Mount Prospect. Rob Roy is the third area golf course to be vandalized in the past three weeks.

Panama gets canal control in treaty plan

BY HELEN TADAAS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Hailing a "new day in hemisphere relations," President Carter Friday announced terms of the new Panama Canal treaty giving Panama control of the strategic waterway at the turn of the century.

In a statement indicating he expects a tough fight for Senate ratification of the pact, Carter said the treaty "would strengthen our security interests, be fair to ourselves and the people of Panama and ensure free international use of the canal in the spirit of cooperation and friendship."

Carter noted all presidents since Lyndon Johnson had worked toward a new treaty and said he was happy that work on it was completed in his administration.

Press Sec. Jody Powell said Carter, anticipating a battle over the agreement, telephoned Gerald Ford and former Sec. of State Henry Kissinger earlier this week to discuss the issue.

CARTER, OUTLINING terms of the new agreement Friday, said a "neutrality" pact issued along with the main treaty gives the United States a permanent right to defend the canal.

He said U.S. warships will have a permanent right to use the canal, and for the next 23 years, American military forces will have primary responsibility to protect and defend the waterway.

Other provisions:

• Panama will assume general territorial jurisdiction over the present Canal Zone Dec. 31, 1999.

• Panama, which now gets about $2.3 million per year in tolls, would get $40 million to $50 million each year in tolls; $10 million per year from toll revenues and up to an additional $10 million per year if canal traffic and revenues permit.

The United States has been getting $220 million a year in revenues but negotiator Ellsworth Bunker gave no indication whether that amount will change under the treaty.

• The United States for the rest of the century will maintain control over all lands, waters and installations, including military bases, necessary to manage, operate and defend the canal.

• A new U.S. agency will operate the canal, replacing the Panama Canal Company, and will assure U.S. control of canal operations for the rest of the century. The Canal will be open to all shipping.

• Panama will receive up to $200 million in Export-Import Bank credits; up to $75 million in AID housing guarantees and a $20 million Overseas Private Investment Corporation loan guarantee.

• The package contains "buy American" provisions that will benefit U.S. businesses that invest in and sell goods and services to Panama.

• All U.S. civilians now employed in the canal will remain on their jobs until retirement.

• America and Panama will jointly study the feasibility of a new canal.

The President also said the United States will work with Panama to assess the need for a sea-level canal and to cooperate on possible improvements to the existing canal.

He said the treaty "will help to usher in a new day in hemispheric relations," and he will seek Congressional approval for it.

EFFORTS TO WIN support for the pact already are under way.

Treaty negotiator Sol Lindwitz said he met with Ronald Reagan a few weeks ago to discuss the treaty, but failed to persuade him to support it. Reagan made American ownership of the canal a big issue in the GOP presidential primary campaign last year.

Linowitz also said he conferred with Kisisnger several times and found him "interested, helpful and pleased."

He asid there are "no limits" on the number of troops the United States could send to Panama if necesasry after the year 2000.

Linowitz said Senate failure to ratify the treaty would damage U.S.-Panamanian as well as U.S.-Latin American relations.

Nazis told to end 'hate' phone tape

The American Nazi party must stop playing a recorded telephone message that urges whites to kill blacks, Cook County Circiut Court Judge Raymond K. Berg ruled Friday. The message constitutes a "clear and present danger" to society, Berg ruled, and the organization cannot play it or any similar message. The tape, which played for a week when persons dialed a Nazi headquarters telephone number, refers to the looting during New York City's blackout. It then offers $200 to "the first white man or woman who will exercise his right to protect his life and property and blow one of these black criminals away."

Columbo witness quits county job

Roman Sobczynski, 35, the county employe who got sexual favors from convicted murderer Patricia Columbo by posing as a hit man, has resigned from his $17,000-a-year civil service job with Cook County. Sobczynski, a former deputy sheriff, had worked for the county as a government recruiter for nine years. During the trial of Miss Columbo and her lover Frank DeLuca, it was disclosed Sobczynski and another witness, Lanyon Mitchell, had sex with Miss Columbo while pretending to be hit men for the mob. Both Sobczynski and Mitchell were listed as unindicted co-conspirators in the case and were granted immunity from prosecution.

Bomb-making ring probed

McHenry County sheriff's police Friday said they are continuing an investigation of a bomb-making ring which is believed to have manufactured and exploded as many as 100 bombs in the past several years. Two persons were arrested Thursday night and a pipe bomb which police said was intended for a Fox River Grove police car was seized. Other suspects, detective James Connelly said, include teen-agers who were being trained in the making of explosive devices. Those arrested were identified as Carl A. Hall, 31, Crystal Lake; and Audie C. Ellard II, Fox River Grove. Hall was charged with manufacture, possession and sale of explosives.

Adjusted plan could get OK

Mayor Michael A. Bilandic Friday said city officials might approve a proposed 54 billion development along the south branch of the Chicago River if some "adjustments or changes" are made in the proposal. The Chicago Plan Commission Thursday recommended rejection of the proposal, which would consist of three connected towers housing as many as 11,000 families. "This thing has happened many times in the past where proposals are made and modifications and adjustments are made and they eventually get approval," the mayor said.

Illinois briefs

Rep. Breslin booted out again

Sangamon County Circuit Court Judge Jerry Rhodes Friday tossed Rep. Peg Breslin, D-Ottawa, out of the Illinois House. Rhodes said he was affirming the validity of a June 30 House vote ousting Mrs. Breslin because she did not meet residency requirements. Her lawyer, John Keith, argued the case should not be in court at all, calling it strictly a legislative affair, but Rhodes said the legislature would be powerless to enforce many actions without court backing. Rhodes also said the reappointment of Mrs. Breslin to fill her own vacancy the day she was ousted "is a nullity" because the Illinois Supreme Court has ruled the appointment procedure unconstitutional.

Defense rests in death penalty case

The defense rested its case Friday in what could be the first death penalty trial in Illinois under the state's new capital punishment law. Closing arguments were scheduled Saturday in the Cook County Circuit Court trial of William R. Hill, 27, who is charged with the contract slayings of Chicago pharmacists Robert Fields, 47, and Allen Ziperstein, 61. Presiding Judge John J. Moran ruled earlier in the proceeding to let prosecutors ask for the death penalty if Hill is convicted.

Rule all workers get union benefits

Illinois Atty. Gen. William J. Scott Friday said Gov. James R. Thompson, a fellow Republican, has the legal right to give thousands of state workers represented by a union the same benefits won for others via collective bargaining. Democratic Comptroller, Michael Bakalis, who would like to take on Thompson in 1978, asked Scott last month for an opinion. Such opinions are not legally binding but do influence state government decisions.

Wheeling's Zerkle may lose job looking for chief

by LINDA PUNCH

Wheeling Village Mgr. Terry L. Zerkle's job is in jeopardy apparently because he has refused to bow to pressure from Village Pres. William Hein and several trustees to appoint Wheeling Police Lt. Ted Bracke as police Chief.

A special meeting to discuss "the status of the village manager" was called for 9 p.m. Monday at the village hall, 255 W. Dundee Rd., by Trustees Dolores Dahm, Roger Powers and Robert Ross.

Hein and the three trustees Friday were unavailable for comment, but sources in village hall said "things look bad for Terry" and he could be fired. The sources said the major problem is Zerkle's reluctance to appoint Bracke as police cheif.

"ZERKLE WOULD not coment Friday.

The special meeting was called Friday morning on the heels of a confidential memo issued to board members by Zerkle, who was objecting to board interference in his job.

In the memo, Zerkle said Hein, Dahm, Powers, Ross and Trustee Hugh Sommerfeld have repeatedly interferred in administrative duties, particulary in pressuring him to appoint Bracke as police chief. Police Chief M.O. Horcher is retiring Sept. 16.

Under the council-manager form of government which Wheeling employs, othe village manager has the authority to make all administrative decisions, including hiring of all personnel. The village board sets policy.

Zerkle said in the memo that on several occasions Hein stated that "he wanted the appointment to come from within, that he wanted the appointment to be Ted Bracke, and that he was speaking for a majority of the board."

THE CONTROVERSY comes in the midst of a selection process in which Zerkle and the Police Services Bureau of the Illinois Assn. of Police Chiefs have reviewed resumes of more than 150 applicants.

Zerkle has said there are a number of promising candidates from outside the village and that he wants to fill the position "on the basis of merit and fitness, as determined through a competitive selection process." The search began in early June.

Trustee Charles Kerr Friday said the special meeting "obviously means they're going to drop the ax on Terry." Kerr released the memo issued by Zerkle, saying "it's time somebody took stand and let the village know the harassment Terry has taken since these hoodlums were elected."

Hein, Mr. Dahm, Ross and Powers all were members of the Wheeling Citizens Party which swept the village election in April. Trustees Kerr and John Cole are board holdovers and repeatedly have opposed Hein and his slate.

Sommerfeld, another member of Hein's slate, was out of town Friday.

"TERRY'S A professional guy and has never taken one side or the other. I'm sure if I asked him for permission to release this information, he'd say no. But I feel it has to be released,"

Cole Friday said he agrees with Kerr about releasing the information to the public.

"My personal opinion is that if they get rid of Terry and put in their own person, there goes the last vestige of respectibility for the billage. We're going to sink into slime and become one-man fiefdom," he siad.

Cole said he hopes "the citizens care enough to pack the village hall on Monday night."

"THE ONLY thing that will help now is for the citizens to have an uprising," he said.

In the memo, Zerkle said that "a cumulative series of actions in recent months by some board members is jeopardizing our joint working relationship and is causing a breakdown in communications between the board and the manager, and, also, in the chain-of-command.

"I cannot function effectively under the present circumstances, and it would be a disservice to the community, to the village organization, and to the city management profession for me to continue as village manager unless these circumstances are changes," he said.

Zerkle attached a report to the memo documenting 11 instances when Hein, Dahm, Powers, Ross and Sommerfeld allegedly interfered in village administration. Seven of the incidents, he said, involved "unwarranted pressure and interference by some meembers of the village board on the village manager relative to the appointment of a successor to retiring Police Chief M.O. Horcher."

Citing the village code that prohibits board interference with administrative services, Zerkle asked that trustees "deal with employes in the administrative service only through the village manager."

ZERKLE ALSO said that the village code authorizes the village manager to select the police chief and asked that he "remain free to make position appointments on the basis of merit and fitness without political pressure and interference."

Zerkle last Monday called for an executive session to discuss his grievance with the board but his efforts were blocked by Hein, Dahm, Ross and Powers.

In his memo, he said he called for the closed session because "I sincerely wanted to air this matter with the board in private and see if there was some way we could come to a mutual understanding.

"During my association with the village, I have never played games with the present village board, the previous board or the village employes. I do not intend to start now," he said.

Zerkle was hired as village manager in June 1976, to replace former Village Mgr. George Passolt. During his 14 months with the village, he instituted a major capital improvements program, hired top administrative staff to fill crucial positions and oversaw budgeting procedures which returned the village to a stable financial position.

Zerkle also drew up collective bargaining guidelines, which averted the major salary disputes faced by the village in the past.

Pressure instances documented in confidential note

Wheeling Village Mgr. Terry L. Zerkle has said he has been pressured by Village Pres. William Hein on several occasions to hire Wheeling Police Lt. Ted Bracke as police chief.

In a confidential memo to the board, Zerkle documented several instances in which Hein and Trustees Dolores Dahm, Robert Ross, Hugh Sommerfeld and Roger Powers, allegedly attempted to interfere with his duties. On several occasions, Hein said the trustees allegedly attempted to use their influence to gain zoning and building favors.

Incidents cited by Zerkle include:

- July 15, 1977: On the day following the first round of interviews for the police chief position, "President Hein made contact with me (Zerkle) and indicated that he felt Ted Bracke should be appointed the new chief."
- First of the week following the interviews: Hein tells Zerkle "that he felt Ted Bracke should be appointed the new chief and that he was speaking for a majority of the village board."
- July 22, 1977: Zerkle is approached by Hein, Ross and Powers about the police chief selection. Hein said he was speaking for Ross, Powers, Sommerfeld and Dahm. Both Ross and Powers said they wanted "the new chief to come from within the department." Zerkle tells them he feels there is no one from within the department qualified to handle the job. "I could tell that President Hein and Trustees Ross and Powers were upset with me for that response. Trustee Ross stated 'Let the chips fall where they may.' He did not elaborate."

"Trustee Powers stated that he wanted the appointment to come from inside and that 'a lot depends upon it.' He did not elaborate and I did not inquire."

Zerkle tells the three men he is looking for the "best man for the job based on merit and fitness. I stated further that the interview panel had recommended no one fron inside based on the oral interviews . . . President Hein stated that all we wanted was someone who could do the job and that, in his opinion, there was such a person from within (on two previous occasions, he stated that person was Ted Bracke)."

- July 26, 1977: Hein asks Zerkle whether he has made a selection for plice chief. Zerkle said he is still looking into several promising applicants. "President Hein stated that he wanted the appointment to come from within, that he wanted the appointment to be Ted Bracke, and that he was speaking for the majority of the board," Zerkle said.
- July 26: Ross tells Zerkle in a phone conversation that he (Ross) wants "the appointment to come from within, that there won't be a police department in six months if the appointment comes from without, and that they have four votes."
- July 27: Dahm, in a memo to Zerkle, states that "if we have men qualified and if they have applied for the position, they should be considered before anyone else." Dahm asks Zerkle "to do what is right for our town to avoid the disaster that would happen. You'd have a new out-of-house chief of police, but he'd have no policemen to be chief of."
- Aug. 3: Hein asks Zerkle about the status of the police chief selection. Zerkle said he is still reviewing applicants and has not made an appointment Zerkle tells Hein he plans to give the board an update on the police chief selection in executive session at the Aug. 8 meeting.

In his memo, Zerkle also said that Hein May 13 used his influence to have a zoning request from Rock Road Construction Co. placed on the board agenda although the staff had no chance to review the application. "I contacted President Hein and stated that it was standard operating policy to fully check petitions, include the accuracy of legal descriptions, etc., and to have the petitioner make corrections prior to forwarding the petitions to the board. President Hein reiterated that he wanted this item placed on the agenda."

Zerkle said he placed the request on the agenda, noting deficiencies in the application.

Rock Road is seeking a special-use permit to make their asphalt plant at 231 Wheeling Rd., a conforming use. The plan commisison has recommended denial of the request after residents and village officials testified the facility causes noise and air pollution.

Hein also contacted Walter Repholz, village building director, on May 13 and "inquired as to what was holding up the building permit to alter the attic" of a building at 1111 W. Dundee Rd.

The office building, owned by Richard Calfa, in 1975 was cited by village officials for violations of the building code. The village later filed suit against Calfa, his partner George Harhen and former building director William Bieber on charges of conspiring to violate village ordinances in construction of the building. The lawsuit was later dropped.

995-unit development urged for Rob Roy

by DEBBE JONAK

A 995-unit development of houses, condominium units and apartments lined with a nine-hole golf course was proposed Friday for the Rob Roy Golf Course.

The mystery developer of the 180-acre site at Euclid Avenue and Wheeling Road, Wheeling Township, revealed himself and details of his plan for the first time at a hearing of the Cook County Zoning Board of Appeals in Prospect Heights.

Anthony Pasquinelli of Flossmoor is asking the county to rezone the site from half-acre single-family lots to a general residential area.

HE WAS GREETED BY about 50 protesters, many representing local government and citizens' groups. However, few received a chance to speak because the developer's presentation lasted close to five hours. The hearing will be continued next month.

Pasquinelli, of Pasquinelli Construction Co., Flossmoor, made a brief appearance before the board.

He has built about 3,500 units in the Chicago metropolitan area since 1956.

Because Pasquinelli kept his plans and identity secret for so long, Prospect Heights City Atty. Donald Kreger complained the city did not have adequate time to prepare a case against the project.

Upon learning of Pasquinelli's identity, Board Chairman, Alex R. Seith said he will not vote on the issue because his law partner is the attorney for Pasquinelli's brother and business partner.

The development, as described by a land planner, engineers, real estate assessors and other consultants of Pasquinelli, would add about 2,600 persons to the area.

THE DEVELOPER proposes 37 acre lots and the nine-hole golf course as a buffer zone between the project's multifamily units and nearby homes on half-acre lots.

There would be 202 lots smaller than a quarter acre each, 384 condominium units and 372 apartment units.

The project would not place an extra burden on area utilities, streets or drainage, the consultants said. Real Estate taxes would pay for an additional load on schools and would not hurt land values in adjacent areas, they said.

They said that from marketing, land-use and esthetic viewpoints, the project would be the best way to develop the property.

Critics took all those points to task, adding it would intensify the water shortage plaguing the area. They said the best use of the property would be as an open recreational area or single-family homes.

SEVERAL LOCAL TAXING bodies, including Wheeling Township, River Trails and Prospect Heights park districts and the City of Prospect Heights have expressed interest in purchasing the site for a recreational area.

Rapp pleads innocent to extortion

A federal grand jury indicted Rapp Aug. 3 for attempting to extort $5,000 from a developer.

KIRKLAND granted Rapp's three defense attorneys 10 days to file briefs with the court and also granted Assistant U.S. Atty. Jeremy Margolis seven days to respond.

Waiting for more than an hour and a half before his arraignment began, Rapp appeared calm sitting in Judge Alfred Y. Kirkland's courtroom in the Federal Building, 219 S. Dearborn St., Chicago.

The case will come before U.S. Dist. Court Judge John Grady, Sept. 7 when a trial date is expected to be set.

Rapp, 1170 Thompson Blvd., Buffalo Grove, was arrested May 16 by two FBI agents after he allegedly received $5,000 from developer Louis P. Shassin, president of Wilmont Home Inc., Deerfield, which is building the Devonshire development at Busch Road and Ill. Rte. 83.

The payment was the first installment of $10,000 Rapp allegedly demanded for speeding Shassin's project through village approval processes.

Rapp, 34, was suspended without pay from his positions as village engineer and director of community development May. 17. Other village staff members and a consulting engineering firm have been performing Rapp's former duties while he awaits trial.

Charged with violating the Hobbs Act, which prohibits extortion, Rapp faces a maximum penalty of 20 years in prison and a $10,000 fine if found guilty.

Rand-Dundee corner under study

The high number of traffic accidents along U.S. Rte. 12 north of Dundee Road during the past 18 months has drawn the concern of Palatine and Lake Zurich officials.

Harvey C. Carothers, chief of the Palatine Fire Dept. said the interesection of U.S. Rte. 12 (Rand Road) and Dundee Road has become "our main place" for requests for ambulance service.

"I've always said we could practically station an ambulance at that corner," Carothers said. "We have a hell of a lot of accidents up there."

PALATINE PARAMEDICS answered 21 personal injury calls at the interesection since January of 1976 An average of more than once a month. In the same period, there were at least 40 more personal injury accidents involving vehicles that had turned off Rand Road or were headed toward it in Palatine Township he said.

Lake Zurich officials who are tabulating accidents reports in an attempt to have the state improve the hazardous situation on Rand Road report 112 accidents and 181 injuries on Rand Road from Lake Zurich to Lake Cook Road since January 1976.

There have been six fatalities in the last 18 months, five of them near the Rand Motel south of Quentin Road.

Among the fatalities were at least four pedestrians killed on the road. A recent victim was Bernhard Friedrich of Palatine, who was killed July 23 as he walked across the highway near Long Grove Road. He was struck at 2:30 a.m. by a hit-and-run driver whose headlights were out.

LAKE ZURICH officials have said the large number of businesses and the high speed limit, which ranges from 55 to 40 m.p.h. along Rand Road between Dundee Road and Lake Zurich, make the road hazardous.

In Palatine Township, only a narrow shoulder separates Rand Road from entrances to businesses such as taverns, restaurants, an adult bookstore and an outdoor theater. The speed limit for that area is 45 m.p.h.

Lake Zurich officials have asked the state to reduce the speed limit on Rand Road. They also have asked for more traffic lights and improved road conditions.

The state has suggested that local law enforcement agencies provide a selective enforcement program to slow drivers down.

CAROTHERS SAID much of the heavy traffic and accidents occur on weekends when Chicago and suburban residents head to the northern lakes region and Wisconsin.

"Between May 1 and Oct. 30 — every Friday through Sunday you have a whole crew of cars going through there," Carothers said. "Everybody is in such a hurry."

Paramedic Mark Toussaint of the Lake Zurich Rescue Squad said many of the accidents involve drivers who have been drinking.

"We need a much tougher judicial system to put these guys in jail or they're going to keep on killing people." he said.

A savings and loan and a music store will open within a month in the Arlington Market shopping center, Dryden Avenue and Kensington Road, Arlington Heights.

The Douglas Savings and Loan Assn. will expand into a 4,000-square-foot section of the center by early September, vice president Richard Brechlin said.

The new office will be the main branch of the savings and loan and the existing location at 1531 W. Campbell St. will remain open for all services but loan applications and closings, he said.

"We've simply outgrown our present office, which is half the size of the new one," Brechlin said.

The Andrews-Edwards Music Store will move from 111 N. Arlington Heights Rd. to Arlington Market within three weeks, said Sally Miller, an employe.

The new location will offer the same services, including instrument sales, service and lessons, she said.

"We've just outgrown this store," she said. "The new building is twice as large and will give us the room we need to expand."

The stores will occupy the area vacated by the Kresge Department Store last winter.

Neutron bargaining chip, Young says

U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young Friday said he hopes the neutron bomb is never built, but used only "as a bargaining chip in strategic arms limitation talks." Young said the neutron bomb and the President Carter's concern for human rights are in apparent contradiction, "but our world is a contradiction." The U.N. ambassador, who arrived in Venezuela Friday, said, "The problem is how to protect freedom in a world where many people do not respect freedom. "I would hope that the neutron bomb would never be built, but would simply be used as a bargaining chip in the strategic arms limitation talks," he said. Young met with President Carlos Andres Perez for two hours and then told a news conference the Venezuelan leader has "a concern for the problems of the developing world and a willingness to provide leadership both in the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Problems and in the Third World."

Quake hits shaky Californians

San Fernando, Calif., Fire Chief Durwood Lewis was at a banquet at the Elks Club when the building started a rolling motion. A man next to him said, "oh, no, not another one" and a woman addel, "I hope it's not that bad." The "minor" earthquake Thursday night registering 4.4 on the Richter scale caused little damage and only one minor injury. But so sensitive are the people of the San Fernando Valley to quakes that their thoughts immediately flashed to the 1971 disaster that destroyed or damaged thousands of homes and killed 65. The epicenter was only five miles north of Sylmar, site of the center of the quake six years ago, and it rocked houses, sloshed water from pools and knocked books, dishes, ornaments and bathroom items off shelves.

Jury to probe Senate computer

A federal grand jury in Washington will investigate the award of a contract that could be worth up to $9.9 million to a Pittsburgh firm for a computerized Senate mailing system, a Justice Dept. official told UPI Friday. Assistant U.S. Atty. William Block said the grand jury also will look into a $7.5 million contract awarded by the Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare to the company, On-Line Systems, Inc. On-Line President Jack Roseman and Chairman John Godfrey were away from their Pittsburgh offices and not immediately available for comment. Senate officials signed a three-year contract with On-Line May 22, but the system must survive a test before it will be accepted fully by the Senate Rules Committee. If the system proves out, the contract could be extended five more years on a year-to-year basis.

Winds blow Big Sur fire on

Twenty-mile-an-hour winds blew the Marble Cone fire in the California's Big Sur country northward Friday, jumping creeks and fire lines and expanding into a 100,000-acre "monster." Humidity was a bone dry 7 per cent, and the mercury was in the 90s — conditions that fed the fire's spread. "This is bad, ugly terrain in which we couldn't use heavy equipment," Jim Rice, a fire information officer, said. "Now the weather has made things worse and turned this thing into a monster." Until Friday the air tankers commonly could not see to fly because of smoke and fog. Bulldozer use was limited because the terrain was too rough. Along a dozen miles of fire line, "hotshot crews" set backfires as the main blaze approached.

Church urges 'reciprocal gesture'

U.S. Sen. Frank Church reported to President Carter Friday on his four-day Cuban visit and said he expects the United States to make a "reciprocal gesture" to Fidel Castro for allowing Cubans married to Americans to emigrate. But Church told a news conference Castro did not ask for any "quid pro quo" when he made the gesture. While Church was in Cuba, Castro told him that 80 to 100 Americans living in Cuba were free to leave and take their Cuban families with them, reversing a policy that allowed Americans to leave, but not their Cuban families. Church, D-Idaho, said he expects "some kind of reciprocal gesture" by the United States in the future.

Test to check if body is Nazi's

Authorities in Paraguay attempted to determine Friday if Nazi war criminal Eduard Roschmann, "The Butcher of Riga," was the elderly man who died of a heart attack in a pauper's hospital earlier this week. Roschmann was accused of ordering the deaths of 40,000 Jews in the ghetto of Riga, Latvia, while an SS captain in World War II. Friedrich Beck, West German public prosecutor, has said Roschmann "pulled the trigger himself" in many cases. A man identified by his documents as Federico Bernardo Wegener, 64, a naturalized Argentine, died early Wednesday of a heart attack at Asuncion's Clinical Hospital for indigcents.Wegener is a known alias used by Roschmann during the nearly 29 years he hid in neighboring Argentina.

Chile abolishes secret police

With a U.S. State Dept. official visiting to discuss human rights, Chile announced the abolishment Friday of its dread secret police agency, DINA, because it's no longer needed. The military government said President Augusto Pinochet signed the decree abolishing DINA — which achieved a worldwide reputation for brutality in its suppression of Marxists — because it had "accomplished the delicate functions of national security that were assigned to it." However, the decree that abolished DINA, a Spanish acronym for National Intelligence Directorate, also created the CNI, (National Information Center) to carry out basically the same functions of DINA.

Kidnaped exec phones 'I'm fine'

Kidnapped U.S. executive William Andrew Weinkamer told his family in Mexico he was well in a recorded message played to them over telephone Friday, police sources said. Police sources quoted a family friend identified as Raul Flores as saying Weinkamer told his family in the message that, "I am fine." A U.S. embassy spokesman said a local representative of Weinkamer's company was negotiating a ransom with the kidnapers. But unconfirmed reports said the company already had paid a ransom of $2.25 million. Weinkamer, manager of Clevite de Mexico, S.A. — a subsidiary of a Cleveland-based firm, was abducted late Tuesday by three men wielding submachine guns as he left his offices in Naucalpan, an industrial suburb of Mexico City. The gunmen shoved him into his own car and drove off, later abandoning the vehicle on a freeway.

Rightists say they stole treasures

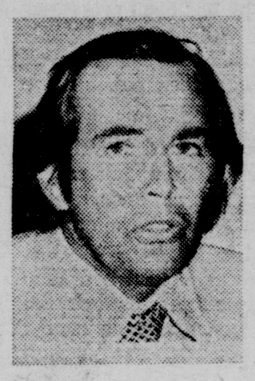
An obscure right-wing group in Spain said Friday it plundered the Oviedd cathedral in northern Spain and stole priceless works of religious art to prevent them from "falling into Communist hands." "The day Spain has again a government like the one of (late dictator) Generalissimo (Francisco) Franco, the treasure will be returned," the group, which calls itself the Anticommunist Iberian Alliance said in a taped message telephoned to the news paper El Pais.

Racism makes S. Africa 'scum of world': medic

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — Dr. Christiaan Barnard, the pioneer of heart transplant surgery, told his countrymen Friday that South Africa's racial policies had made it "the scum of the world community."

Barnard, speaking at the South African Freedom Foundations Conference on "Bridge Builders 1977," said his country's mistake went back to the late 1940s.

"This was a critical period in the history of the human race." he said. "It was just after World War II and the stench of the Nazi concentration camps was still fresh in our nostrils.



Christiaan Barnard

"YET WE COME along and talk about the purity of the white South African. It is no wonder that we are called Nazis, that we are called Fascists, because this is the impression that we give the world."

Another mistake was the "arrogant and ignorant way in which the government tried to implement its (apartheid) policy," he said, adding, "South Africa has become the scum of the world community. Nobody wants to have anything to do with us.

"We have unleashed an anti-white South African campaign by the mass media that has no parallel. All whites have become the oppressors and all blacks the oppressed."

A second speaker, John Barratt, warned against the danger of reacting simplistically to U.S. criticism of South African policies.

Barratt, who heads the South African institute of international affairs, said, "The approach of Americans to our problems is based on their own experience. The civil rights movement has had a profound effect on the United States.

"After their own experience, Americans, generally speaking, will not be tolerant towards policies based on race anywhere else," he said.

HSA seeks new board members

The federal agency responsible for health planning in suburban Cook County — the Suburban Cook County-DuPage County Health Systems Agency — is accepting nominations for its board of directors.

Twenty-two of the 66 directors' terms are expiring including seven from north Cook County.

The board is made up of consumers and providers of health care services. Any area resident over 18 can apply to be on the board.

Nominations must be submitted by Thursday on standard forms available at the HSA office, 1010 Lake St., Oak Park. Nominations will be acted on at the HSA's annual meeting Oct. 18.

New terms will be for three years.

North Cook County directors whose terms are expiring are consumers Scott Bernstein, Evanston; Mark Forkins, Des Plaines; Roger Klich, Park Ridge; and Robert Schwarz, Arlington Heights; providers Dr. Lawrence Breslow, Glencoe; Malcolm MacCoun, president of Northwest Community Hospital, Arlington Heights; and Harry Murray, Evanston.

The HSA is preparing a comprehensive health plan for suburban Cook and DuPage counties scheduled for completion early in 1978.

The HSA also makes recommendations to the state whether proposed new health facilities such as hospitals and nursing homes are needed.

Hilton payment to GOP studied

by STEVE BROWN
Of our Springfield bureau

SPRINGFIELD — A $200 payment by the Arlington Park Hilton to the ganization will be studied by the state liquor commission to determine whether t violated state law.

Records filed with the State Board of Elections show the hotel made the payment on Jan. 28, 1976. State liquor laws forbid liquor license holders from making political contributions to candidates or political organizations.

Jack Wallenda, the commission's executive director, said he will have investigators examine the GOP organization's report.

Joseph Kane, manager of the hotel,confirmed the $200 payment was made to the township organization, but insisted it was not a contribution.

"WE BOUGHT an ad in the program book they put together for a dinner that was held here," Kane said.

"We know the law and would not jeopardize our licenses," he said. State records show the hotel-theater complex, Euclid and Rohlwing roads, has four liquor licenses.

Wallenda, however, said purchase of ads in program books are contributions and are prohibited by state law.

Frend Yonkers, Wheeling Township Republican committeeman, said Friday that as long as there was advertising value from the Hilton's page in the program book it was not considered a campaign contribution and was not illegal.

"THIS QUESTION came up two years ago. We checked into it and it was cleared at that time so there wasn't anything particular done about it last year when Hilton bought the ad," Yonkers said.

"The ad was for the hotel's weekend package," he said.

State law forbids either direct or indirect contributions of any kind by liquor license holders. The license could be suspended or revoked.

In addition to this new inquiry, state liquor commission agents also are looking into contributions made to Gov. James R. Thompson by men who were involved with corporations that hold liquor licenses in Chicago.

Thompson has insisted that the contributions were proper because they were made by individuals and not the corporations that hold the licenses.

4 political groups miss filing election expenses

by STEVE BROWN
Of our Springfield bureau

SPRINGFIELD—More than 80 political candidates and organizations are expected to be called to hearings before the State Election Board to explain why they failed to file annual campaign financing reports.

The state election law requires candidates and political organizations raising or spending more than $1,000 between July 1, 1976, and June 30, 1977, to file the report by July 31.

Richard Anderson, an official with the public disclosure section of the state election board, siad there were a number of organizations and candidates that did not file, but they refused to say which ones.

THE HERALD, however, has learned that among groups and candidates who failed to file were Democrat William Sarto of Elgin, who unsuccessfully sought election to the Illinois House in the 2nd Legislative District; the Palatine Township Democratic Organization; the Elk Grove Township Democratic Organization; and the Wheeling Township Dmocratic Organization.

Former Sec. of State Michael Howlett also is expected to be called before the board for filing late. Howlett had sought additional time to file because his campaign manager was ill.

A full report is expected to be turned over to the elections board early next week and the order for the hearings will follow.

The state began ordering the hearings last year when it was discovered large numbers of candidates and political organizations were failing to comply with the state's campaign financing disclosure law.

GENERALLY, THE errant candidates and groups have filed reports. The board has been able to achieve about 98 per cent compliance, Anderson said.

Palatine Township Democratic committeeman Walter Soroka confirmed that his organization was late in filing the report.

"We are in the process of preparing it now," he said, without explaining why the organization had missed the July 31, 1977, deadline.

Spokesmen for the Democratic township organizations in Elk Grove and Wheeling townships could not be reached for comment.

State law does not allow the elections board discretion in cases involving persons or groups that fail to meet the filing deadline, but in the past the board has dropped court action if the report is filed when the notice of the hearing is prepared.

John Lewis, state official, dead

John Lewis

TERRE HAUTE, Ind. (UPI) — Former Illinois Sec. of State John W. Lewis, a veteran legislator, auctioneer and livestock producer, died Friday in Union Hospital. He was 71.

Lewis, a Republican who lived in Marshall, Ill., all his life, was a contemporary of the late Paul Powell, former Sec. of State., and worked closely with Powell both on legislation and on county fairs and harness racing.

Lewis was born in Marshall on Sept. 6, 1905. He attended grade and high school in Marshall and the University of Illinois.

He served nine consecutive terms, starting in 1940, in the Illinois House, one term in the Senate and three more terms in the House. He had 26 years total legislative service and claimed a perfect attendance record.

He served as majority whip, majority leader and was elected speaker for the 73rd General Assembly.

Richard B. Ogilvie, then governor, appointed Lewis agriculture director in 1969 and named him secretary of state after Powell's death the following year.

Lewis was a bombastic orator who used a "down home" twang and country boy expressions to drive hard bargains. When some race track stock dealings on his family's behalf were uncovered in 1971, Lewis held a press conference to denounce the reporter who had written about the scandal, threatening at one point to "clean his plow."

Visitation is at 2 p.m. today in the Moore Funeral Home in Marshall. Services will be Sunday at St. Mary's Church and Lewis will be buried in Marshall Cemetery.

Carter budget on welfare too low: Crane

U.S. Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-12, has charged that President Carter's welfare reform package is underestimated by $3.4 billion.

The administration's $2.8 billion estimate of the program's cost does not include $3.4 billion price tag on the expanded income tax credit, Crane said.

"This so-called reform moves in precisely the wrong direction by emphasizing Washington bureaucratic control over welfare programs," he said.

"In many cases, persons now working will become eligible for welfare while millions working at subsidized jobs will continue to receive supplemental welfare payments."

Under the earned income tax credit proposal, welfare assistance would be available to persons making $14,000 to $16,000 a year under the Carter plan, Crane said.

CANCER DETECTION
HEART ATTACK PREVENTION

A resting electrocardiogram is taken at the Northwest Center for Early Disease Detection, Inc. to detect any heart abnormalities.

Of every six people who get cancer today, two will be saved and four will die. Of the four who would otherwise die, one might be saved with earlier diagnosis and prompt treatment. (According to American Cancer Society publication '76 Cancer Facts and Figures.)

The health examination services available at the Northwest Center for Early Disease Detection include all cancer detection procedures recommended by the American Cancer Society, Illinois Division.

Heart Disease accounts for nearly half of all deaths each year. Unlike most Cancer, Heart Attack can be postponed through reducing one's risk factors such as diet, exercise, blood presure, smoking, etc. Dr. Morris Collen, a well-known specialist in preventive medicine, was quoted in the January, 1977 Issue of FORTUNE "if one has a checkup every year or two at age thirty-five and thereafter, directed at postponable diseases, the mortality rate from those diseases after seven years is approximately 50 percent of what it would have been without exams."

The Northwest Center for Early Disease Detection, Inc. offers a preventive health screening examination designed for three purposes:

1. To establish a health profile for each individual to be used as a baseline for future care.
2. To analyze an individual's risk factors for heart disease and cancer and statistically forecast probable life expectancy and suggest ways it might actually be increased by reducing the risk factors found.
3. Screen for treatable disease. Early detection and prompt treatment increase the probability of a favorable outcome.

This meticulous 3 hour, low cost examination includes a computerized medical history, health risk analysis, physical examination, proctosigmoidoscopy, chest x-ray, electrocardiogram, blood pressure, over 30 chemical determinations on blood and urine, vision, audiometry, spirometry, glaucoma test, body measurements. Women also receive a pap smear and instruction in breast self-examination. Exercise stress test, 24 hour holter monitor, and echocardiography are available as options.

Give yourself the best protection available today against cancer and heart disease by calling your physician or the Northwest Center for Early Disease Detection, Inc. located at 1000 Grand Canyon Parkway, Hoffman Estates, Illinois (Near Woodfield Mall.) Ask Andy

Primitive tribes still practice rites of voodoo

Andy sends the Encyclopaedia Britannica's 1977 Yearbook of Science and the Future to Gary McAuley, 9, of Portland, Ore., for his question:

WHAT IS VOODOO?

Many of the people in Haiti today still follow the customs their forefathers brought from Africa. Most live on small farms that are tiny plots of land that were once part of large plantations where the ancestors worked as slaves.

A religion called voodoo is practiced by many of the Haitians. It is a blend of both Christian and African beliefs.

Believers in voodoo say that by performing certain rituals a person can become possessed by gods. They believe that a voodoo priest — a man they call a houngan — has certain great powers. The houngan draws designs on the ground with flour and then the people dance until they believe a god has possessed one or more of them.

Haitians believe in many gods, including the gods of rain, love, war and farming.

Voodoo is also called vodun. It is a West African word that means god or spirit. The practice of magic is often included as part of the religious experience. Followers believe in sorcery and fetishes.

Voodooism says that the spirits of people who have died continue to live in a world of ghosts. They also believe that these ghosts can visit the world of the living and that they can either bless or curse the people here.

During a voodoo ceremony, chief magicians bring the living into touch with the dead. A medicine man may go into a trance and then talk with a wooden image, saying that a spirit is answering him through the image.

In the practice of voodoo, a person might make a wax image of one of his enemies. He then may stick pins into the wax image, hoping that with the help of voodooism he will injure his enemy.

Some put voodoo and black magic together. Black magic, often practiced by so-called witches, often attempts to harm certain people.

Many believe that the practice of voodooism and black magic is wrong, and in some societies the practice of these rituals is forbidden. Many believe that it is very wrong to use so-called magical medicines, such as powdered animal horns or teeth and to have a ceremony that hopes to inflict pain and agony on certain people.

Andy sends the book 200 Illustrated Science Experiments to Christine Velis, 13, of Salt Lake City, Utah, for her question:

HOW ARE PING PONG BALLS MADE?

A special machine is used to make the feather-light balls we use to play ping pong, or table tennis. Made of thin celluloid, the ball measures between 4½ inches to 4¾ inches in circumference and weighs just one-tenth of an ounce. The balls are first made in halves but are sealed into the round shape by a special machine.

A British firm registered the table tennis name of ping pong in America in 1901 and soon after sold the rights to Parker Bros. An international organization of players in 1921 adopted the unpatented name table tennis as the official name of the game.

The game was first called miniature lawn tennis when it was originated in 1884. Cork balls were first used; celluloid balls were introduced in 1890.

Do you have a question to Ask Andy? Send it on a post card with your name, age and complete address to Ask Andy in care of The Herald, P.O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006. Entries are open to boys and girls 7 to 17.

OUR BOARDING HOUSE with Major Hoople

SIDE GLANCES by Gill Fox

"I shook it to try to guess what was inside . . . I think it's broken glass!"

Oswald and James Jacoby

Win at bridge

King appears to set 3 NT

Lee Hazen of New York, the general counsel of the ACBL and a player who has won 11 major championships, including four Vanderbilt Cups, is also responsible for some of the finest bridge stories.

Sitting West, he elected to open the nine of spades against South's rather normal three-notrump contract. The queen was played from dummy and East followed with the three spot.

A diamond was led and Lee took his ace. In spite of that discouraging three of spades, Lee saw no reason to try another suit. The game was matchpoints and Lee did not want to help declarer with any problems he might have in hearts and clubs.

He led his eight of spades. The ace was played from dummy and East played the six. Declarer cashed three diamonds while East chucked a couple of clubs. The king of clubs was led next and Lee was on lead once more. He led his last spade!

His partner started to play a card, jumped in shock, put the card back, produced the king of spades, cashed two more spade tricks and apologized to Lee for not seeing the king of spades earlier.

Lee said: "You sure found it at the right time."

David E. Anderson

World of religion

The American public may not really be taking President Carter's notion of an energy crisis — and the consequent need for energy conservation — very seriously.

But a growing number of churches are.

According to the Interreligious Coalition on Energy, made up of Jewish, Protestant and Roman Catholic groups, the energy crisis shows "how far American institutions (including the church and synagogue) have strayed from the Judeo-Christian tradition of stewardship."

It said the "overwhelming majority" of the 330,000 religious buildings in the Untied States "can accurately be described as energy sieves."

AMONG THE leaders in the energy conservation effort is the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, the congregational arm of the Reform movement in organized Judaism.

Three major Protestant denominations have begun arranging for construction of at least four solar heated church buildings as an experiment energy conservation. The three denominations are the American Baptist Churches, the United Methodist Church and the American Lutheran Church.

Board should remain cautious on campus plan

A second campus for Harper College has been a source of discussion and controversy since before the Sept. 27, 1975 referendum authorizing purchase of land for the campus in Arlington Heights.

That referendum succeeded, but during the campaign college officials pledged to study the entire issue further before committing the school to construction of the second campus.

That pledge is even more important today because the college's enrollment, while still growing, did not skyrocket last year as it did earlier.

Despite the less than anticipated growth, the college board has been under increasing pressure in recent months to authorize the second campus. It has so far resisted the urging of the administration to hire an architect for the second campus.

It is clear the college board is doing the right thing in moving slowly on building on the second campus. What the board must now do is ensure that alternatives to the second campus are fully and fairly considered.

In a series of stories this week by Herald reporter Rena Wish Cohen, college administrators from other parts of the country, including Florida, Missouri and North Carolina, discussed alternatives they had found to building traditional second campuses. These alternatives were variously called "colleges without walls" and "open colleges."

Under the alternatives in use elsewhere, facilities such as public schools, churches and libraries were used for classes. Books and audio-visual materials were put in local public libraries.

Harper already is using off-campus facilities for classes. The board should press the college administration to expand such programs. In addition, use of closed elementary schools ought to be considered carefully as a way to provide more space for the college without additional construction.

All involved in the Harper decision must remember that the land for the second campus at Palatine and Schoenbeck roads Arlington Heights will be ready for a second campus anytime in the future. Buying the land in 1975 was a farsighted move by the college.

It is better to let the land wait empty for a while rather than later to be the title holder of a campus that isn't needed.

Youth center progress

Buffalo Grove has been talking about starting a youth center for a long time now.

Every few years someone decides it would be a good idea to give the kids a place of their own, but despite all the good intentions, interest usually wanes before anything is done.

This year may end that pattern. At the urging of village Trustee Robert Bogart and 870 residents who signed petitions, the village board has agreed to spend $20,000 to move a building from Cambridge on the Lake development to a site near village hall for use as a youth center.

This is a good start, but there still is much work to be done before a youth center opens.

Bogart has proposed the formation of seven citizens' committees to work on different phases of the teen center including programming, staffing and funding. Residents should take the time to get involved.

If Buffalo Grove is going to have a successful youth center, it is only going to be through the hard work and interest of its residents.

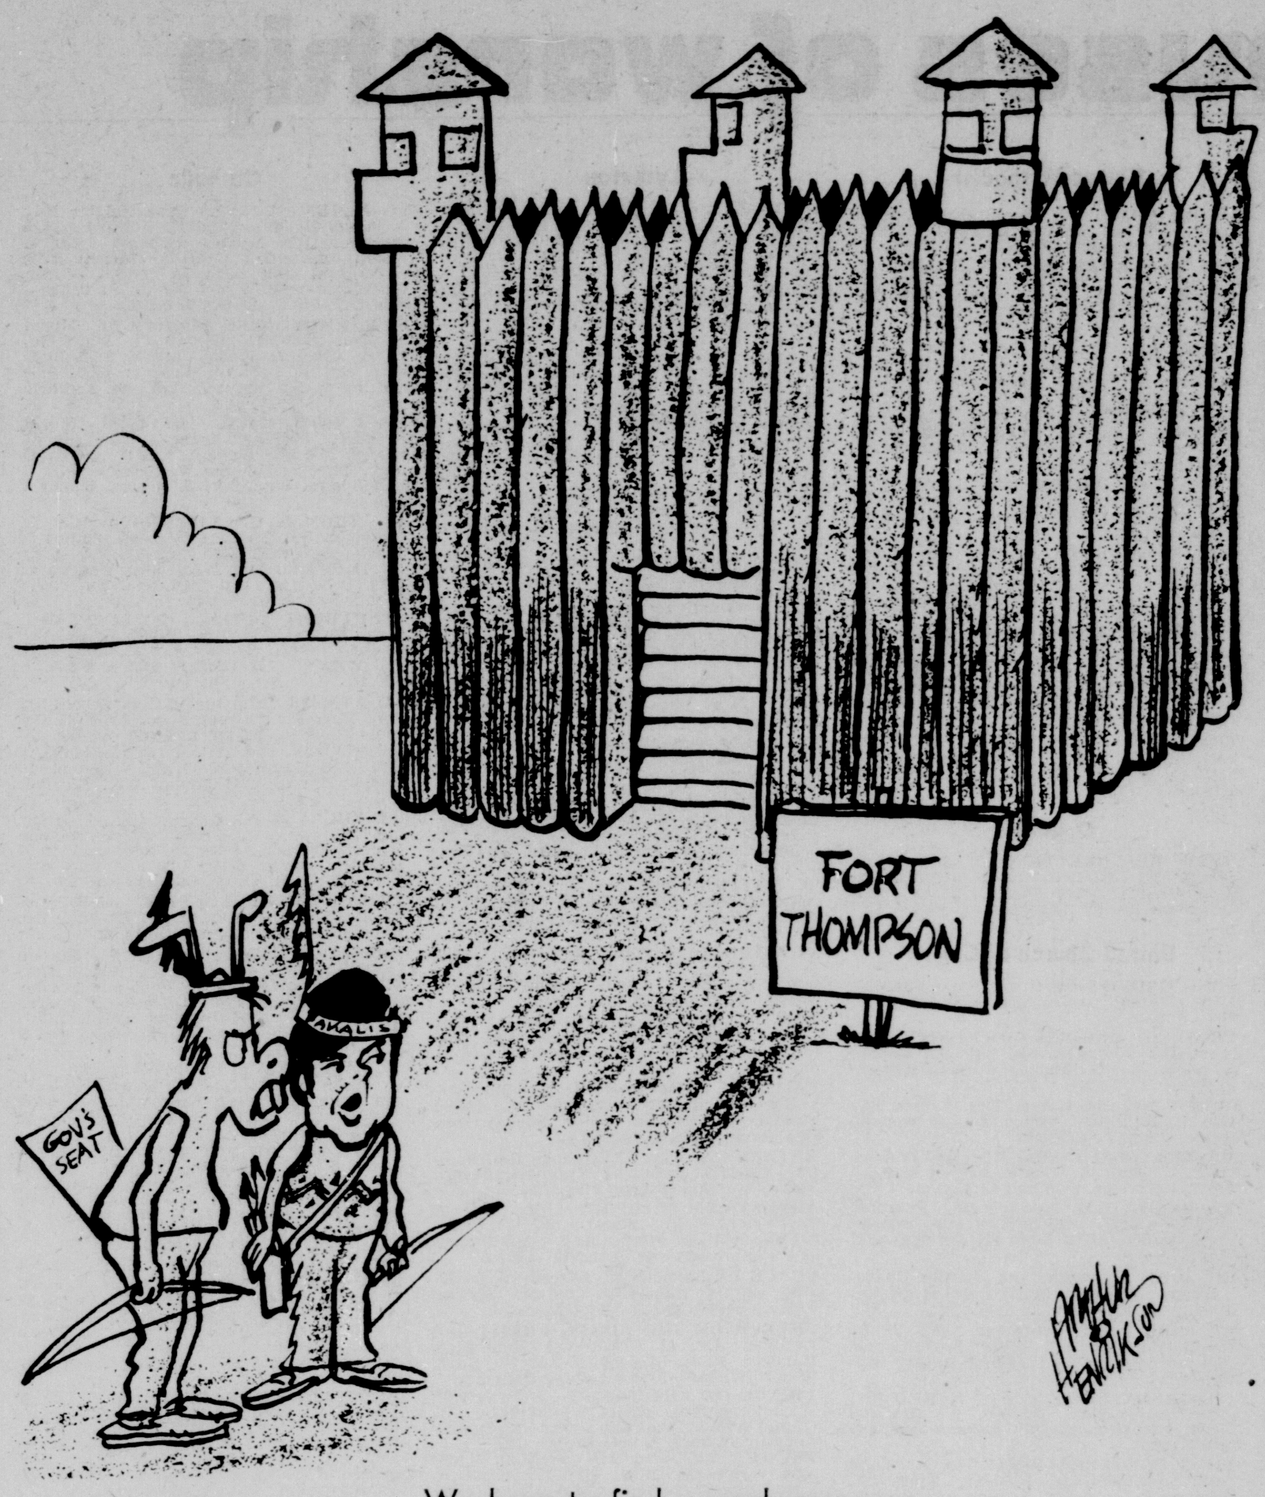
Berry's world



U.S. may send jobs to Ulster

President Carter is planning, despite tactful denials from the White House, to push American money towards Northern Ireland — a distinct change in attitude from the studied American silence of the past which has often been taken as tacit sympathy for the Irish Republican Army.

The Carter initiative, still very much at its formative stage, could be anything from a modest statement encouraging private American investment in the province to a more ambitious dollar-denominated aid program offering real incentives to industry. The single idea would be to create jobs, one of the few necessities upon which both Protestant and Catholic politicans in the province agree. Great care would be taken to see that no partisan political or religious connotations could be put on the program.

The governments in Britain and Ireland have remained surprisingly coy about the idea. They are wrong to do so. America already has the largest slice of foreign investment in Ulster and the jobs that a Carter-inspired program could create would be exactly those the province most needs: modern, profit-making jobs in the private sector. The idea is to suggest investment only in companies "responsive to natural market forces"; exactly not the traditional loss-making industries that are now being propped up in the province.

IN THE PAST a small minority of the 15 million Irish-Americans, backed by a strong folklore, has always shied the United States away from lending what could be considerable assistance to Northern Ireland. President Carter clearly thinks that he can outflank those few who believe in continuing armed struggle in Ireland and win the support of the vast majority who would like to see the administration give positive support to the old country.

In the spring of 1976 Jimmy Carter, the candidate, had little support from the largely urban, northern, Catholic, Irish voters. So he succumbed to folklore, walking down Fifth Avenue in a St. Patrick's day parade with a "Get England out of Ireland" button pinned on his coat. Since then things have changed.

But not because Britian has made the United States the problem it faces in Ulster. It has not. Instead four leading Irish-American politicians, acting as a group, have tried to do the sensible thing. Their progress has been remarkable in swaying public opinion.

IN MARCH Tip O'Neill, the speaker of the House of Representatives, Hugh Carey, governor of New York, and Senators Edward Kennedy and Daniel Patrick Moynihan issued a St. Patrick's day appeal for an end to all private American support for the IRA. In April Carey, speaking in Dublin, called Ulster's terrorists "assassins". By May Kennedy felt confident enough to tell an Ireland Fund dinner in New York: "While the killing in Northern Ireland goes on, let no American have it on his conscience that his effort or his dollars helped to make the violence worse."

By June, the four leaders served a formal notice on Secretary of State Cyrus Vance that they endorsed a peaceful settlement in Ulster. An initiative by Carter is being delayed, however, perhaps until the end of August, until it can be cleared in London and Doublin. Hurry London, hurry Dublin, clear it quick.

The fight for language

New usage shows tin ear

Paul Greenberg

One of the really great things about the American lifestyle is language. Hopefully, its support structures are in place and meeting the felt needs of the people. For the bottom line of creative writing, or of communication arts in general, is making meaningful contributions to consciousness-raising.

In short, the state of the language is not good. Too much of it is like that first paragraph. Horrendous. It's as if the American language has been sandbagged by television and sociology. If H. L. Mencken were yet with us, would he even bother to dissect modern language? Or would he just start calling names from the first?

Non-alarmists will point out that bemoaning the state of the language is a satisfying custom as old as Confucius, yet language lives. After all, writers have been viewing English with alarm at least since Jonathan Swift's day and look what's happened. Yes, look. Compare the King James Bible to the Revised Standard Version, Elizabethan English to computerese and Educanto. It is like comparing a noble ruin to a plastic raincoat.

Perhaps the greatest service rendered by the latest guide to English usage (the Harper Dictionary of Contemporary Usage) is to have inspired a sizzling review in the Times Literary Supplement. That solid appendage of the London Times tries to keep up the old standards, but it's not easy. As the reviewer, Joseph Epstein, would be the first to confess.

EPSTEIN MAY BE a bit persnickety for American tastes (for example, he finds the use of the word Ghetto to describe a slum ideologically unacceptable) but he is in the tradition of H. W. Fowler, that grand old fulminator. And in these times there is even more to fulminate against.

As Epstein puts it: "Tolerance, moderation, sweet reason, everywhere else rightly deemed virtues, have no place in the battle for good usage." He is thoroughly intolerant of sloppiness in language and a delight to nod in agreement with.

Joseph Epstein can speak from a considerable and harrowing experience as a university teacher of English composition. He relates that these days he can give his students the most agglutinated examples of prose, ask for their critique, and gets only "a chill silence."

It is, alas, an accurate reflection of the state of the language. And the state of the language says much about the state of society. His students, for example, no longer seem to distinguish between the words "uninterested" and "disinterested." But he is charitable — and grim — on this score: "Certainly it is difficult to become angry with students who do not know the traditional meaning of disinterested. How can they know it when in their lives they probably have not seen it?"

EVERYONE HAS AN interest in the clarity and meaning of language, although not everyone may realize it. Honest illiteracy and a pretentious semi-literacy seem to slug it out for dominance over what is left of the language. The great danger in denouncing both is that one will be branded as opposed to all change. Opposing any change is no way to preserve the meaning of language, either. For as an Oriental proverb has it, even to preserve things as they are, one must make some changes. It is the character of the change that matters. It is the absence of mind, the tin ear, the mechanical heart of much that is new that offends, not change itself.

To say something new or even something old in a new way . . . that is as welcome as it ever was. But to do it poorly is to lose, in Joseph Epstein's language, "the critical ability to see through others' and one's own deceptions."

They say Dist. 59 board vindictive

Every issue of the Herald proves the old saying that difference of opinion is what makes a horse race. The editorial policy is a splended example of an inflexible point of view. To wit, the present board of education in Elk Grove Twp. Dist. 59 is a strong board, or so states Wandalyn Rice. Also, if a "blue" pencil were applied to the articles written by Sheryl Jedlinski and all the editorial comments removed, there would be little left to publish.

Harold Harvey and his cronies are not a strong board of education. They are merely out for blood. Their attitude, which is supported by the other Herald, is that they have a mandate from the voters. They came in on the tails of an issue, a single issue, unit district. The other supposed horrors they think were elected to solve are no different in 59 than in any other district (reading, writing and arithmetic); complaints about schools to fail to deliver in those areas are universal and reflect on our society more than a local failing.

If Harold and the The Herald were to be honest with the public the issue would be summarized this way: Dr. Bardwell and his staff had the nerve to support unit district; they were not chosen by Harvey et al; they represent a stepping stone to bigger things; they must go. Harold Harvey, if you don't like Dr. Bardwell, why don't you fire him instead of degrade and embarrass him? If he resigns there is no contract to pay off?

Also, why does the Paddock never point out that Harold Harvey may be in conflict of interest? His first responsibility is to his bank, Tollway Arlington National Bank, and its customers. Anything that results in a higher tax can mean bad relations with key bank customers (area businesses). Harold Harvey is serving two masters; one has to come out on the short end of the stick. (It won't be the one that feeds him).

Saul Cohen
Elk Grove Village

MY HAT IS off to Mrs. Zanca, board member of Elk Grove Twp. Dist. 59. She has the courage to tell it like it is. On August 3 The Herald quotes Mrs. Zanca as saying, "Leah (Cummins) was doing her job by promoting the unit district and now they (the four unit district opponents elected to the board in April) are punishing her for it." The article reported that by majority vote the Dist. 59 school board decided to terminate Leah Cummins' job as coordinator of community affairs. It appears that those who opposed the unit district idea cannot tolerate any difference of opinion on this issue. Mrs. Zanca's statement reveals that there is still quite a bit of animosity on this issue.

I suspect that those people deeply involved in defeating the unit district idea in the March referendum are scared stiff because they really pulled a fast one on the voting public and the taxpayers. The issue is clear-cut. Because most of the tax revenue comes from the Dist. 59 area, we would cut ourselves off from the rest of the district and keep all the money for the schools in our immediate area. Those outside the district were not even allowed to vote on this issue, and acceptance of this idea by a referendum vote seemed quite certain. However, some school teachers in Dist. 59 were against this idea, probably because they thought their jobs would be jeopardized. So they used the school children in their classroom (and I do mean used) to send messages to the parents. The propaganda, as silly and incoherent as it was, worked, and the unit school district idea was defeated.

Those responsible for the victory had to prove to themselves that they really had nothing to fear from the voters they had just duped, so they had themselves a victory picnic at the taxpayers expense. In a way I really have to agree with them — we are pretty dumb.

But getting rid of Leah Cummins shows that they are still scared, and maybe when the next school board election comes up, we can show them that we are not so dumb after all.

Edwin J. Kudalis
Mount Prospect

(After stories appeared in The Herald, High School Dist. 214 and the committee which opposed the unit district said they would seek private donations to pay for the picnic Mr. Kudalis refers to.)

Higher taxes hit

Which comes first — the horse or the cart? I had always thought that each taxing body submitted their budget and when all the budgets were added together, from that the tax rate was determined.

If you multiply this year's tax rate by last year's equalized assessed valuation you would find an approximate 9 per cent to 10 per cent increase in your bill. Sounds reasonable in view of the bond issues and referendums we have approved without too much thought.

Divide this year's tax bill by last year's equalized assessed valuation and you will find a tax rate of about 14 per cent. Did we approve of bond issues to increase our tax rate that much?

It is my contention that there is a mistake in the tax rate as set. But how will we ever find out?

In the poetic wasteland with a very bad bard

Dorothy Meyer

Two remarkable things happened last weekend — my daughter was awarded her master's degree and I learned how to write a rotten poem. The first event was most important of course, but I won't dwell on that because nobody wants to listen to a doting mother dote.

However, I became infected by the rotten-poem bug and I intend to spread it around because I hate to suffer alone.

It happened during an ordinary conversation when a professor of one of Marilyn's friends said that a rotten poem followed a strict formula. (If you've read any lousy poetry lately, you may recognize it.) The first line MUST be, "In the (something) of my mind," followed by a line that is a contradictory statement about the five senses. The third line can be about absolutely anything, but the fourth line has to be about the future. And of course, nothing is supposed to rhyme.

WHEN I FIRST heard the formula, I said, "Huh," and Marilyn immediately whipped up an example. It went: "In the vast wasteland of my mind/ I hear the smoke/whatever happened to Baby Jane?/Don't ask me until yesterday comes."

I said, "Ye gods, that's awful," and Marilyn said, "Gee, thanks, Mom."

The more I thought about it, though, the more I realized that I've read some serious poetry in recent years that made about as much sense as Marilyn's impromptu offering.

So I decided to try it.

THINKING about all the garden produce waiting for me at home I rotten-poemed this one: In the Kerr lid of my mind/I see the sound of jars exploding/Tomatoes get stewed but apples are saucier/In the year 2010 I'll be an old lady if possible.

When the professer shuddered and said, "That really stinks," I felt like I'd won a Pulitzer Prize.

Then Marilyn's brothers became afflicted. The bus driver chanted, "In the fare box of my mind/I smell the feeling of a traffic jam/Little old ladies sometimes forget their transfers/Next week I may take up needlepoint."

And the lawn doctor said, "In the landscape of my mind/I hear the sight of broad-leafed plantain/I never promised you a rose garden/But it will probably rain tomorrow anyway."

I COULD HARDLY wait to get home and contaminate my friends, but the first one I talked to was so mad at her husband for vegetating in front of the TV set that she didn't seem to hear a word I said. However, while I was talking about the weather, she suddenly yelled, "In the Big Valley of my mind/I taste Space 1999 reruns/My phone number is Hawaii Five-0/The new TV season starts in September."

Then she smiled and muttered, "Gad, that felt good."

Finally, I tried to infect the boss and after explaining the formula and giving some samples, I suggested he sponsor a rotten poem contest.

HE LOOKED AT me like I had a wart on the end of my nose and said, "You try something like that around here and I'll — ."

In interrupted with, "In the pink slip of my mind," and he said, "You got it, lady."

He'll be sorry when I get to be a rotten-poet laureate.

'48 election fraud was vintage LBJ

Watch on Washington

The recent confession of a former Texas election official is the "smoking gun" testimony that should establish beyond doubt Lyndon B. Johnson's responsibility for the blatant theft of a Senate seat as well as the cover-up of that election fraud.

In the case of Luis Salas, 76, the depth of corroboration for his story of the primary election steal in 1948 and the cover-up has been a matter of public record for nearly 30 years.

There is no reason to doubt these elements of Salas' story:

• THAT SALAS falsely certified 200-odd votes added to Johnson's total after the polls had closed on the orders of George B. Parr, the corrupt and twice-convicted political boss of the Mexican-American area in Duval and Jim Wells counties.

• That on instruction from Parr, Salas was not available for testimony or interviews by law enforcement officials or the representatives of former Texas Gov. Coke Stevbnson in connection with a challenge filed to Johnson's 87-vote Democratic primary victory.

• That Johnson, the beneficiary of the vote fraud, was knowledgeable about the specific 200-vote fraud to assure his victory over Stevenson in the Democratic primary.

In the years since 1948, Texas newspapers and several historians have chronicled massive evidence that a vote fraud did take place in Jim Wells County. They did it despite the successful efforts of Johnson, his campaign manager, John B. Connally, and his lawyer, Abe Fortas, to block a full hearing in the court of United States District Judge T. Whitfield Davidson.

THE PRELIMINARY proceedings established that there were direct witnesses, including two former FBI agents, Kellis Dibrell and Jim Gardner, who said they had reviewed the "corrected" list in Precinct 13 in Jim Wells County. They said 202 names had been added in alphabetic order and in blue ink whereas the original list was in black. They also said the names appeared to be in the same handwriting. There was no challenge

An order from the Jim Wells County attorney barred Dibrell, Gardner or others from photographing the lists or even copying the names on the voting list in Ballot Box 13 which was stored in the vault of a bank owned by Democratic political boss Parr.

A later effort to subpoena the list for copying and preservation revealed that it had disappeared. The explanation given was that a Mexican janitor, not aware of its importance, had dumped it in the wastebasket and burned it.

That list of certified votes was in the custody of Tom Donald, the secretary of the Jim Wells County Democratic executive Committee, who was also an employe in Parr's Texas State Bank in Alice, Tex.

TO GET TO THE bottom of the dispute, Judge Davidson named a master in chancery to summon witnesses to take testimony and subpoena documents. Two of those on his list were Luis Salas, who had certified the list, and Donald, who had insisted on keeping Ballot Box 13 in the Parr bank from which it had disappeared.

On the eve of Judge Davidson's hearings, Washington lawyer and Johnson confidant Abe Fortas persuaded Supreme Court Justice Hugo Black to sign an injunction that barred Judge Davidson from proceeding with the hearing in his Fort Worth court.

Salas remained silent until a recent interview with the Associated Press when he said: "Johnson did not win that election; it was stolen for him. And I know exactly how it was done."

Johnson, a canny political operator, did not keep tape recordings of his devious political shenanigans. Those who tried to track his peripheral involvement in the Billie Sol Estes scandal and the notorious Bobby Baker case learned that Johnson seldom wrote letters or notes of instructions to associates who were obviously acting for him.

It should be no surprise that the LBJ library would release an unsigned, undated memo, which they believed to be in Johnson's handwriting, that was no more than a vague self-serving declaration of innocence.

"I AM WITHOUT knowledge, concerving the ballots in either Duval, Jim Wells or Zapata counties, or any of the other counties in Tesas, except what I have seen in the press," said the statement released by the LJB library.

The low level of Lyndon Johnson's credibility over his entire political career and the efforts he and his political associates made to block a full public hearing in 1948 are further reasons for believing Luis Salas — the repentant participant in a political crime that ranks with Watergate.

Freedom must feel great if so many of us pursue it

by ANTHONY RIPLEY

DENVER, COLO. — It was an ordinary going-home afternoon.

I was thinking about Armageddon, the ultimate battle between the forces of good and evil in which the world is consumed in fire and brimstone.

When I think about Armageddon, I keep having this problem about which side I'm on in the battle. Suppose all my life I am convinced that I'm on the side of good and actually I'm not?

THIS WAS GOING on as I was cruising along Federal Boulevard, up where the erotic massage and dirty movie motels are, and suddenly:

FAP! ROWRRRR! GARRRRRRR-RUNGE!

Two chopped motorcycles whooshed by. The riders leaned well back, feet up, and the wind tattered their hair and beards. They were smirking as though they knew some secret I didn't. It was the kind of smirk that causes housewives to take the kids indoors.

There were no vibrations of anger, no ripples of fear. But they seemed supremely in control of themselves, their machines and the pavement around them.

I wasn't sure what side they'd be on during Armageddon and I also wasn't sure what it was that made them look so strange and cocky. I hadn't seen men like them on the street in a long time.

The motorcycle helmet law had been repealed and for the first time in years, there were real people out there on the street driving real motorcycles.

The machine people with the round plastic heads are gone. Abstractions have suddenly come alive and there is flesh and bone astride the bikes.

It was safer for the bikers in the helmets. But should the state of Colorado interfere in our lives and force us to be safe? The General Assembly hovered over that question for a bit and finally said, "No, the state should not force you to be safe." They were right. The governor let it become law without his signature.

We speak of freedom but we are slaves to safety. We want a safe job, a safe car, a safe place to raise the kids. But the life of a free man is not safe. Life for him is a gamble. And when you gamble, you must be willing to lose, though you always hope to win.

FREEDOM IS A burden, a danger and a risk. So perhaps many think it is a reasonable trade. But without freedom, life is a heartbreaking grayness, flat and empty.

All this was tumbling through my mind so I leaned out my car window and shouted to the man with the greasy hair on the Kawasaki.

"FREEDOM MUST feel great. You know, no helmet," I said, pointing to my head to show what I meant.

"What? I can't hear you," he said and cupped his ear.

"I said freedom's great, isn't it?"

I think he thought I was a drunk. He gunned his machine and took off.

I guess philosophy has its limitations.

Carter's human rights policy just a bit too pushy

by PAT M. HOLT

The more President Carter talks about human rights as a fundamental part of his foreign policy, the more he sounds like he is making it an evangelical crusade. This is bad, because it has been evangelism — or dogmatism, if you will — that has produced some of the most grievous mistakes in American foreign policy.

William McKinley explained his decision to take the Philippines as the result of divine guidance "to uplift and civilize and Christianize" them. The results have not been particularly happy, either for the Filipinos or for ourselves.

Woodrow Wilson explained his Mexican policy as being to teach the Mexicans to live with the results of their elections, no matter how many interventions it took. This is the lineal intellectual ancestor of a policy which, 50 years later, said in effect that the Vietnamese were going to be free and democratic if it killed us.

FRANKLIN ROOSEVELT abjured negotiation and insisted on unconditional surrender in World War II. This prolonged the war and increased the destruction of Germany and Japan, which we later rebuilt at great cost.

Now comes Jimmy Carter to explain, to thunderous applause, the relationship between his Southern heritage and his commitment to human rights. He mentioned deep religious feelings of the Bible Belt and the thought that, in the year after the Bicentennial, "we ought to stand for something" in the tradition of Jefferson. Although denying that he is trying to change foreign governments, Carter finds that the yearning for freedom is worldwide. He goes on to relate his human rights policy, by implication anyway, to a guilt feeling over the treatment of blacks in the South.

THERE ARE SEVERAL disturbing aspects in all of this. In the first place, it sounds like the kind of zealousness that has gotten us in trouble before. It has echoes of Wilson's crusade to make the world safe for democracy when what we ought to be attempting is, as John Kennedy put it, to make the world safe for diversity.

In the second place, there is osme doubt as to how worldwide the yearning for freedom really is. One does not have to abandon his sympathy for Soviet dissidents to point out that they are, so far as we know, a minority of the population. And one also may question whether the suffering masses of the third world would rather have the U.S. Constitution's Bill of Rights or a square meal.

In the third place, if Carter is not trying to change governments with his human rights policy, what is he trying to do? He may not be trying to change the makeup of governments, but he is certainly trying to change the way they manage their own affairs.

Finally, it is a grievously simplistic mistake to try to transfer the lessons of America's own peculiar and shameful racial experience to other parts of the world.

It is none of America's business how other countries organze themselves for the conduct of their own affairs. It is America's business what kind of relations we have with them.

There is a middle way between turning out backs on the rest of the world and trying to make it over in our own image. But this is the way which the Carter administration seems not to have found. And it's making disconcerting noises that it's not even looking for it.

Son of Sam under 24-hour guard

Psychiatric tests for Berkowitz

by RON CLAIBORNE

NEW YORK (UPI)—David Berkowitz, the self-confessed .44-caliber killer known as "Son of Sam," Friday began undergoing a battery of psychiatric tests to determine if he can be held criminally responsible for the ambush murders of six young men and women in the last year.

Officials said Berkowitz, 24, would spend at least the next two weeks locked in "Spartan" quarters in G building at Kings County Hospital in Brooklyn as psychiatrists begin probing his thoughts in conversations and formal tests. Guards watch him through a reinforced glass panel in a door.

"I'll try to engage the man in conversation and as the conversation flows, that is how it will go," Daniel Schwartz, director of forensic psychiatry, said Friday.

"IT WILL BE my function to ascertain whether or not he understands what is going on, if he is criminally responsible for his act . . . whether he can assist in his defense," Schwartz said, adding the tests would take about two weeks.

Schwartz refused to say what, if any, discussion he has had with the accused killer.

At the same time Friday, old friends of the suspected killer told of how Berkowitz underwent a vast transformation in the Army, casting off his conservative upbringing to espouse radical left-wing groups and experimenting with LSD and other drugs.

"He was in Korea for a year or so and he used to tell us how heavily into dope he was," said Paul Billow, 25, a security officer at Saginaw (Mich.) Valley College who knew Berkowitz in the Army at Fort Knox, Ky.

"WHEN I FIRST met him in 1973," Billow said, "he was a Jesus Freak," having renounced his adoptive parents' Judaism and becoming a Baptist. "Where he was outgoing and a source of laughs, he became sullen and reclusive. He didn't want to get involved in anything."

Billow also said he believed Berkowitz had a "hang-up" about women, particularly those with dark hair, because of his experiences in Korea.

"He'd talk about how liberal the Korean girls were about sex and that," Billow said. "He'd tell us how they'd just come up to him on the streets and proposition him. I think all but the last of his victims had black hair. Maybe these girls (his victims) taunted him somehow."

Berkowitz, who is under 24-hour-a-day guard, was completely isolated Friday in a room large enough for three beds and a toilet. Two barred windows look out to the street and another wing of the hospital where Son of San's last victim, 20-year-old Robert Violante, lies virtually blinded from a .44-caliber bullet fired into the left side of his head last July 31.

ONE HOUR A day, Schwartz said, Berkowitz is allowed into the day room of the prison ward, either before or after the other inmates have been there, where he can watch television.

Thursday night, a band of about five youths stood outside the hospital chanting, "We want Sam." They were briefly detained. Other citizens called the hospital demanding to avenge Sam's year-long reign of terror.

DAVID BERKOWITZ

Meanwhile, a special Brooklyn grand jury convened for two hours Friday to consider an indictment against Berkowitz, a stocky Army veteran with a sharpshooter's medal, in the death of 20-year-old Stacy Moskowitz and the near blinding of Violante.

Police sources have said Berkowitz, an adopted child with apparently no love life, has admitted he is the .44-caliber gunman who terrorized New York City for more than a year, starting a manhunt larger than those for London's Jack the Ripper and the Boston Strangler.

We called him Berk, recalls Army clerk

that during the three months we worked pretty closely together," she said. "There is no way I would have known whether he had been on any kind of drugs."

SHE DESCRIBED Berkowitz as an efficient worker who "knew his job well" at the headquarters of the 8th Battalion, 4th Training Brigade, a unit no longer in existence.

"It involved quite a bit of paperwork, setting up for graduations of trainees and things like that," Mrs. Heaberlin said. "He was so shy it took a while to get to know him. But then as I got to know him better he seemed to have a pretty good sense of humor.

"Altogether, we had a clerical staff of about eight in battalion headquarters and he just fit right in with everybody else. We called him 'Berk.' "

She said she first found out on a radio newscast about her former colleague's arrest on suspicion of being New York's dreaded ".44-caliber killer".

"But I couldn't be sure it was him until I saw him on TV," she said. "From the pictures they showed on TV, his hair is longer now than it was in the Army and he has put on quite a bit of weight. But I recognized him immediately."

Young to speak Oct. 1 at local Dems meeting

Andrew Young

Andrew Young, the freewheeling and outspoken U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, will make his first appearance in the Chicago area Oct. 1 as the guest of the Evanston Township Democratic Organization.

Young will be at a party fund-raising event and deliver what Evanston Township Democratic Committeeman Thomas Fuller described as "Ambassador Young's first public political speech."

A cocktail party, limited to 200 persons, will begin at 6:30 p.m. A dinner at the Orrington Hotel in Evanston will begin at 8 p.m.

TICKETS FOR THE Evanston Township Democratic Organization's cocktail party are $20. Dinner tickets are $40.

Fuller said efforts to secure the controversial Young have been going on for several months. "We are very pleased he's coming and have had requests from a lot of other areas to have Ambassador Young 'stop by,' " Fuller said.

Fuller did not know the subject of Young's Oct. 1 speech.

The 45-year-old Young has been very controversial since President Carter announced his appointment as U.N. ambassador last December.

AT ONE POINT Young characterized Presidents Ford, Nixon, Kennedy, Johnson and Lincoln as "racist in some ways," explaining later that he meant they "had no understanding of the problems of colored peoples anywhere."

Young said the New York City blackout in July was an invitation to looters. "If you turn lights out, folk will steal especially if they're hungry," he said.

Young was the first black congressman to be elected from the Deep South in modern times and he was the first black to accept a cabinet level appointment from Carter.

He made several visits to Africa soon after becoming ambassador and was soon embroiled in controversy over white rule in Rhodesia and South Africa.

IN APRIL, Young charged that Britain had institutionalized racism "more than anyone else in the history of the earth" but later apologized for unfairly singling out Britain.

He has called the presence of Cuban Communists in Angola a "stabilizing" influence and said that Americans should not be paranoid about Communism.

Despite critics' suggestions that Young should resign, Carter has continued to stand behind Young.

A computer does it

Pure water from garbage

by JAMES LAWRENCE

BOULDER, Colo. (UPI) — Binx Selby has invented a computer the size of a textbook he claims puts into action all the talk about recycling sewage and garbage into drinking water.

Selby, 34, also boasts his recycled water not only meets federal standards, but far exceeds the quality of drinking water in any city in the country.

"It's been tested by the Environmental Protection Agency and compared to water supplies of dozens of municipalities around the nation," said Selby, who also heads a successful word-processing computer firm in Boulder. "Through all of the tests, we always came out on top."

SELBY'S PROPOSAL is one of about 130 submitted since last fall to the federal Office of Water Research and Technology under a new program autorizing government funding of water re-use projects, according to Robert MaDancy, head of the OWRT in Washington. He said a final decision on the proposal will be made soon.

Selby also is seeking state funds from several states. He wants to use the federal and state grants for a 20-home demonstration of his system.

"Our water is absolutely crystal clear and 100 per cent pure," Selby said. "In fact, because of its purity there are no minerals, which gives it a bland taste. But we're thinking of adding calcium to it to remedy the flatness."

His water recycling system, designed for household use, consists of a module tank the size of a compact car, Selby said. The tank is positioned outside a dwelling and attached by nance.
pipes. He said it can be replenished with rain water by attaching a dwelling's roof gutter to the tank.

THE SYSTEM operates through the use of a 12-inch long microprocessor which monitors and analyzes the quality of the waste water as it moves through several stages of purification.

"The end product is 100 per cent pure water, which is better than that found in most municipalities, and even bottled water," said Connie Wex, the firm's marketing director.

The tiny computer is capable of shutting down the system if any malfunctions are detected and automatically informs a nearby service center of the problem through use of the dwelling's telephone system, Selby said.

Mrs. Wex said the system, feasible only in developments of at least 20 homes, also is monitored by the service center where trouble calls are received. The center services the units twice a year to remove accumulated solids and perform normal mainte-

THE SYSTEM requires an initial 500 gallons of water. Selby said it will sell for $5,000 when marketed by his 18-month-old firm, Purecycle.

He first became interested in water recycling while studying at the University of Colorado where he graduated 10 years ago as a biochemistry major. He developed his system over the past seven years.

Selby's application is for two grants of $96,564 each from the federal government and the Four Corners Regional Commission, made up of Colorado and adjacent states, for the demonstration project — installation of the system in 20 households in Steamboat Springs, Colo., for a nine-month period.

Ms. Wex said Purecycle is principally interested in serving households rather than industry and cities because the firm's sterilization system uses an ultra violet process. Industrial waste is more difficult to recycle and the effectiveness of ultra violet sterilization would be significantly reduced with city water because of its constant movement, she said.

"DOMESTIC sewage is a lot easier to clean, even more so than salt water," she said. "And besides, use of our system by households gives local officials the opportunity to direct growth and solve their expansion problems."

Ms. Wex said the recycling system can be retro-fitted to homes but the company is aiming its sales market at housing developers who work with cities with restricted growth due to a shortage or poor quality of water supplies.

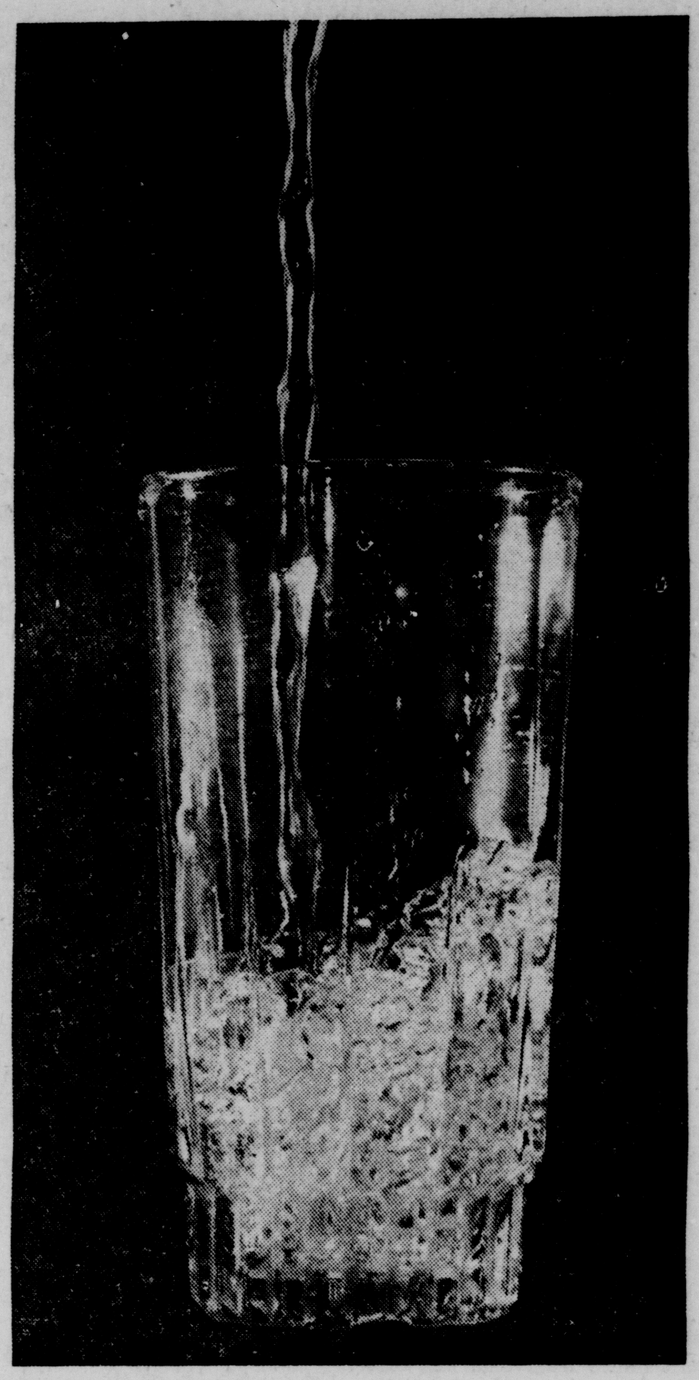
She said the system also could be used to quickly establish military installations without regard to polluted local water supplies or the expense of building a waste water treatment plant.

Selby envisions use of the recycling system's computer for other household functions.

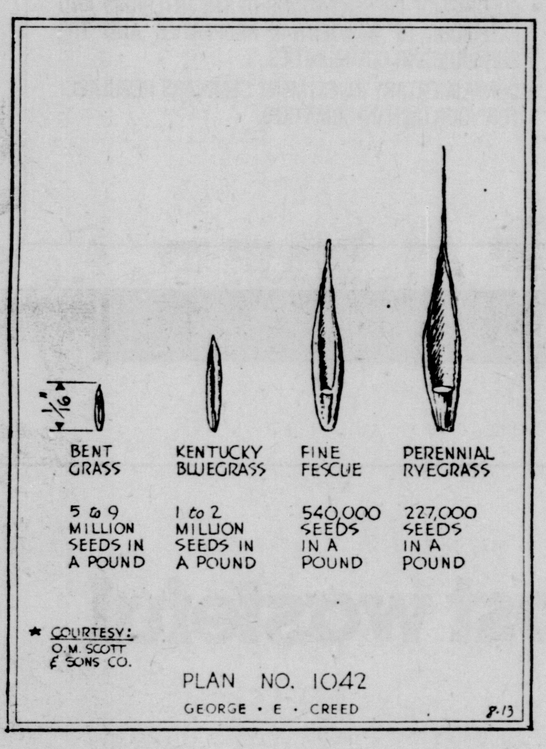
"SINCE IT ALREADY can automatically dial up the service center when a problem occurs, we're thinking of using it to monitor fires in the home, turn lights on and off while you're away . . . and so on."

Ms. Wex said the recycling system could lead to innovative housing developments because straight streets no longer would be needed for sewer lines, thus freeing developers to build dwellings in clusters.

"A whole new way of living could result from our recycling system," she said.



CLEAR, CLEAR WATER. A Colorado man says his system for recycled water meets all federal standards. He's hoping for state and federal funds that will enable him to set up a demonstration project.



Finest grass seed best for fall planting

by George E. Creed

There are many good reasons why early autumn is the best time of the year for lawn making and lawn repair. During the season from the middle of August to the middle of October the soil is usually workable, topsoil is obtainable and warm days and cool nights are favorable for grass growth. Seed planted at this time has a long enough growing period to become well established before the advent of freezing temperatures.

Autumn planted grass also has two other advantages: one is that it has little competition from annual weeds. These have flowered, produced seed and are on their way out. The other advantage is that healthy grass with strong root systems is in prime condition to compete with and to crowd out weeds that germinate in the spring.

When you plant your lawn this fall or rehabilitate it, be sure to use only the finest grass seed obtainable. When you consider that the labor involved in preparing a lawn prior to seeding and the seeding and after-care account for the major cost in making a lawn, it doesn't make much sense to buy cheap grass seed.

What do you get for your money when you buy grass seed at a bargain? You can determine this for yourself by comparing the information shown on a package of low cost seed with that printed on a container of equal weight of high grade seed. Size of seed is one important factor in judging what you are actually buying. Note on the sketches that the smallest of the grasses shown is bent grass. In a pound there are five to nine million seeds whereas with the large perennial rye grass one pound contains only 227,000 seeds. This means that if you buy a pound of grass seed with a high proportion of rye grass or fescue you will get what seems like a lot of seed because of the greater volume occupied by the larger seeds. In other words, you will receive a big package that may not contain enough of the kind of seed you want for your lawn.

You can learn much about the contents of a package of grass seed by reading the seed label. This label reveals several important facts about the contents that should help you evaluate the quality of the seed.

Besides telling you the proportions of the various kinds of grasses included in the package, it will give you the percentage of seeds that will germinate, the weed seed content expressed as a percentage and the percentage of inert materials (chaff, corn cobs, broken seed, sand). The latter are fillers and have no value whatsoever — but they do make a package larger.

Q. Does the privet you see in so many hedges ever bloom?

A. Yes, it has white flowers resembling those of the lilac. It will not bloom, of course, if it is pruned frequently.

Q. Is there any satisfactory way to stake peonies so that they don't collapse after a heavy rainfall?

Summer can last all year

Mary B. Good

Potting shed

Wouldn't it be great if summer lasted all year long? You can carry summer into fall and winter by drying homegrown flowers.

Check your flower beds to see what plants are suitable. Statice, strawflowers, celosia, acroclinium, bells of Ireland, Chinese lantern, lunaria, globe amaranth, daisies, delphinium, marigold and larkspur are most popular for dried arrangements because they dry naturally. And don't overlook the roadside weeds such as goldenrod, cattail, wild grasses, Queen Anne's lace, especially if you don't have any good garden prospects.

DURING AUGUST and September most flowers should be at their best for drying. Don't wait too long to pick them, as older flowers may tend to shatter when dried. They should be picked just before their prime. Exceptions are acroclinium and globe amaranth, which should be picked r'de anaranth, which should be picked when the flowers are fully mature. Natural stems may be left intact on these two.

Strawflowers are perfect for drying when the lower two to four rows of petals are open. Select flowers in graduated sizes for more variety.

Statice is a florist's standby, and if you planted it, you're fortunate in having one of the easiest and most foolproof varieties to handle and arrange.

Lunaria, also called honesty or money plant, with its papery, disc-shaped seed pods is usually ready to pick the second summer after planting. Remove the seed husks and the inner, papery lunaria is ready for use.

Spikes of bells of Ireland have sharp spines, so have a knife handy or wear glove sto strip off thorns.

CHINESE LANTERNS TURN a vivin orange-red in autumn. Pick them when the lower lanterns have changed color and dry them in a vase.

Perfect timing in picking different flowers comes from trial and error. The most important thing to remember is to pick flowers on a dry day, when there is no dew or moisture on the flowers or leaves.

Remove all leaves from the stems of flowers you want to dry. In most cases, with the exception of acroclinium, globe amaranth and Chinese lanterns, remove all but a one-inch stem on each flower head.

Pick up a couple dozen wires and green floral tape from your local florist. Insert a piece heavyweight 22 gauge wire into each head, but no so far as to show. The purpose of the wire is to make the stem flexible so it can be bent at any angle for arranging. Wind floral tape around the base of the flower, catching the one-inch stem and wire.

FASTEN THE FLOWERS into small bunches by twisting a wire-tie loosely around the stems, and hang upside-down to air-dry in a darkened, well ventilated room.

Wire coat hangers or a clothesline is convenient for suspending bunches. Drying time varies from a few days to two weeks or so. The faster the flowers dry, the better their colors stay. Flowers can be stored for later arranging, in labeled, ventilated boxes in a cool spot or used right away.

Many other plants such as asters, roses, zinnias, calendulas, carnations, pansies, dahlias, mums can be dried, but they need to have the moisture removed from their petals by setting in a box of silica gel or equal parts of household borax and cornmeal.

FLOWER-DRYING KITS which include helpful booklets on processing summer blooms for drying are available in the Burpee Fall Gardening and Gift Catalog or your local garden center may carry such kits under a variety of trade names, such as "Flower-Dri."

Permanent bouquets from your flower beds are a lovely way to preserve the memory of your summer all winter long. +

Plants can use a good vacation

Houseplants, like people, benefit from a good vacation.

A home gardening coordinator says a plant sitter is the best solution for plants whose owners will be away. Second best, and still good, is the bathtub, if the bathroom gets enough sunlight.

Barbara Voigt-Boltes, an extension specialist at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Institute of Agriculture Natural Resources, recommends setting potted plants on boards supported by bricks in the tub. Run cool water to within one inch below the bottom of the plants to provide humidity without endangering the root systems.

Plants should be all right for 10 days or so with this arrangement, she said. For longer periods, she recommends the same setup, with one addition: wicks made of old clothesline cord. Cut them long enough to allow an inch inside the pot through a drainage hole and at least one or two inches reaching into the water.

"Let the plant dry out and then carefully remove it from the pot," she said. Fray both ends of each cord, stick one end through a drainage hole and dangle the other in the water.

Ms. Voight-Boltes said this system keeps plants at a constant level of moisture. It works well for about three weeks and is best for larger plants, she said.

Another alternative: greenhouses made by draping plastic bags over plants. To avoid rot, she advises against too much watering to begin with, and keeping plants away from too much sunshine to prevent their baking.

For short vacations, she suggests simply grouping plants in one area where they will absorb moisture from one another and won't dry out as quickly.

Get rid of the most wasteful part of your air conditioner.

The dirt inside.

Save with regular cleaning.
Your air conditioner does more than just cool. It cleans, too, by filtering dust and dirt out of the air. After awhile, the dirt builds up on the filter, and clogs the air flow. This makes the unit work harder. And that costs you money. Take a few minutes to get rid of that dirt and you'll hold down your operating costs.

How to clean window-unit filters.
Check your owner's manual for specific instructions. If you don't have one, do the following. Pull the plug, and remove the front panel. Lift out the filter and vacuum it. If your filter is made of a spongelike material, wash it in warm water and detergent. Then let it dry, and put it back in place.

How to clean central-unit filters.
Your central cooling system has a filter, too, usually in the blower section of the indoor unit. Before opening the access panel, turn off the power. If the filter is reusable, vacuum it. If it's washable, wash it. If you have a throw-away filter, or your filter is too dirty to clean, replace it with a new one of the same size and material (note arrow on side of filter indicating direction of air flow).

If your heating and cooling system has an electronic air filter, be sure to follow the cleaning and maintenance procedures recommended by the manufacturer.

Get professional help when necessary.
Occasionally, your air conditioner's condenser coil, refrigerant charge, or motor may need attention from a qualified serviceman. Maintenance of these parts may be best left to the professional.
Remember: the less energy you waste, the more money you save. And a clean air conditioner can save you plenty.

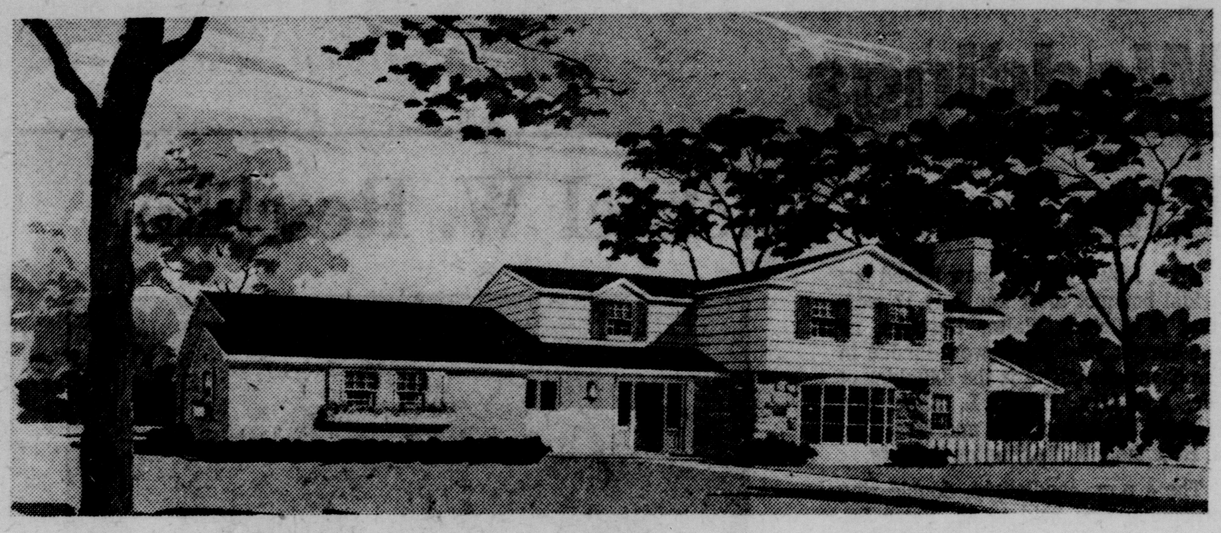
Overhang style remains popular



This type of exterior design was popular in the 1940's and was used only on the large homes of the very affluent. Today, this size home is considered rather modest and yet the general design has retained its popularity. A particular characteristic is the forward projecting center section, two stories in height with the upper story overhanging the first with a baywindow under the projection.

Actually, this is a combination of a one and two-story home with the two-story portion being located over the library, living room and foyer only. The exterior gives the impression the house actually is a full two-story one.

Utilizing the forward-projecting master bedroom, a covered porch is formed to create a recessed front entrance over 16 feet wide. It places the proper design emphasis where it belongs.

THE REAR-LOCATED two-car garage completes the lefthand one-story wing and adds bulk to this side as well as hiding the garage.

Inside, a 9x11 foot foyer leads, by its various accesses, to the living room, library, master bedroom, family room, upstairs and the garage. A guest powder room is just outside the foyer—private, but easily accessible from the library, living room, family room, garage and basement.

The living room is the sunken type and has a conversation niche built-in near the fireplace. From the inside it appears to resemble a bay window seat. French doors lead out to a 17-foot long side porch. (Architect's sketch shows these details.)

The combination family room—kitchen is 28 feet long and connects to the dining room as well as to the rear service porch.

THE MASTER bedroom, on the first floor, enjoys a wing of its own, with the ultimate in privacy. It has its own bathroom with shower and adjoins the separate lavatory.

On the second floor are two additional large bedrooms, one with a bay window seat. Both have large walk-in closets.

A hall bath is located close by in the bedroom foyer and is flanked by two linen closets. The stairway has two windows which provide natural light by day.

Traffic circulation throughout the house is first class and closet storage is abundant.

Exterior materials are clapboards, brick, stone surrounding the library and a panel of stucco at the front entrance.

Buyers like single level

The convenience of single level living in a well-planned floor plan made the Woodmar one of the most popular models at Brookside, a single family home community in Streamwood being offered by Residential Development Group, Inc.

According to Jim Morgan, sales representative for Brookside, many buyers find that the placement of the third bedroom between living and sleeping areas of the home gives them a desirable option to use this room as a den or study.

"Our buyers are generally young," he said. "They don't necessarily need a third bedroom immediately. The idea of having a room they can adapt as their lifestyle changes appeals to them. We also have buyers who have a growing family now and need three bedrooms, but see the room as a future den when some of the children are no longer living at home."

THE WOODMAR, priced from $58,900, has been popular enough to have sold out in the first two phases of Brookside.

Another attraction of the home is the 17-foot family room with convenient entrances to the attached two-car garage, the backyard through sliding glass doors and to the kitchen and foyer.

"The traffic flow in this home is very good," Morgan said. "From the foyer, you enter family room, dining room, kitchen and living room. . .or go down the hall to the bedrooms, without crossing another room."

The home has a 16-foot living room with double windows, a formal dining room, large kitchen with breakfast bar entrance into the family room. There is an attached two-car garage and the family room is available with a woodburning fireplace.

The other two models at Brookside are the Glendale, a raised ranch with three bedrooms, listed from $61,500, the Windsor, a tri-level three-bedroom home priced from $63,750, and the Exmoor, a two-story three-bedroom home priced from $61,500.

ALL BROOKSIDE models include the following features in the basic cost of the home: wall-to-wall shag carpeting, stained mahogany trim, doorbell chimes, insulated tempered glass patio doors with screens, light fixtures, baths with ceramic tile bath areas and wood vanities with cultured marble tops. Kitchens have continuous clean electric oven and range, built-in dishwasher and garbage disposer, exterior vented range hood and fan, double bowl stainless steel sink and wood cabinetry. All homes have utility rooms, attached two-car garages, outside post lights, concrete driveways and service walks and textured wood or aluminum siding in a variety of exteriors and color combinations.

To reach the models, take the Northwest Tollway and exit at Barrington Road south. GosouthonBar-Northwest Tollway and exit at Barrington Road south. Go south on Barrington to Bode Road and turn west (right). Go three and a half blocks on Bode to the Brookside entrance.

The doctor says

Reader seeks advice to cope with angina

I went to my family doctor with chest pains and he took a cardiogram and said I have angina pectoris. Will you explain what this is? I was off work for five weeks and when I returned and exert myself the symptoms are still there. After I rest for a while they disappear. Is this angina pectoris a permanent heart disease or could a person overcome this?

I've had a high cholesterol and fat lipids but have been on a low fat diet for several years. Has this anything to do with this disease? Also, I cannot breathe cold air. When I first had this we still had cold weather and when I was outside in brisk air, my throat seemed to constrict and cut off my breathing. I've had to wear a mask so I could go out in the cold.

What can I do to overcome this angina pectoris, if anything? I am 49 and too young to be tied down. I have been an active person all my life and can't get used to the idea that I can't do everything I would like to do.

Strictly speaking, angina pectoris means strangulation of the breastbone — describing the sensation that many people have with the dull oppressive pain in the center of the chest.

It is caused by inadequate blood flow to the heart muscle. The blood flow is usually restricted because of a buildup of fatty-cholesterol deposits in the arteries to the heart muscle. These are often associated with a high blood cholesterol level or high levels of other blood fats and with high blood pressure.

The pain occurs when you exert yourself because that is when your heart has to increase its workload. At rest you have enough blood flow through those clogged arteries to nourish your heart muscle and supply oxygen. When the oxygen demands go up re quiring an increase in circulation, this just is not possible. Hence, you get pain when you exert too much and the pain goes away when you rest.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 2-10, Heart Attack, Myocardial Infarction, Angina Pectoris, to give you a more complete understanding of your problem. These disorders resulting from fatty-cholesterol deposits are the most common cause of death in our population. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it.

The condition usually persists until you either decrease the work of the heart or there is some improvement in circulation to the heart muscle. The latter is not always possible. We do have small blood vessels in the heart muscle that will open and help some.

You can help by decreasing the work of the heart. That is best done through eliminating any extra body fat you have. The less you weigh the easier it will be for you to walk and not exert yourself.

Cold weather is known to trigger angina attacks. Walking into a cold wind is particularly bad. Patients with heart disease should bundle up properly and protect the chest and throat area in cold weather. It is a reflex mechanism. The cold air going into the lungs can also trigger the attack.

If your blood pressure is high, lowering it, and loss of fat helps to do that, will also decrease the attacks.

Dr. Lamb answers representative letters of general interest in his column. Write to him in care of Paddock Publications, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Trick those pesky ants with powdered cloves

Dear Roberta: How can I get rid of big black ants in the house? R. H. Geckler.

Let's hope these are a variety of harmless, however pesky, ants — and not carpenter ants, which can excavate soft or rotting wood around your house or porch. For those you'd need professional extermination. For various other ants, there are numerous effective commercial and homemade poisons, but I don't recommend laying these out where there are children or pets. Some nonpoisonous home remedies work well, too. If you can find the ant nest outside by watching their travels, a kettle of boiling water poured over it will finish off that colony. What I do is sprinkle a thin line of powdered cloves across the window sill and door threshold, behind the kitchen sink and back of the countertop. If it's another room that's attracting them, no reason you can't use the same trick there.

Dear Roberta: Crows ate up our cherries, and rabbits got the berries. Every year the neighborhood kids grab the pears, but that's okay as we don't much like that fruit. We would like to enjoy our grapes this year. How do we stop the birds and bees I don't know. Does anyone have an answer for Mrs. Stillman?

Dear Roberta: My recipe box runneth over. How do you keep your recipes organized, and newspaper clips from falling apart? — Norma Colt.

I paste clippings, or type recipies on six by nine index cards, scissored slightly to fit into stackable plastic shoe boxes. This size card is easier to handle than smaller ones. Frequently I fit two similar recipes side-by-side, and then select the best features of each in preparing a dish. By the way, household tips can be filed the same way.

Weddings

Kim Shaw — Michael W. Reschke

When Kim Patricia Shaw tossed her bridal bouquet after her July 17 wedding to Michael Walter Reschke, no one caught it — the flowers landed in the chandelier. Kim is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin L. Shaw and Michael the son of Mr. and Mrs. Don J. Reschke, all of Arlington Heights.

The 4 p.m. candlelight, double ring ceremony was held in St. Peter Lutheran Church, Arlington Heights. Kim wore a polyester organza gown trimmed in pearl clusters and lace. A mantilla veil with matching lace framed her face and she carried a cascade of pink bridal roses, orchids, stephanotis and baby's breath.

Maid of honor Sharon Weiss, Saginaw, Mich., was in an ice blue floral print halter dress with a matching organza jacket. She carried pink bridal roses, snowflake mums, blue baby's breath and ivy streamers.

Robin Shaw, Kim's sister; Donna Reschke, the groom's sister; Cathy Lemke, Schaumburg, and Sue Eisenhuth, Champaigne, were bridesmaids and were gowned like the maid of honor. They carried nosegays of pink bridal roses, snowflake mums and blue baby's breath.

ANGELA LORD, a cousin from Wheaton, 5, was flower girl. She wore an ice blue dress and carried a bird cage basket and pink roses, white mums and blue baby's breath. Kevin Shaw, 9, Kim's brother, was ring bearer.

Mr. and Mrs. Michael W. Reschke

Michael's brother, Glenn, Hamburg, Mich., was best man. Tom Patterson, Houston, Tex., Kim's brother, Keith, Bob Lemke Schaumburg, and Don Nolimal, Cicero, also served the groom.

Following the nuptials, a reception for 200 guests was held at Casa Royale, Des Plaines. The couple took a two-week honeymoon in the Pocono Mountains, Niagara Falls, Canada and Michigan.

Kim, a graduate of Hersey High School, expects to work as a dental assistant in Champaign, where Michael, a graduate of Arlington High and Northern Illinois University in DeKalb, will attend law school at the University of Illinois. The newlyweds are living in Champaign.

Dawn Olson-Eric Loewe

A couple who met while attending Rockford College, Dawn Berann Olson and L. Eric Loewe, were married July 16 and are now making their home in Evanston.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Olson, Wheeling, Dawn and Eric, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. Loewe, Freeport, Ill., were married in Long Grove's United Church of Christ in a 3:30 p.m. double ring service.

Dawn is a graduate of Wheeling High and is now employed by Allstate Insurance, Northbrook. Eric is a law student at Rockford College.

AN ORGANZA gown trimmed in Venise lace was Dawn's choice in wedding gown. Her floral headpiece was designed to match her bouquet of white mums, carnations and roses with yellow roses and baby's breath.

Kimberly Olson was her sister's only attendant, and Dan Mattingly, Freeport, was the groom's attendant. Kim wore a yellow dotted Swiss gown and carried yellow carnations and white rose buds with baby's breath. Her headpiece also matched her bouquet.

Before leaving on a honeymoon in northern Michigan, Dawn and Eric were greeted by 50 guests at a dinner reception held in the Northbrook Holiday Inn.

Carol A. Plough — George E. Roby

Carol A. Plough and her bridegroom, George E. Roby, spent a few days at Illinois State Beach Park following their July 16 wedding, but will be taking their honeymoon in December. The delayed honeymoon will be a trip to California.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Plough, Mount Prospect, Carol and George, son of George Roby, Arlington Heights, and the late Elsie Roby, were married in Mount Prospect's Grace Lutheran Church. The 4:30 p.m. service was both double ring and candlelight.

Carol chose a capped sleeve knit gown trimmed in lace for her wedding. Except for the train, she chose identical gowns in aqua for her bridesmaids. Carol wore a matching lace headpiece to hold her fingertip veil, and she carried orchids with lilies of the valley and stephanotis. Her maids carried bouquets of summer flowers.

MAID OF HONOR was her sister, Jane, and bridesmaids were Debbie Michalicka, Stickney, Ill., and Mary Weaver, Arlington Heights. Two 4-year-old flower girls were in blue print gowns sewn by the bride. They were the bride's niece, Tammy McAdams, Stockton, Calif., and the groom's niece, Angela Lyons, Severen, Md. Both carried baskets with mixed summer flowers.

Best man was the groom's brother, Rob, and ushers were his brother, Kevin, his brother-in-law, John Lyons, Severen, and the bride's brother, John.

A dinner reception for 180 guests was held in the Cabriolet Restaurant in Libertyville.

The new Mrs. Roby, a teacher at Lake in the Hills School in Algonquin, is a 1970 graduate of Wheeling High and also of Western Illinois University. The groom, a 1970 graduate of Hersey High, studied at Harper College and is now with L & W Industries, Arlington Heights.

Mr. and Mrs. George E. Roby

The couple resides in a Palatine apartment.

How Hairdressers Keep Abreast of Latest Hair Trends

Meg Welch, owner of Hair Directors, Inc., Arlington Heights, meets this challenge by engaging nationally-known guest artists to train and teach her staff the newest hairstyles and latest hair cutting techniques.

The guest designer must be qualified in every aspect of the beauty profession.

Exnon, European hair designer and instructor who will conduct a class Aug. 10 for the Hair Directors' staff, has trained with Vidal Sassoon and worked throughout Europe before returning to the USA to demonstrate his concept of hair designing.

He conducts more than 50 seminars a year and is a judge for all major hair dressing awards. He also does the make-up and hair styling for many internationally-known models.

Workshop training and education is the most in depth, and beneficial programs of this type allow the instructor to show his methods and techniques as well as to observe and work with each hairdresser individually.

Learning to work as a group harmoniously is an essential part of a stylist's education. Monthly staff meetings enable both management and staff to voice opinions and share views, thus eliminating a communications gap. Group discussions are very exciting. With an enthusiastic group, a discussion usually turns into a workshop with each stylist eagerly awaiting her turn with the scissors to show and share her ideas.

It is most important for a hairdresser to be aware of the condition of the client's hair and to be able to advise her on how to take care of it. To be able to do this, the stylist must know a great deal about the hair structure and the products she recommends. Some manufacturers offer excellent "product knowledge classes." A hairdresser interested in her profession will take advantage of these programs. Illustrated magazines and other visual aids are also helpful.

The Hair Dressers Association meetings and general seminars are beneficial, but nothing is as effective, encouraging or as exciting as having a well-known hair designer — a super star, if you will, tell you, "You've got it!"

Sox surrender first place; Cubs shelled

ARLINGTON, Tex.—The 43-day joy ride is over.

That's how long the White Sox, a team most picked for fifth place, proved nearly everyone wrong by staying in first place — but no more.

Losing 10-7 to the Rangers here Friday night, coupled with Minnesota's wild 12-11 victory over Detroit earlier in the evening, the Sox fell one-half game behind the Twins.

IT IS THE first time since July 1 a team other than the Sox leads the American League West.

Sox pitching failed to hold leads of 3-2 and 6-4, and a five-run eighth inning for the Rangers now just 1½ games behind the Twins, proved to be the game-winning rally.

Trailing 6-5, the Rangers sent nine men to the plate in the eighth and used the three-run home run of ninth-hitting Keith Smith to provide the eventual winning run. Smith's blast, off reliever and loser Lerron LaGrow, was the first in the rookie's major league career.

Randy Wiles took over for LaGrow and yielded the final run before retiring the side. Francisco Barrios started for the Sox and lasted Six innings, leaving in the seventh after Mike Hargrove's homer made it 6-5.

DAROLD KNOWLES, 5-1, picked up the victory in relief of starter Dock Ellis and reliever Adrian Devine. Ellis lasted until the sixth when he was shelled by back-to-back homers by Richie Zisk and Oscar Gamble. They put the Sox ahead 3-2.

Devine came in for Ellis and an inning later was hit for three runs when Jim Essian singled, Alan Bannister was hit by a pitch, Jorge Orta tripled in two runs and Zisk doubled in Orta.

Knowles finally retired the Sox in the seventh and gave up a harmless run in the ninth when Essian singled and eventually scored on Bannister's sacrifice fly.

Texas, which scored in five of its eight turns at bat, opened the scoring in the second inning when Bump Wills doubled in Dave May. In the fourth, the Rangers made it 2-0 when Hargrove's infield out drove in Wills from third base.

A TWO-RUN double by Jim Sundberg in the sixth put the Royals back on top 4-3. After the Sox came back to lead 6-4 with their second three-run inning, Hargrove's homer inched Kansas City to within a run.

The loss was the Sox third straight and it kept alive the possibility they could be as far down in the standings as fourth place if things continue to go badly in the final two games of the series.

Right behind the top three teams in the division are the Kansas City Royals, who trail the Twins by two games.

Steve Stone, 12-7, is scheduled to throw for the Sox in tonight's game against the Rangers' Bert Blyleven, 10-10. Jack Kucek will pitch for the Sox in the final, taking Wilbur Wood's place in the starting rotation. He will face Nelson Briles.

Sox manager Bob Lemon indicated prior to Friday's game Wood was being sent to the bullpen to work himself out of the troubles he has had his last several starts.

Phillies deal dose of pain in 10-3 loss

by ART MUGALIAN

Tim McCarver, the Babysitter, gave the Cubs something to cry about Friday at Wrigley Field.

The wailing could be heard at the very bottom of the NL East, to which the slump-ridden, bump-ridden Cubs seem to be heading.

Philadelphia's 35-year-old retread catcher singled twice and homered twice to help his "baby," Lefty Steve Carlton, record a major-league-high 17th win as the Phillies lengthened their lead over the Cubs to four games with their ninth straight victory, a 10-3 pasting.

"Until the other night, I hadn't started a game that Carlton didn't pitch," said McCarver after the game. "As a matter of fact, I've caught every one of his games all the way back to the beginning of last year."

The batterymates weren't the only bad news for the Cubs. Local product Greg Luzinski hit his 30th homer of the year, with two on, and the Phillies tied a team record with six HRs altogether.

McCarver and Carlton were the Focus of attention, though. "We get a lot of kidding about it from the rest of the team," McCarver continued. "Our nickname is the Waa Brothers — you know, like waaaaaa, like a baby cries."

The personal catcher for the winningest pitcher in the majors leagues takes the ribbing good-naturedly. "We've got good rapport on this club," said McCarver. "I guess it's easy to say that when you're winning. Winning kinda breeds that."

McCarver's first home run, in the second inning, began a personal ordeal by fire for Cub ace Rick Reuschel, who hadn't lost all year in Wrigley Field. Reuschel, now 15-5, surrendered a two-run homer to Carlton, of all people, later in the second, and then gave up consecutive roundtrippers to Luzinski and Jay Johnstone in the third.

That was all for Reuschel but the Phillies managed two more home runs — by McCarver and Tommy Hutton — off Pete Broberg, the first of two Cub relievers. Broberg pitched well, though, striking out seven in six innings of work.

But Broberg was the day's only bright spot for the Cubs, losers of three out of the last four games and quickly slipping from contention in a division that suddenly has the Cubs outclassed.

Manager Herman Franks was at a loss for words later, saying only that "everybody has days like Reuschel had."

BUT FRANKS WAS beginnig to mutter to himself after two more of his regulars decided that their injuries were too serious to play with. Jerry Morales sat out with an "Astroturf knee" and Ivan DeJesus complained of a sore throwing arm where he was hit by a pitch last Saturday.

"There's not much I can do when they say they're hurting," Franks moaned before the game, sending out a lineup that included Greg Gross in center and Mick Kelleher at shortstop.

But it wasn't a lack of hitting punch or ineffective fielding that pushed the Cubs off to a bad start in this four-game showdown with the Phils. Rather, it was the uncharacteristic performance by Reuschel after 11 straight victories at Wrigley Field this year.

"There was a summer-type breeze, a beautiful day to play baseball," said Luzinski, who is enjoying his best season ever. "I like swinging in this park."

LUZINSKI'S HOMER, which followed two cheap singles by Larry Bowa and Mike Schmidt, landed about halfway up the bleachers in right-center. The eight MPH southwest wind may have been a slight factor.

The wind was a definite aid on McCarver's first blast, which came down in the basket in right, just out of Bobby Murcer's reach.

"It was just a routine fly ball that the wind caught," said McCarver, who admitted he was only joking when, before the game, he had promised teammate Jerry Martin three hits. "The second one I got all of."

CARLTON WENT THE distance and allowed eight hits, including a two-run single by George Mitterwald in the second when the Cubs responded to the Phils' three-run inning with a two-spot of their own.

But, helped along by a four-run third inning, Carlton cruised until the eighth when two walks and a single by Murcer produced another run.

, "Steve couldn't get his rhythm down," explained McCarver. "This ball park is conductive to good hitting with the wind and the close porches and everything. It's hard to pitch here — it's a hitter's park."

Arlington coasts past Galesburg in state tourney

by DON FRISKE

GALESBURG — For the first time in a long while, Arlington coach Lloyd Meyer was able to breathe easy in the ninth inning Friday night. His team was coasting to a 12-1 rain-delayed, opening-game victory over the host team here in the state finals of American Legion baseball.

After a week of late rallies and extra-inning affairs, it was a good thing for Meyer that his players had built an early lead.

He promised them that he would chew tobacco for the first time if they made the trip to Galesburg. Although he would take only a small amount, it was still enough to choke a novice if too much excitement occurred.

MEYER SAID he'll do it again out of superstition when Arlington plays tonight at 8 p.m. They will face the winner of the Barrington-Rock Island contest, which was played late Friday night.

The lopsided victory was also good for the attitude of the team because Meyer was able to use all of his players.

"That helps team morale," he explained. "It won't win a ball game, but it helps in the long run."

Pitching is the big factor when play reaches the state level. Although Meyer believes his team has depth in that area, he may not need it as much as the clubs that move into the loser's bracket.

IF ARLINGTON wins tonight, they will be in the final matchup Monday against a team that will have to beat them twice to take the title away from its defenders.

Meyer was able to use three pitchers Friday. Kevin McBride worked the first six innings, and the big right-hander continued his success in post-season play.

McBride allowed only one earned run on two hits while striking out six and walking two. Doug Harth and Jim McDonald combined to pitch hitless ball in the final three innings.

The Galesburg coach was forced to go with his second pitcher because he had used his best starter in a 4-1 win over Nokomis Friday morning. They scored three runs in the ninth to win it.

JEFF STEVENS struck out 16 Nokomis batters in nine innings to collect the victory, but he was in leftfield against Arlington.

"Nokomis probably didn't have many strong hitters," Meyer said. "But 16 strikeouts is 16 strikeouts, no matter who you are facing, so we were fortunate."

In true Meyer fashion, his team scored more runs (12) than hits (10). Arlington got a big bonus from the two Galesburg pitchers who walked 10, hit one batter and threw four wild pitches.

But there were some timely hits for Arlington. Catcher Gary Kempton hit two triples in the first two innings to drive in three runs. Mike Mayerck hit a bases-loaded single to score two more in the second and Frank DeSimone belted a long triple to right center that brought in one runner after it hit high off the outfield fence.

With a 42-9 season record, Meyer has decided to start Dennis Drolet tonight. If Arlington wins, Bob Huber will probably get the starting job in the title game Monday.

THE GREAT golf club controversy has spread to the women's ranks where Jo Ann Washam compares club heads.

Groovy clubs causing stir

"Inadvertent human error" was cited as the reason for the problem with the golf clubs disallowed for the current PGA championship in Pebble Beach.

Allen Hansberger, president of the Ram Golf Corporation which manufactured the clubs at 1501 Pratt Ave. in Elk Grove Village, said the problem stemmed from the custom grinding of some clubs made for touring professionals.

The specifications for grinding the clubs called for grooves in the clubface of 35-1000ths of an inch in width, the size allowed by USGA rules

However, Hansberger explained: "In tracing the inaccuracy on these particular clubs it was found that while the specifications conformed to USGA rules, the clubface was inadvertently ground a fraction less than the specifications."

Consistent Littler leads PGA by 2

by IRA MILLER

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (UPI) — Gene Littler, the man they call "The Machine" for his reliable consistency, strecthed his string of bogey-free holes to 36 with a 3-under-par 69 Friday and took a two-stroke lead after two rounds of the PGA Championship.

Littler, one of the select group of 15 players who have won more than a million dollars on the pro golf tour, had a total of 136, eight strokes under par for the 6,800 yards of seaside terror that make up the Pebble Beach Golf Links.

He made birdies at three of Pebble Beach's four par-5 holes and was the only player in a starting field of 141 professionals in this, last of the year's four major events that make up golf's Grand Slam, to reach the 36-hole mark without a bogey.

JERRY McGEE, a journeyman whose victory two weeks ago at Philadelphia was only his second in a decade on tour, slipped into second place at 138 with a second round 70.

"So many things can happen on this golf course that I wouldn't be comfortable with that lead unless I was on the 18th green of the final round," said Littler, a 47-year-old California native who has been playing competitively at Pebble Beach, amateur and pro, for three decades.

He birdied the 502-yard second hole from 8 feet, the 516-yard sixth from 1½ and the 548-yard 18th, the famed horror by the sea, from 15 feet. Other than that, it was mostly a routine Littler round that could have been much better since he missed four birdie putts of eight feet or less.

"I didn't play quite as well as yesterday, but I got plenty out of the round," Littler said.

Littler had just one moment of difficulty Friday, when he pushed his 2-iron tee shot at the 202-yard 12th into a tree and it landed on a flattened-out gopher mound.

"When I saw it, I was ready to take a four (bogey) and go to the next hole," Littler said, but he hit a marvelous shot to within 10 feet of the hole and sank the putt for par.

Jack Nickaus, a frustrated runnerup in both the Masters and British Opens this year, shot a 71 and shared third place at 140 with comebacking Lanny Wadkins, who had a 71 of his own and complained bitterly about the pin positions.

"I'm near the lead, and I don't have to do any heroics tomorrow — although I'd like some," said Nicklaus, a winner of four PGA titles and a record 16 major championships overall, but none since the 1975 PGA.

FOUR PLAYERS were next at 141 including Tom Watson, who had to play with mostly borrowed clubs for the second day in a row while he awaited repairs on his own set.

Watson, the worlds best player in 1977, suffered one serious lapse when he "fell asleep" and took four from the fringe at the 16th green, had 73. Others in the 141 group were Al "59" Geiberger, who won this title in 1966, Charles Coody, the 1971 Masters champ, and Joe Inman. Geiberger shot 70 in Friday's mild, mostly overcast weather, Coody 71 and Inman 69.

Gil Morgan shot 68 and was tied at 142 with longball hitters George Cadle and Fuzzy Zoeller, who — playing together — both fell back when they made double-bogey 5 at the 209-yard 17th hole. Cadle had 73 Friday and Zoeller 72.

Jerry Pate, the rookie sensation of a year ago, Tournament Players Championship winner Mark Hayes and comebacking former Masters champ George Archer were at 143. A large group at 144, even par, included Lee Trevino, Johnny Miller, Don January, Billy Casper and Lou Graham.

Herald tourney tees off

Wickes Furniture will be at the 28th Annual Paddock Publications Inter-League Handicap Golf Tournament at Buffalo Grove Golf Course Sunday to defend the title the team won last year at Hilldale Golf Course.

The champ will be one of a record number of 44 area twilight league first place teams entered in this year's tourney which is being held at Buffalo Grove for the second time in three years.

The four-man teams will be broken up and paired by handicaps for play Sunday. The lowest handicaps will tee off beginning at 10 a.m. on tees No. 1 and No. 10. The rest of the field will follow and be on the course by 12:30 p.m.

Heading the list of prizes is the large traveling trophy awarded to the winning team. Other prizes include: individual trophies for the members of the first, second and third place teams; golf passes for the members of the fourth place team; a dozen balls for the low gross and net scorers; and a $100 cash award for a hole-in-one.

In addition, each player will receive a packet of six imprinted golf tees, a tournament bag tab and a complimentary golf towel.

Martial arts exhibition Sunday

The world famous Do Ve Tae Kwon Do team, comprised of 7-9 year-old black belts, both male and female, will give a demonstration Sunday at Arlington High School's Grace Gymnasium, 502 Euclid, Arlington Heights.

In a 2:30 p.m. appearance, 18 children will demonstrate the martial art of Tae Kwon Do, considered by self-defense experts to be the most demanding as well as the potentially most deadly of the popular Oriental fighting methods.

The demonstration, sponsored by the Arlington Heights Tae Kwon Do Academy, will also feature 7th degree Black Belt Su Cho, co-editor of Tae Kwon Do Illustrated magazine, and two American-born Caucasian Black Belts.

Tickets for the demonstration are at $3 for adults and $2 for children. They may be purchased at the Arlington Tae Kwon Do Academy, 14 N. Vail or at the Book Store, 5 W. Campbell, Arlington Heights.

Lords of baseball hold summer talks

Kansas City, Mo. — A proposed change in the inter-league trading period, penalties for tampering and performance bonuses will be the primary topics of discussion this week when the lords of baseball gather for their annual summer meeting.

Representatives from the 26 teams plus the two league and commissioner's offices will be in Kansas City Aug. 17-18 for an abbreviated version of the week-long winter meetings.

The key topic will be the inter-league trading deadline, traditionally the post-season period beginning five days after the end of the World Series and ending with the close of the winter meeting.

A second period was adopted last winter which allowed inter-league trading from Feb. 15-March 15. But it has been proposed that the second period be changed to run from March 1-April 1 to give teams more time to evaluate players during spring training.

NCAA pushes playoff bid proposal

GREENSBORO, N.C.—The NCAA executive committee Friday pushed up by a year the Division I basketball committee recommendation that only the 16 conferences with the best five-year tournament records get automatic spots in the annual basketball playoffs.

The action takes effect with the 1978-79 playoffs.

Twenty-two conferences had automatic spots this past season and that number will remain the same for next year's playoffs.

In each of the four basketball regionals the executive committee rules that four conferences would be seeded, rather than the recommended two, and that the two leading independent teams would be seeded next March.

Tom Jernstedt, NCAA director of tournaments, announced the 1977-78 playoff schedule with eight first round games on Saturday, March 11, and eight on Sunday, March 12.

U.S. cities present Olympic bids

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. — Officials from New York, Los Angeles and New Orleans will present their bids to host the 1984 Summer Olympic Games during a two-day meeting of the U.S. Olympic Committee's site selection committee next month.

Former Olympic decathlon champion Bob Mathias, now director of the Colorado Springs Olympic Training Center, Thursday said members of the selection committee already had visited the three cities to review plans and inspect locations. When the USOC decides on a United States city, the proposal will be presented to the International Olympic Committee.

The meeting Sept. 23-24 also will be the first time the USOC's governing body has inspected the 28-acre training center since it was selected in June. Another Olympic training center has been set up at Squaw Valley, Calif., and a third is being considered at Lake Placid, N.Y., site of the 1980 Winter Olympics.

Rangers expecting coaching change

NEW —YORK — The New York Rangers are on the verge of announcing that Jean-Guy Talbot, formerly coach of the Quebec Nordiques in the World Hockey Association and currently a Ranger assistant coach, will replace John Ferguson as coach of the National Hockey League team.

Talbot sat on the bench severaltimes during the 1976-77 season to direct the club as Ferguson was apparently prepping the former NHL defenseman as his successor. Ferguson will retain his role as the Rangers' general manager.

Should the move go through as expected, Talbot will be announced as the new coach in an Aug. 22 news conference.

The 45-year-old Talbot, the first full-time assistant coach in the history of the Rangers, was signed on at the June, 1976 league meetings.

For last year's loss

Bears owe rough Raiders

by BOB GALLAS

Few Bears are looking on tonight's game in Oakland as a grudge match, but they still remember last year's hookup with the Raiders, who beat the Bears 28-27 in a game laced with controversy, then went on to eventually win the Super Bowl.

The majority remember Bob Thomas' 31-yard field goal attempt hitting the upright and bouncing back with 15-seconds left in the game. Many more remember Roger Stillwell's 39-yard return of a Raider fumble for a touchdown, a touchdown nullified by an inadvertent official's whistle.

But the Bears won't be out to get even.

"YOU GET those back during the regular season, not the preseason," emphasized coach Jack Pardee. "But when you play the defending Super Bowl champs, you do get up for the game, regardless of when you play."

The Bears, who have bypassed preparation for their first two preseason contests in order to concentrate on revamping their own offense, spent time this week studying Oakland's unique four-linebacker defense, but Pardee still contends the Bears are primarily interested in getting their own act together, before worrying about a preseason foe.

"The teams we play over the next several weeks do many things similar. We've been getting into some of the things they do, but that's about it," explained Pardee. "We are a lot farther ahead this week than we were last week," said Pardee, referring to his club's preparations.

The Bears will have their hands full. The Raiders opened their preseason schedule Monday with a 40-0 drubbing over the Houston Oilers.

THE BOB AVELLINI-Mike Phipps quarterback duo, which will again split halves with Avellini opening, will face one of the more fearsome defenses in the league.

"It's a defense spearheaded by safety George Atkinson, who gained national attention over the off-season with his slander suit against Steelers' coach Chuck Noll, who labeled Atkinson as one of the "criminal elements" of pro football. Akinson hit Pittsburgh receiver Lynn Swann from behind and away from the ball in a game last season, giving Swann a concussion.

The Bears will probably send a rearranged offensive line against the Raiders. No. 1 draft choice Ted Albrecht will open at guard while Jeff Sevy will move over to left tackle for the first time, a move that may become permanent if Lionel Antoine's ailing knee doesn't recover enough for him to play full time.

Already short on running backs, the Bears may have to rely more heavily on Walter Payton, who missed Wednesday's practice session due to a bout with the stomach flu.

Larry Schreiber is sidelined with a pulled hamstring suffered in last Saturdays' loss to New Orleans and fullback Robin Earl missed three days of practice for a court appearance back in the state of Washington, which had charged Earl with welfare fraud.

Pardee said he didn't know how much Earl would play Saturday, since Earl had missed so much practice time. With Mike Adamle recovering from a torn groin muscle, that leaves Roland Harper, Johnny Musso and Tommy Reamon in addition to Payton to handle the running chores.

Defensively Royce Berry may start in place of Mike Hartenstein at tackle. Hartenstein injured his foot Monday and has missed practice.

Pardee's biggest concern is in the defensive backfield, where rookie Mike Spivey will start at cornerback against the likes of Oakland receivers Cliff Branch and Fred Biletnikoff.

"I hope Virgil (Livers) will be able to play," said Pardee. Livers injured his leg the first day of camp and has yet to play so Spivey has taken over the spot at cornerback. "That's the way Livers learned," said Pardee. "I think we gave up 35 touchdowns that first year Livers was in there."

The game will be telecast live, starting at 8 p.m., on WBBM-TV, Channel 2. It will also be broadcast on WBBM (780) radio.

Carew's slam elevates Twins into West lead

Rod Carew hit a grand slam home run and Mike Cubbage, who drove in three runs, also had a homer Friday night in helping the Minnesota Twins outslug the Detroit Tigers, 12-11, in a game that featured six homers.

In other American League games, Kansas City slipped by Toronto, 9-8; New York won a pair from California, 10-1 and 9-3; Baltimore beat Oakland 6-1; Boston slugged Seattle, 7-2; and Cleveland swept Milwaukee, 2-0 and 5-4.

Carew's fourth career grand slam and his 11th home run of the season gave the Twins a 12-3 lead in the third, but the Twins had to stave off a late Detroit rally that featured home runs by Jason Thompson, Tito Fuentes, Rusty Staub and Steve Kemp.

IN TORONTO, Hal McRae slammed a triple and a two-run homer and Darrell Porter collected three hits and scored two runs to power the Kansas City Royals to a 9-8 triumph over the Toronto Blue Jays.

IN NEW YORK, Chris Chambliss homered twice in the opener and Reggie Jackson blasted a pair of long homers in the second game to lead the New York Yankees to a 10-1, 9-3 doubleheader sweep of the California Angels.

Jim "Catfish" Hunter allowed six hits in the first game and Ed Figueroa tossed a six-hitter in the nightcap as the Yankees ran their winning streak to five games.

Jackson's 20th homer, into the upper deck in right, ignited a four-run sixth inning rally which broke a 3-3 tie in the nightcap. Paul Blair's two-run single capped the inning and Jackson added his second homer of the game for the first of two Yankee runs in the seventh.

Major league baseball

IN BALTIMORE, Doug DeCines slammed his 12th home run and shortstop Kiko Garcia climaxed a four-run sixth inning with a two-run single, enabling the Baltimore Orioles to defeat the Oakland A's, 6-1, behind the two-hit pitching of Jim Palmer for their fifth straight triumph.

Palmer, 13-10, completed his 15th game and was backed by a 10-hit attack as the Orioles registered their seventh victory in a row this season over Oakland.

IN BOSTON, Jim Rice hit his 30th homer and drove in two runs and Carl Yastrezemski also knocked in a pair to pace the Boston Red Sox to a 7-2 triumph over Seattle for their 12th victory in their last 13 games and eighth straight this season over the expansion Mariners.

The victory enabled the first place Red Sox to maintain a game and a half lead over Baltimore in the American League East.

IN CLEVELAND, Pinch-hitter Rico Carty doubled home pinch runner Paul Dade from second base with one out in the ninth inning, enabling the Cleveland Indians to defeat the Milwaukee Brewers 5-4 and sweep their doubleheader.

Dennis Eckersley allowed only one hit — a first inning triple by Cecil Cooper — in pitching the Indians to a 2-0 triumph in the opener.

IN PITTSBURGH — Duffy Dyer singled home Rennie Stennett with one out in the 12th inning to give the Pittsburgh Pirates a 6-5 fight-marred triumph over the New York Mets in the second game to complete a sweep of their doubleheader.

Jim Rooker went 3-for-3 knocked in two runs and scored another while scattering nine hits in the opener to give the Pirates a 3-2 triumph.

With one out in the 12th inning, Stennett singled to left off loser Paul Siebert, 2-1, and stole second. Siebert then intentionally passed Fernando Gonzalez before Dyer singled to left to give Larry Demery, 5-3, the win after four innings of two-hit relief.

The game was tied for the third time in the bottom of the eighth when Omar Moreno singled home Bobby Tolan, who had belted a pinch-hit double with two out.

IN ST. LOUIS, Jerry Mumphrey doubled home pinch-runner Rick Bosetti with one out in the bottom of the ninth to give the St. Louis Cardinals a 2-1 victory over the Montreal Expos. With one out, reliever Will McEnaney walked Ted Simmons and Bosetti ran for him. McEnaney gave up another walk to Mike Anderson before Mumphrey sent a drive to the wall in right field. Al Hrabosky picked up the win in relief.

DUCKS OF A FEATHER sleep together and in this case it's on one foot and with their heads tusked under the left wing. Zoologists say mallards often nap that way to conserve body heat. Dry conditions in Canada have reduced the duck breeding population.

Fewer ducks this fall

This spring's total duck breeding population was down about 4 per cent from 1976, the Interior Department's U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service announced.

Weather on the waterfowl breeding grounds last fall and winter was mild, with record high temperatures and below average precipitation recorded at most stations. The drought continued until mid-May, when extensive rain fell over prairie areas in Canada and the United States. Unfortunately, the rains may have come too late in the nesting season to help nesting waterfowl.

Dry conditions in the important Canadian and U.S. prairie-pothole region resulted in a major decrease in number of breeding ducks there as birds overflew the dry areas. Spring waterfowl populations increase sharply in Alaska and northern Canada because of the overflight.

THE BREEDING population of mallards, traditionally the most numerous species, decreased 5 per cent from 1976 and 7 per cent from the 1956-1976 average.

Breeding population estimates for other species reflect the following changes from 1976; gadwall +5 per cent; wigeon -1 per cent; green-winged teal +6 per cent; blue-winged teal -8 per cent; northern shoveler -11 per cent; pintail -18 per cent; redhead -27 per cent; canvasback +2 per cent; and scaup +7 per cent. The total breeding population of these 10 species was down 4 per cent.

Waterfowl nest throughout North America. However, the prairie-pothole regions of Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba, the Dakotas, Montana and Minnesota normally produce 50 to 75 per cent of the continent's annual duck crop. This area receives highly variable amounts of precipitation, with periodic droughts fairly common.

Consequently, the capability of this area to support breeding ducks also varies markedly. This glaciated landscape, pocked with lakes and potholes, is the key area for waterfowl production in North America.

EXPERIENCE has shown that ducks produce less successfully when they are forced from their traditional prairie-pothole regions to more northerly breeding areas.

During July, duck broods are counted to monitor production success from the breeders surveyed in May. A comparison of May and July pond counts is made to determine an index of water stability.

These waterfowl production counts and habitat assessments are in progres now. The impact of this year's weather and habitat conditions on actual duck production are not yet known.

Steel shot will affect 12-gaugers

Waterfowl hunters who use shotguns bored larger or smaller than 12-gauge are exempt from mandatory use of steel shot this fall.

The steel loads will be mandatory for 12-gauge in areas designated for non-toxic shot. But guns with larger or smaller bores are not affected by the rulemaking, published in the Aug. 2, 1977, Federal Register.

Steel shot is the only approved nontoxic shot and it has been manufactured in 12-gauge only. Therefore the Service has decided that in the waterfowl hunting season beginning in the fall of 1977, shells other than 12-gauge loaded with lead or other metals can be used to hunt waterfowl in steel shot zones. The rule permits use of toxic shot for the 10-gauge as well as all other gauges except 12-gauge.

APPROXIMATELY 85 per cent of all waterfowl hunters use the 12-gauge shotgun. The ruling states that the hunter who is taking waterfowl in a designated steel shot zone with 12-gauge shells loaded with toxic shot in his possession will be in violation of the regulation. Waterfowl hunters possessing these loads in other gauges will not be in violation.

The Service points out that this exemption for gauges that have not been manufactured in steel shot will be reviewed again prior to the 1978 hunting season to determine whether it should be continued for that season.

The Service has proposed that in the fall of 1979 no further exceptions be made based on gauge. These exceptions lessen the effectiveness of efforts to reduce lead poisoning among waterfowl using the zones.

Lake trout surveys start

A survey of lake trout in Lake Michigan being conducted by the Illinois Dept. of Conservation may help decide future catch limits for both commercial and sport fishermen.

Currently, commercial fishermen are prohibited from taking lake trout and sport fishermen are limited to three a day.

Illinois Department of Conservation Lake Michigan fishery biologist Harry Wight has been in search of the bottom-hugging lakers since Aug. 1. Each day he heads a couple of miles offshore in a commercial fishing tug with 800 feet of gill net ranging from 2½ to 6 inches.

BY MARKING FISH with a sonar device, Wight can usually differentiate between lake trout, which prefer the bottom, and coho salmon, which are about the same size but swim nearer the surface of the water.

So far, using the sonar, lake bottom charts and water temperature he has caught 258 lake trout. Wight wants to catch at least 750 but has been hampered by west winds that have blown in colder water than the 50 degrees normally preferred by lake trout.

Wight plans to plot a mortality rate of about 25 per cent and with mortality rates where catch limits have been recorded for the same periods of time. Just what the mortality rate on a given body of water can be without hurting the population is difficult to determine without closely observing that body of water over a period of years, he said.

By using different sizes of gill nets, Wight hopes to get all ages of lake trout. Lakers tend to school together in age groups, a factor that must be overcome in catching a diversity of fish by age.

PREVIOUS STUDIES of Lake Michigan have indicated that there has not been any natural reproduction of lake trout for several years, but hatchery-reared fish have thrived in the lake, Wight said. If there is ever to be any natural reproduction, sufficient numbers of a large breeding population must be protected.

Besides the mortality rate, Wight is monitoring growth rates for fish to determine whether they are getting enough alewives to eat. By doing this he can be sure that he does not allow more fish to be stocked than can be supported by the lake.

60 million sportsmen hunt or fish

One in five Americans holds a fishing or hunting license and they spent a record $318 million last year to get them, the Interior Department said.

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Director Lynn Greenwalt said 60 million Americans bought state hunting and fishing licenses in 1976.

"Both figures are record highs and they show that Americans continue to find hunting and fishing major pastimes," Greenwalt said.

HE SAID THE number of hunters and fishers probably is larger than department figures show because some states do not require licenses for ocean fishing, or for children under 16 or the elderly.

The number of license holders increased by 500,000 over 1975 and state sales of license plates was up $23 million.

California led the nation in fishing licenses with 5.8 million sold. Michigan was next with 1.6 million, followed by Wisconsin, Missouri, Oregon, Tennessee and Texas.

'Incentives for oil drilling lacking'

Given adequate tax incentives, independent operators who explore for oil could double their drilling rate, an Oklahoma producer spokesman said Friday. E. L. "Bud" Stewart, executive director of Energy Consumers and Producers Assn. of Seminole, Okla., testified at the close of a week's hearings by the Senate finance committee into th tax portions of President Carter's energy program, which the House approved last week. "His program is woefully weak in providing incentives for new production," Stewart said. But Carter's program was vigorously defended Friday by energy sec. James Schlesinger, who told a CBS television interviewer the Senate may well "move back toward the administration's position" on taxing low-mileage cars. The House approved a tax on such vehicles, based on their fuel efficiency and starting with the 1979 models that come out next year. Carter had proposed a stiffer tax, starting this year.

Chrysler wildcat strike ends

Wildcat strikers agreed Friday to end their unauthorized week-long strike at the Chrysler Corp. engine plant that forced the automaker to put 16,000 workers on layoff or half-shifts. By a voice vote, members of United Auto Workers Local 372 decided to end the strike. They removed picket lines from the plant gates where they had been stationed since Monday. Chrysler said work at the 4,500-employe plant would resume on the third shift Sunday night.

Dollar shows gain over week

The dollar, recovering from a six-week slump, made sizeable gains against Continental Currencies Friday and showed over-all gains for the week. Gold fell. In London the dollar gained two points on sterling at $1.7139 against $1.7381 and was stronger than at the start of the week. On the continent, the dollar advanced to 2.3255 marks from 2.3140 in Frankfurt and went to 2.4188 Swiss Francs from 2.4107 in Zurich. The dollar rate in Paris was 4.9113 francs up from 4,8965 and in Brussels it closed at 35.80 against 35.65. In Amsterdam a dollar cost 2.4530 guilders compared with 2.4450 guilders Thursday. It advanced almost one lira in Milan to 882.85 from 881.90. Gold closed 50 cents lower in Zurich at $144.875 and 25 cents lower in London at $145.125.

United to seek 1.8% fare increase

United Airlines said that it will file with the Civil Aeronautics Board to match Eastern Airlines' filing for a 1.8 per cent fare increase for the 48 contiguous states. United's filing would be effective Oct. 1. The company said the fare increase is necessary because of increased costs.

Unemployment insurance meeting

Unemployment insurance laws and regulations represent a rapidly increasing financial burden on public as well as private employes in Illinois. Effective Jan. 1, 1978, all public employes — such as municipalities and school districts — face mandatory U.I. coverage for the first time. To help public employers through the myriad of U.I. forms and regulations, the Illinois State Chamber of Commerce will sponsor day-long seminar to brief governmental units on all aspects of compliance with U.I. laws and guidelines. The session to be repeated six times in various locations throughout the state, will run from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. Chicago sessions include: Aug. 22, 23 and 24 meetings at the Chicago Marriott Motor Hotel.

Telemed reports record earnings

Telemed Corp., Hoffman Estates reported record revenues and earnings for the year ended March 31, said Jack Henn, president. Henn predicted improved first quarter fiscal 1978 revenues and net income results. Revenues reached a record $11,430,619, which represents a 51 per cent increase over last fiscal year. Net income increased 22 per cent to $1,436,222 compared to $1,176,785 for the previous year. Earnings per share rose from 34 cents to 38 cents, which takes into account 355,522 additional average shares outstanding during fiscal 1977. These results reflect a change in method of accounting for leases.

Motorola buys a California firm

Motorola Inc., Schaumburg, announced that is has acquired for an undisclosed amount of cash a controlling interest in the Tegal Corp., located in Richmond, California. Tegal manufactures gas plasma reaction systems used primarily in semiconductor processes. Tegal had sales of less than $1 million for the fiscal year ended Nov. 30, 1976.

UOP granted U.N. contract

The Mineral Sciences Division of UOP, Inc., Des Plaines, has been awarded a $150,000 contract by the United Nations for a detailed metallurgical study of nickel-bearing ores in the central African Republic of Burundi, according to W.M. Swanson, vice president and general manager of the division. This follows U.N. approval under its emerging nations development program to assist Burundi in this undertaking and the selection of mineral sciences from among six bidders on the project.

Tastee-Freez out to scoop success with new family restaurant chain

Those small town summer days at the neighborhood ice cream stand: they seemed to last forever.

But the times are changing. The folks at Tastee-Freez International, Inc., who helped to popularize the carry-out ice cream and hot dog stands that sprang up along the highways during the 1950s, are seeking a new image and higher sales to hungry consumers.

Small towns remain the best market for Tastee Freez soft ice cream, and the summertime crowd is always welcome, says Tastee Freez president George N. Mitros.

Dramatic change in American consumers' lifestyles, however, is influencing the Tastee-Freez way of doing things. A new look, streamlined service and a varied menu mark the chain's new Big T Family Restaurants open.

Mitros, the man responsible for this change, makes his home base at Tastee-Freez headquarters, 1515 Mount Prospect Road, Des Plaines. Mitros, however, often travels to meetings with franchise owners, to push the expansion.

"THE EXCITING THING is that now we know where we're going," Mitros said. The company's surveys are showing a new pace in American consumer lifestyles, and Mitros says he's to meet their demands.

"In the family of tomorrow, the average age will move up to 32 years," Mitros says. "Now the consumer is richer, smarter and older."

An increasing number of working women and independent activities for children also will shape the food service industry's future, Mitros says.

''AND THERE'S MORE competition," Mitros says. Tastee-Freez International ranks 25th in sales among U.S. food service companies,

"INSTEAD OF 20 million hamburgers sold, I'd rather have 20 million customers satisfied," says Tastee Freez executive George Mitros.

its $309.8 million annual volume well below the likes of McDonald's. "We don't want to compete with McDonald's," Mitros says. "We want to be better."

Tastee-Freez, founded in 1950 by Leo Maranz, has come a long way from its start as a tiny St. Louis carry-out restaurant. The small restaurants later were enclosed and seating was added with what Mitros calls "planned discomfort" in mind; customers were encouraged to come inside to eat, but not for long.

"We had food cooked to order — everything but the kitchen sink," Mitros says. "There was no consistency of name, building or menus."

BY THE LATE 1960s, Mitros says, the need for change from the inside out was apparent. Consumer surveys were taken, plans were debated and new menus were drawn up by management. Standardized service and a training program for all managers at the Des Plaines headquarters were part of the game plan. A coordinated advertising program was launched.

That's how the Big T Family Restaurant concept was born, Mitros says. Tastee-Freez management discussed the proposed transition with its territorial franchise owners. These independent business executives are licensed to use the Tastee-Freez trademark for a limited area. Within each territory, they license individual store owners to sell the company's products.

Many have decided the expanded Big T restaurants will provide the best means to compete for the consumer's food dollar. Tastee-Freez executives are in the third year of the transition to Big T outlets.

GONE ARE THE GAUDY Carnival colors of yesterday's red-white-and-blue carry-out restaurant. The Big T Family Restaurant, has an earthtone exterior with accents of red and blue.

"We've taken Tastee-Freez from a group of hard-working Mom and Pop operators to a more sophisticated franchise business," Mitros says. A varied menu is still featured in the newer restaurants, he says, but now the Big T patrons can expect snappy service as well.

There is a price to pay for modernization. Franchise owners shell out approximately $250,000 to set up a new Big T restaurant from scratch. Mitros says the annual sales volume at one of the new self-service outlets — in the $300,000 to $350,000 range — never could be achieved at a small carry-out stand.

The Big T Family Restaurants lineup includes 142 outlets. Another 39 new restaurants will be opened by the end of this year. Mitros says they aim for increased annual sales at newer outlets, pushing for an eventual $450,000 to $500,000 annual mark.

CHICAGO AREA CONSUMERS might not notice the change until they decide to take a vacation in the Southeast or other regions where Tastee-Freez is stronger, Mitros says. The few Chicago area outlets including a Tastee-Freez in Des Plaines and another in Bartlett, may not convert to the new style.

More than 200 older Tastee-Freez outlets were closed during 1976. Approximately 1,200 of the approximately 2,000 outlets are in the U.S., with the remaining restaurants in Canada, Japan, England and other countries.

Mitros already looks forward to the 1980s, when consumer trends will continue to bring changes in the Tastee Freez style, he says. Some of the Big T restaurants already have begun serving breakfast and Mitros says he expects table service and the sale of beer and wine to be featured at future Big T restaurants.

Success in the fast food industry should be measured by service, Mitros says. "Instead of 20 million hamburgers sold, I'd rather have 20 million customers satisfied," Mitros says.

Stripping French 'new cuisine'

Louis Rukeyser

EUGENIE-LES BAINS, France — The effort to grow fat on other people's efforts to grow thin has been one of the boom businesses of the last generation. In the U.S. — which often seems to regard itself as the vast waistband — the effort already has enriched, among others, pill-dispensing physicians, exercise-dispensing gymnasiums and diet-dispensing authors. Now comes a new phenomenon: the great international chef who argues convincingly that you can dine like a fat cat — and still grow light as a kitten.

The phenomenon has several spectacular commercial manifestations, but its undisputed fountainhead is the place I have just visited in Eugenie-les-Bains, France: The spa-hotel called Les Pres et Les Sources d'Eugenie and featuring the "cuisine minceur" (diet cooking) of the formidable — but slim — Michael Guerard.

Guerard's "cuisine of slimness" has engendered a best-selling cookbook and been glorified in half a dozen American magazines. This year he won the most cherished gastronomical accolade of his native land — three stars in the Michelin guide — and he has clearly only begun to invade our calorie consciousness; there is talk now of a television series next year with Julia Child.

GIVEN THE IMITATIVE nature of our society, and its emphasis on mass marketing, we can expect to see many different varieties, from mildly authentic to totally spurious, of Guerard's new style of cooking — which attempts to summon great flavors while simultaneously banishing fat, sugar, flour and starch. Already there is great confusion between what Guerard is presenting and the so-called new cuisine.

The "new cuisine," in this trencherman's humble (and hungry) opinion, is a bit of a put-on. It takes an always fashionable, but rarely true, idea ("What we are doing today has never been done before") that suffuses it with an American-style media consciousness that was formerly remote from this branch of gastronomy. The new-cuisine chefs, and especially their uncrowned leader, Paul Bocuse, assiduously market a wide range of products — starting with themselves — from New York to Nice.

And yet, despite the new cliches of the "NEW CUISINE" (the garnished salad of green beans to begin, the poached fish in vegetables and white wine, the undercooked duck with green peppercorns), to accept its self-definition as "the new, lighter French cooking" is to do a disservice both to the truth and to the great chefs who went before.

NO ONE WHO HAS truly explored the world of serious French cooking can accept the myth that it consisted of thick sauces masking natural flavors until its recent rescue by the "new cuisine." The greatest French chefs traditionally started with the best ingredients and sought to enhance and orchestrate their flavors indeed, the best of the last half-century, Fernand Point, was so rigorous about this that his influence is clear on virtually every "new cuisine" menu in France. (And, on the other hand, I have been served heavy pastry crusts and sausages at Boscuse's own restaurant that could torpedo the liver of a healthy whale.)

So the "new cuisine," in reality, is not always so marvelously new as its publicists pretend. But Guerard, with his "cuisine minceur," is a more authentic fairy tale: When he was courting the lady whose family hotel he now adorns, she coaxed him into shedding his chef-like dimensions; he loathed ordinary diet food, as any sensible person would, and so invented something very much better — a genuine contribution to the fat of the land, and its removal.

Two cautions, however: (1) Though it has not been widely publicized, Guerard's Eugenie-les-Bains operation actually downgrades his "cuising minceur" (reserving it primarily for visitors taking the complete spa "cure") and focuses instead on a more conventional, if thoroughly delightful, "grand menu gourmand." It is the latter, in fact, that won him his Michelin stars. (2) One reason it is possible to lose weight while eating so well is that Guerard practices a secret that you might even be able to figure out for yourself. He serves very small portions.

Stocks close week at 19-month low

NEW YORK (UPI) — Stocks, closing out a disastrous week, fell to a 19-month low Friday when a midsession rally fizzled in the face of money-supply growth pressures that are pushing interest rates higher.

In addition, one of Wall Street's leading analysts downgraded automobile stocks, triggering further selling in basic industry stocks, which have been weak all year long.

The Dow Jones Industrial Average fell 6.33 points to 871.10, the lowest level since it closed at 858.71 on Jan. 2, 1976. The closely watched average, which dropped 9.61 points Thursday, lost 17.59 points for the week.

GENERAL MOTORS, a Dow average component which plunged 1¾ Thursday, was the most active New York Stock Exchange-listed issue, losing another 1/3 to 65-3/8, a new 1977 low.

The NYSE common stock index fell .16 to 53.61 and the average price of a share skidded 10 cents. Standard & Poor's 500-stock index, containing some over-the-counter issues, lost .28 to 97.88.

Declines outnumbered advances, 893 to 468, among the 1,842 issues crossing the composite tape.

Big Board volume totaled 16,870,000 shares, down from the 21,740,000 traded Thursday. Composite volume fo NYSE issues listed on all U.S. exchanges and over the counter totaled 20,156,640 shares, compared with 25,368,910 Thursday.

Executives stay ahead of inflation

A survey of compensation of Chicago-area companies shows that more than 1,200 executives in 45 management positions have stayed ahead of inflation during the past year by earning an 8.3 per cent increase in base salary or 8.9 per cent in total compensation, both well ahead of the January-April inflation rate of 6.8 per cent.

The survey is sponsored by the Chicago Assn. of Commerce and Industry, Northern Illinois Industrial Assn., Valley Industrial Assn., Associated Employers of Illinois and the Northwest Industrial Council.

Five positions have received major compensation increases, notes Manplan Consultants, a Chicago-based management consulting firm that has conducted the studies since 1963.

The largest total pay increases in the 12 months ending April 1977 went to the chief engineer, 22 per cent; general sales manager, 21.6 per cent; assistant industrial relations executive, 18.5 per cent; manager of manufacturing engineering, 18.3 per cent and top financial executive, 16.1 per cent.

William L. Davidson, Manplan partner in charge of the survey, notes that "this year the nuts and bolts managers — those responsible for manufacturing, engineering and employe relations — are being rewarded for outstanding performance."

Among the surveyed companies, the median sales dollar per employee went from $36,300 in 1976 to $40,000 for the 12 months ending April 1977. Companies also added to their plant and equipment, with median assets per employee going from $18,881 to $23,077.

'Incentives for oil drilling lacking'

Given adequate tax incentives, independent operators who explore for oil could double their drilling rate, an Oklahoma producer spokesman said Friday. E. L. "Bud" Stewart, executive director of Energy Consumers and Producers Assn. of Seminole, Okla., testified at the close of a week's hearings by the Senate finance committee into th tax portions of President Carter's energy program, which the House approved last week. "His program is woefully weak in providing incentives for new production," Stewart said. But Carter's program was vigorously defended Friday by energy sec. James Schlesinger, who told a CBS television interviewer the Senate may well "move back toward the administration's position" on taxing low-mileage cars. The House approved a tax on such vehicles, based on their fuel efficiency and starting with the 1979 models that come out next year. Carter had proposed a stiffer tax, starting this year.

Chrysler wildcat strike ends

Wildcat strikers agreed Friday to end their unauthorized week-long strike at the Chrysler Corp. engine plant that forced the automaker to put 16,000 workers on layoff or half-shifts. By a voice vote, members of United Auto Workers Local 372 decided to end the strike. They removed picket lines from the plant gates where they had been stationed since Monday. Chrysler said work at the 4,500-employe plant would resume on the third shift Sunday night.

On the continent, the dollar advanced to 2.3255 marks from 2.3140 in Frankfurt and went to 2.4188 Swiss Francs from 2.4107 in Zurich. The dollar rate in Paris was 4.9113 francs up from 4,8965 and in Brussels it closed at 35.80 against 35.65. In Amsterdam a dollar cost 2.4530 guilders compared with 2.4450 guilders Thursday. It advanced almost one lira in Milan to 882.85 from 881.90. Gold closed 50 cents lower in Zurich at $144.875 and 25 cents lower in London at $145.125.

Unemployment insurance meeting

Unemployment insurance laws and regulations represent a rapidly increasing financial burden on public as well as private employes in Illinois. Effective Jan. 1, 1978, all public employes — such as municipalities and school districts — face mandatory U.I. coverage for the first time. To help public employers through the myriad of U.I. forms and regulations, the Illinois State Chamber of Commerce will sponsor day-long seminar to brief governmental units on all aspects of compliance with U.I. laws and guidelines. The session to be repeated six times in various locations throughout the state, will run from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. Chicago sessions include: Aug. 22, 23 and 24 meetings at the Chicago Marriott Motor Hotel.

Henn predicted improved first quarter fiscal 1978 revenues and net income results. Revenues reached a record $11,430,619, which represents a 51 per cent increase over last fiscal year. Net income increased 22 per cent to $1,436,222 compared to $1,176,785 for the previous year. Earnings per share rose from 34 cents to 38 cents, which takes into account 355,522 additional average shares outstanding during fiscal 1977. These results reflect a change in method of accounting for leases.

Tastee-Freez out to scoop success with new family restaurant chain

Those small town summer days at the neighborhood ice cream stand: they seemed to last forever.

But the times are changing. The folks at Tastee-Freez International, Inc., who helped to popularize the carry-out ice cream and hot dog stands that sprang up along the highways during the 1950s, are seeking a new image and higher sales to hungry consumers.

Small towns remain the best market for Tastee Freez soft ice cream, and the summertime crowd is always welcome, says Tastee Freez president George N. Mitros.

Dramatic change in American consumers' lifestyles, however, is influencing the Tastee-Freez way of doing things. A new look, streamlined service and a varied menu mark the chain's new Big T Family Restaurants open.

Mitros, the man responsible for this change, makes his home base at Tastee-Freez headquarters, 1515 Mount Prospect Road, Des Plaines. Mitros, however, often travels to meetings with franchise owners, to push the expansion.

"THE EXCITING THING is that now we know where we're going," Mitros said. The company's surveys are showing a new pace in American consumer lifestyles, and Mitros says he's to meet their demands.

"In the family of tomorrow, the average age will move up to 32 years," Mitros says. "Now the consumer is richer, smarter and older."

An increasing number of working women and independent activities for children also will shape the food service industry's future, Mitros says.

"AND THERE'S MORE competition," Mitros says. Tastee-Freez International ranks 25th in sales among U.S. food service companies,

"INSTEAD OF 20 million hamburgers sold, I'd rather have 20 million customers satisfied," says Tastee Freez executive George Mitros.

its $309.8 million annual volume well below the likes of McDonald's. "We don't want to compete with McDonald's," Mitros says. "We want to be better."

Tastee-Freez, founded in 1950 by Leo Maranz, has come a long way from its start as a tiny St. Louis carry-out restaurant. The small restaurants later were enclosed and seating was added with what Mitros calls "planned discomfort" in mind; customers were encouraged to come inside to eat, but not for long.

"We had food cooked to order — everything but the kitchen sink," Mitros says. "There was no consistency of name, building or menus."

BY THE LATE 1960s, Mitros says, the need for change from the inside out was apparent. Consumer surveys were taken, plans were debated and new menus were drawn up by management. Standardized service and a training program for all managers at the Des Plaines headquarters were part of the game plan. A coordinated advertising program was launched.

That's how the Big T Family Restaurant concept was born, Mitros says. Tastee-Freez management discussed the proposed transition with its territorial franchise owners. These independent business executives are licensed to use the Tastee-Freez trademark for a limited area. Within each territory, they license individual store owners to sell the company's products.

Many have decided the expanded Big T restaurants will provide the best means to compete for the consumer's food dollar. Tastee-Freez executives are in the third year of the transition to Big T outlets.

GONE ARE THE GAUDY Carnival colors of yesterday's red-white-and-blue carry-out restaurant. The Big T Family Restaurant, has an earthtone exterior with accents of red and blue.

"We've taken Tastee-Freez from a group of hard-working Mom and Pop operators to a more sophisticated franchise business," Mitros says. A varied menu is still featured in the newer restaurants, he says, but now the Big T patrons can expect snappy service as well.

There is a price to pay for modernization. Franchise owners shell out approximately $250,000 to set up a new Big T restaurant from scratch. Mitros says the annual sales volume at one of the new self-service outlets — in the $300,000 to $350,000 range — never could be achieved at a small carry-out stand.

The Big T Family Restaurants lineup includes 142 outlets. Another 39 new restaurants will be opened by the end of this year. Mitros says they aim for increased annual sales at newer outlets, pushing for an eventual $450,000 to $500,000 annual mark.

CHICAGO AREA CONSUMERS might not notice the change until they decide to take a vacation in the Southeast or other regions where Tastee-Freez is stronger, Mitros says. The few Chicago area outlets including a Tastee-Freez in Des Plaines and another in Bartlett, may not convert to the new style.

More than 200 older Tastee-Freez outlets were closed during 1976. Approximately 1,200 of the approximately 2,000 outlets are in the U.S., with the remaining restaurants in Canada, Japan, England and other countries.

Mitros already looks forward to the 1980s, when consumer trends will continue to bring changes in the Tastee Freez style, he says. Some of the Big T restaurants already have begun serving breakfast and Mitros says he expects table service and the sale of beer and wine to be featured at future Big T restaurants.

Success in the fast food industry should be measured by service, Mitros says. "Instead of 20 million hamburgers sold, I'd rather have 20 million customers satisfied," Mitros says.

Louis Rukeyser

EUGENIE-LES BAINS, France — The effort to grow fat on other people's efforts to grow thin has been one of the boom businesses of the last generation. In the U.S. — which often seems to regard itself as the vast waistband — the effort already has enriched, among others, pill-dispensing physicians, exercise-dispensing gymnasiums and diet-dispensing authors. Now comes a new phenomenon: the great international chef who argues convincingly that you can dine like a fat cat — and still grow light as a kitten.

The phenomenon has several spectacular commercial manifestations, but its undisputed fountainhead is the place I have just visited in Eugenie-les-Bains, France: The spa-hotel called Les Pres et Les Sources d'Eugenie and featuring the "cuisine minceur" (diet cooking) of the formidable — but slim — Michael Guerard.

Guerard's "cuisine of slimness" has engendered a best-selling cookbook and been glorified in half a dozen American magazines. This year he won the most cherished gastronomical accolade of his native land — three stars in the Michelin guide — and he has clearly only begun to invade our calorie consciousness; there is talk now of a television series next year with Julia Child.

GIVEN THE IMITATIVE nature of our society, and its emphasis on mass marketing, we can expect to see many different varieties, from mildly authentic to totally spurious, of Guerard's new style of cooking — which attempts to summon great flavors while simultaneously banishing fat, sugar, flour and starch. Already there is great confusion between what Guerard is presenting and the so-called new cuisine.

The "new cuisine," in this trencherman's humble (and hungry) opinion, is a bit of a put-on. It takes an always fashionable, but rarely true, idea ("What we are doing today has never been done before") that suffuses it with an American-style media consciousness that was formerly remote from this branch of gastronomy. The new-cuisine chefs, and especially their uncrowned leader, Paul Bocuse, assiduously market a wide range of products — starting with themselves — from New York to Nice.

And yet, despite the new cliches of the "NEW CUISINE" (the garnished salad of green beans to begin, the poached fish in vegetables and white wine, the undercooked duck with green peppercorns), to accept its self-definition as "the new, lighter French cooking" is to do a disservice both to the truth and to the great chefs who went before.

NO ONE WHO HAS truly explored the world of serious French cooking can accept the myth that it consisted of thick sauces masking natural flavors until its recent rescue by the "new cuisine." The greatest French chefs traditionally started with the best ingredients and sought to enhance and orchestrate their flavors indeed, the best of the last half-century, Fernand Point, was so rigorous about this that his influence is clear on virtually every "new cuisine" menu in France. (And, on the other hand, I have been served heavy pastry crusts and sausages at Boscuse's own restaurant that could torpedo the liver of a healthy whale.)

So the "new cuisine," in reality, is not always so marvelously new as its publicists pretend. But Guerard, with his "cuisine minceur," is a more authentic fairy tale: When he was courting the lady whose family hotel he now adorns, she coaxed him into shedding his chef-like dimensions; he loathed ordinary diet food, as any sensible person would, and so invented something very much better — a genuine contribution to the fat of the land, and its removal.

Two cautions, however: (1) Though it has not been widely publicized, Guerard's Eugenie-les-Bains operation actually downgrades his "cuising minceur" (reserving it primarily for visitors taking the complete spa "cure") and focuses instead on a more conventional, if thoroughly delightful, "grand menu gourmand." It is the latter, in fact, that won him his Michelin stars. (2) One reason it is possible to lose weight while eating so well is that Guerard practices a secret that you might even be able to figure out for yourself. He serves very small portions.

Stocks hit low in slow trading as credit tightens

by FRANK W. SLUSSER
UPI BUSINESS WRITER

NEW YORK (UPI) ——Stocks fell to their lowest level in 19 months this week in slow trading as the Federal Reserve Board continued to tighten credit to counter an inflationary surge in the nation's money supply.

The Dow Jones Industrial Average, which lost 1.38 points last week, skidded 17.59 points to 871.10, the lowest level since it finished at 858.71 Jan. 2,1976. It has lost 133.55 points so far this year.

The NYSE Common Stock Index fell .43 to 53.61 and Standard & Poor's 500-stock index, containing some over-the-counter stocks, lost 6.88 to 97.88.

DECLINES ROUTED advances, 1,142 to 631, among the 2,086 issues crossing the composite tape.

The big board volume of 92,652.740 shares, down from the 95,765,530, was the slowest full-week turnover since 36.1 million shares changed hands the period ended April 1. Turnover during the same week a year ago totaled 76,579.640 shares.

Composite volume of NYSE issues listed on all U.S. exchanges and over the counter totaled 109,145,640 shares, compared with 112,030,280 last week.

The Fed, which has made money tougher to obtain for the past month, tightened credit further Thursday before reporting a $700 million hike in the basic money supply. The money supply has risen the past two months at sharply higher rates than Fed targets.

BECAUSE SHORT term interest rates have risen recently, many analysts predicted the Fed soon would raise the discount rate it charges member banks for loans. Interest rates should climb even further. That belief sparked some selling.

The rest of the news background was mixed.

Early in the week, Treasury Sec. W. Michael Blumenthal sparked some selling when he told the Senate Finance Committee the nation's trade deficit could exceed $25 billion. The administration previously had predicted a deficit "up to $25 billion."

On the brighter side, the labor department reported a 1 per cent dip in July's wholesale price index, which followed June's .7 per cent

Antibribery bill almost a certainty by 1978; stiff penalties expected

by GUY HALVERSON

Overseas bribery and influence buying — increasingly recognized as the bane of the U.S. business community — may soon be facing stark, no-nonsense, congressionally mandated criminal penalties.

At issue: how to curb what lawmakers describe as huge amounts of overseas payoffs by U.S. corporations seeking overeas business contracts. According to just one report, 175 firms admitted making payoffs totaling more than $300 million during the 1970s.

Now, Congress and the Carter administration are working flat out to impose stiff criminal penalties for firms making these types of payments. At the same time, the United States, along with a dozen other nations, is seeking an international agreement for next year that would make bribery illegal.

ALTHOUGH THE final legislation may not clear Congress until later this year, or early 1978 (reflecting the administration's preoccupation with its energy package)' some type of antibribery bill now is considered almost a certainty to eventually reach President Carter.

For his part, President Carter has supported making it illegal to pay overseas influence money.

Barring any last-minute shifts in congressional attitudes here, the final bill is expected to impose outright criminal penalties for bribes. In May the Senate passed a bill that would penalize corporate officers with up to two years in prison a $10,000 fine, or both. Also, the corporation itself would be fined up to $500,000. A companion measure is expected to be taken up by the House committee on interstate and foreign commerce in September or October.

The impending congressional action is causing mounting concern here on the part of many businessmen, as well as some economists and busines analysts, about the impact of the proposed legislation on U.S. foreign trade.

MAKING OVERSEAS bribes illegal could have potentially, "far reaching" effects on the ability of U.S. firms to conduct business abroad, argues Rodney Eldridge, a professor of business at George Washington University, who specializes in international trade.

In an opinion shared by many business experts Eldridge says he would not be against legislation outlawing bribery for "high level" government and corporate officials abroad. But at the same time, he says, it is well known that "low level" payments — are often called "grease" or "facilitating payments" — are accepted practices in most third-world nations as well as among many major industrial nations in Asia, Africa, and Latin America.

Currently, neither the Senate bill nor the measure now up for consideration in the House would impose criminal sanctions for these so-called low level payments.

"A number of civil service systems actually run on grease." says a key aide to the House Commerce Committee. "We're not out to cripple U.S. firms doing business abroad. What we're concerned about are high-level bribes....

THE SENATE antibribery bill was adopted May 5 by voice vote. Besides imposing criminal sanctions, the bill would place responsibility for enforcing the bribery ban with the Securities and Exchange Commission. At the same time, the bill tightens corporate accounting standards, while requiring public identification of the name and nationalty of actual purchasers of more than 5 per cent of the stock of a corporation.

The main House antibribery bill is sponsored by Rep. Bob Eckhardt, D-Texas. The bill would impose criminal sanctions along the lines of the Senate measure, but it does not include the provisions on accounting and ownership disclosure.

Meanwhile, many business groups here are rallying around a House bill supported by Rep. Fred B. Rooney, (D) Penn. that would require U.S. firms to disclose overseas payments to the Commerce Depart. Failure to report such payments would be subject to a 1-year jail sentence, a $10,000 fine, or both. The corporation could be fined up to $100,000

Significantly, however, the Rooney bill would not in effect "criminalize" such bribes.

Hobart Rowen

WASHINGTON — The mounting U.S. trade deficit has touched off the first serious economic policy debate inside the Carter administration since the scrap over junking the $50 tax rebate.

No one disputes the fact that the size of the trade deficit is staggering—some $27 billion to $30 billion is a likely range for this year—reflecting primarily huge imports of oil, and secondarily a massive American appetite for foreign goods of all kinds.

The question is what, if anything, should be done about it? At a recent high-level discussion, one administration official who is concerned about the deficit said: "If we don't address this problem, it will cause us trouble."

AND AN OFFICIAL who is not worried about the deficit retorted: "If we do address this problem, it will cause us trouble."

President Carter is uneasy about the psychological impact of month-after-month-record deficit numbers. numbers. He is now studying special reports, done at his request, by Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal, Commerce Secretary Juanita Kreps, and Economic Council Chairman Charles L. Schultze.

The U.S. posture is actually far removed from what Henri Simonet, chairman of the Common Market Council of Ministers, described as an American policy of "aggresive neglect."

SIMONET AND other Europeans cite an interview with Treasury Secretary Blumenthal published in The Washington Post, in which he said he was willing to let the dollar float down further in foreign exchange markets against a stronger German mark and Japanese yen.

But as the D-mark and the yen move up in value, boosting the price of German and Japanese goods in world markets, businessmen and industrialists in those countries put the heat on their own politicians.

In Germany, the anxiety has escalated because of an exceedingly rapid rise in the rate of the mark against the dollar since July 15. "Much of this concern comes down to the Germans' fear that the Volkswagen will lose out in the U.S. market to the Japanese cars," says a U.S. observer.

U.S. CRITICISM of Blumenthal began to surface with speeches by Assistant Secretary of Commerce Frank Weil and Rep. Henry S. Reuss (D-Wis.). Then, Federal Reserve Board Chairman Arthur F. Burns spoke of the need to protect the "integrity" of the dollar.

Burns, highly respected—even revered—abroad, caused some confusion with his remarks. He did not, as one news agency reported, call for the United States to "support" the dollar, which means active, rather than occasional intervention. Later, he said there is no intention at the Fed to depart from present policy, but underlined "so far."

The question Carter is trying to decide is what, if anything, can actually be done about the trade deficit that won't make matters worse. The long-run solution is a substantial reduction is the staggering $45 billion oil bill. The flow of Alaskan oil may save $2 billion to $3 billion this year, but that won't last long.

IN THE MONTHS ahead and through 1978, the prospect is that the United States will still have more than an edge in economic growth over Europe. That means that U.S. imports will continue to grow, and U.S. exports may show no gain.

The danger is that the White House will get politically sensitized to the big trade deficit numbers, and reverse what has been essentially the right approach. The underlying problem is not some trade or current account statistic. The problem is that the oil-consuming world still hasn't found a way of coping with OPEC and its year-after-year enormous current account surpluses. All consuming countries, and that includes West Germany and Japan, have to find a way of dividing up the burden without scratching each others' eyes out.

So far, the West is in disarray on this crucial issue. It ought to be an object lesson (but it won't be) to the oil cartel, demonstrating the havoc it creates by irresponsible pricing policy.

Lawyer's advice wise in real estate contracts

Moneywise

by Robert Edwards

I plan to lend a son money interest free to build a $32,000 house. I am giving him the land worth $10,000. The house will remain in my name, although my will leaves it to him. He will pay me for insurance, taxes, and a portion of the cost monthly. How can he claim payments as an income-tax deduction? How much of the $100 payable on the cost can we call interest? How can we avoid gift and inheritance taxes when the house is transferred to his name? No mortgage from a bank will be involved.

—L.D.

You may take the deductions for taxes because you are the owner of the house. Your son cannot take those deductions because he is not the owner. Your gifts of the land and any unpaid balance will be included in a total gift-estate tax compilation later. You can avoid giift and inheritance taxes only on gifts up to $3,000 annually. As stated, your plan won't work. You should investigate the possibility of establishing a real estate contract carrying competitive interest with payments to you. You may then give your son up to $3,000 annually to make the payments. Under those conditions, he could deduct interest and taxes. For more complete details, consult a lawyer knowledgeable in real estate contracts and income tax law. This answer is too brief to cover all details.

I retired last December and plan to work until I earn $3,000 which is the limit without affecting my social-security benefits. I receive benefits from my company's profit-sharing plan. Does the income from the plan have to be counted in the $3,000 I am allowed to earn?

— F.D.

No — only earned income from personal services is counted in applying the retirement test for social-security benefits. Payments from the profit-sharing plan do not count.

We inherited a four-unit apartment building 60 miles away plus two lots next to it, one with a rented house on it. (Numerous details of dollar values, mortgage payments, taxes, insurance follow.) Should we pay off the mortgage, sell the property and rebuy an apartment house in the city where we live, carry on as is — or what? We are concerned that the mortgage payments could be a burden if the apartments are not always rented.

— J.P.

Although many specifics are invoolved, generally I would recommend carrying on your present arrangement. Rather than invest all of your $36,000 savings to pay off the existing mortgage, use those as a reserve against a possible lack of rental income to cover expenses. Note — property is increasing in value and, every year or two you can raise rents while mortgage payments remain constant. Part of the income from the apartment house can be charged to depreciation to shelter portions of the income from taxes. Part of the mortgage payments build up your equity in the property.

Finding a comparable investment would be difficult — if not impossible, since you acquired yours without settlement costs. As long as you can get away once or twice a month to arrange for or perform necessary maintenance, your paid manager should care for routine collections of rents, etc. From your explanation, I would guess your fear of being overextended is unwarranted.

Double bubble soap opera

by Vernon Scott

It takes monumental courage for a beautiful blonde actress to import a woman who looks exactly like herself into the competitive world of show business, but Deidre Hall has done just that.

Deidre stars in "Days of Our Lives" and was instrumental in bringing her twin sister, Andrea Hall Lovell, into the soap opera giving it a double bubble aspect.

So far as Deidre and Andrea know, it is the first time twin sisters have worked together dramatically in a television series.

The girls are mirror twins, as opposed to identical or fraternal twins. But they look enough alike to fool all but close friends and lovers.

"When either of us look in a mirror we see the face of our twin," Deidre explained. "We have duplicate moles on our hips, but mine is on the right side and Andra's is on the left."

Andrea verified this observation with a toss of her pretty blonde hair.

The twins were born in Milwaukee and reared in Leesburg and Lake Worth, Fla. Deidre split for Hollywood to become a model and actress 11 years ago. Andrea attended college and now teaches mentally handicapped children in Tallahassee.

Both are divorced. Aside from being single and looking alike, the twins don't have a great deal in common.

Deidre has assumed the polish and savoir faire of a Hollywood actress. She's relaxed and laid back. Andrea is shy, bashful and happy to let her sister do most of the talking.

The girls were dressed alike until they were 12 years old. Curiously, they were not inseparably close as children. There was a competitive spirit between them with Deidre seeking school offices, beauty queen contests and the like.

"We've become closer as adults than we were as youngsters," Deidre said. "It wasn't a traumatic break when I left for California."

In recent years Andrea has spent her summer vacations visiting her twin, staying with Deidre in her San Fernando valley home. Last year Andrea made a guest appearance on Deidre's "Electra Woman" summer television show for kids.

When NBC decided to incorporate a story line twin for Deidre in "Days of Our Lives" they assumed she would play both roles. The producers were delighted to discover she had a twin.

"I don't think twins have ever worked together on a drama before," Deidre said.

"And not too many twins have ever succeed in show business individually or separately except for Carol Wayne."

Andrea, who had very little to say during a noonday break, spoke up, "I've taught school for six years now and hadn't even thought about acting. I have a masters degree in educational administration and enjoy my work.

"When the opportunity came along to appear with Deidre in the series I thought it would be a good opportunity to make some money during the summer. At the moment I plan to go back to my teaching job.

"But I think I might like to stay and work in show business. I've been going to a private coach for acting lessons. I didn't want Deidre to teach me for fear of picking up her mannerisms."

Andrea is doing beautifully," her twin said. "She has real good instincts. Most of her scenes are played with me."

"It's easier for me to work with Deidre than other members of the cast," Andrea said.

"The others have been friendly and helpful, but Deidre makes suggestions and gives me confidence in myself. We talk about our characters at home but we don't run lines for each other."

Deidre has mixed emotions about her twin's desires to establish herself as an actress.

"In all honesty," she said, "I'm a bit ambivalent about Andrea's acting career. After years of establishing my individual identity it seems strange to have another actress around who looks exactly like me."

Andrea nodded her head sympathetically. Should Andrea become as accomplished an actress as her twin, what's to prevent her from taking roles that might go to Deidre?

Since Andrea's appearance on the daily soap opera, Deidre's agent has been inundated with offers for commercials, television dramas and situation comedies requiring the talents of twin actresses.

"There aren't too many twin girls who can act in this town," Deidre said, smiling. "I'd love to accept some of these opportunities with Andrea. But again, I wonder what effect it would have on me as an individual actress.

"It's a great gimmick but I have to think of the long run."

Andrea said she, too, would like to appear in other shows with her sister.

Laughing, Deidre turned to her twin and said, "Look, when we were younger I was the competitive kid and you weren't. Let's keep it that way."

Mark Hamill

After seeing "Star Wars," we were wondering where we have seen Mark Hamill (Luke Skywalker) before. We have spent many sleepless nights over this, so if you can't answer, we may check into the nearest hospital.

Sleep at last! The stellar hero has had more earthly roles. You may remember Mark Hamill (who's now 25) in "General Hospital," "Owen Marshall," "Room 222," "The Magician," "Cannon," "The FBI," "The Bill Cosby Show," "Headmaster," "The Texas Wheelers" and/or "Eight Is Enough," not to mention several commercials.

Could you please settle a bet for me and my brother? I say that Lynda Carter ("Wonder Woman") was once Miss America, but my brother, of course, disagrees. Who's right?

S.B.

Lynda Carter

Hmmm--there seems to be a fine distinction to be made here. Lynda Carter certainly copped a lot of beauty prizes (she was Miss Phoenix, Miss Arizona and Miss World-U.S.A. a few years ago), but she did not compete to be the Belle of the Boardwalk in the Miss America contest held in Atlantic City. Oh, well, ya can't win 'em all.

I'm just dying to get Valerie Bertinelli's (of "One Day At a Time") address. Would you please give it to me?

M.K.

Try sending your letters to Valerie in care of her agent, Herb Tannen and Associates, 6640 Sunset Blvd., Suite 203, Hollywood, Calif., 90028.

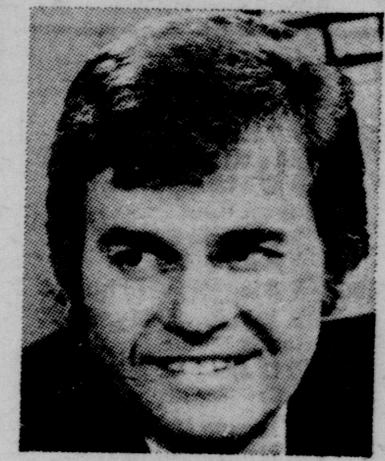
Would you please settle a feud in our family? Is Dick Clark in his 40's or 50's?

D.M.



Dick Clark

If only every problem could be solved so easily! Dick was born in 1929.

Editor's Note . . .

For a living he does illustrations of animals and microscopic life but John Pfiffner's heart and soul is in the basement of his Prospect Heights home where his paintings are stored. Staff writer Debbe Jonak writes about this artist, his life and his work on page 3.

Business writer Lea Tonkin tells Leisure readers how to turn their backyard into the back woods by designing a landscape that will attract wildlife. Lea, who has spent the last several seasons transforming her yard in Crystal Lake into a nature area, tells how to get started on the project, what information is needed and where to seek advice. Ready for an off beat vacation? Why not try ballooning at a ranch in Colorado that specializes in this high flying sport? Genie Campbell, editor of the Herald's Medley section, writes about the balloonists who have created this new, unusual resort in the Rockies. Page 9.

'My paintings show the general flavor of the times'

—John Pfiffner

John Pfiffner, painter, illustrator and former jazz musician.

Story by Debbe Jonak

They tell of nights thick with cigarette smoke and the syncopated sighs of saxophones.

They record an era of dreams in the 1930s, one of fear in the 1940s and a time of anger in the 1960s.

The paintings flung in determined patterns across walls, stuffed recklessly in corners and stored two-deep on the basement floors are as much an American history book of the past 40 years as they are a biography of John Pfiffner, illustrator and painter.

"I suppose I'm extremely interested in the direction the nation is going," Pfiffner said as he sat pipe in mouth on his back porch. "My paintings show the general flavor of the times as you pass through them."

He is better known for his exacting reproductions of animals and microscopic life forms than he is for the slightly abstracted figures on his canvases.

Pfiffner regularly illustrates for the Field Museum of Natural History in Chicago. He also designs displays for the institution, such as the Animal Kingdom exhibit.

He has illustrated a book on frogs for the Belgium government, a book of animals for Harper and Row Publishers, The Psychology of Life, for the Scott Foresman textbook form and a book of Ornithology.

He said he was the first to draw a three-dimensional DNA molecule, now familiar to college Biology 201 students. He won awards for those and other illustrations in the book "Genetics" by Robert King.

Most recently he illustrated "The Cat: History, Biology and Behavior," by Muriel Beadle, published by Simon and Schuster.

But Pfiffner sets aside illustration as just a creative way of putting meat on the table — something he took on when he became married and responsible.

"The more I'm able to do what I want to do, the more I'll do as little scientific illustration as I can. I'll just paint and write," he said.

"I continue to paint now and I sell a few paintings. But I don't exhibit to sell. I'm not out to sell them — they're a private matter. If I ever had to sell for a living the fun would be lost."

Pfiffner lives comfortably as a free-lance illustrator. He has turned in years of travelling the country as a poor artist for a somewhat middle-class existence.

There's the summer cottage, the landscaped backyard. But there's also the tattered mattress stuffed in a clearing amid dozens of paintings in the basement, where the Pfiffners prefer to sleep during the summer — a left-over from much more off-beat days.

His younger years were as free-form as his house. He wandered about painting, playing in jazz bands and searching for that ever-evasive self.

His paintings record how he grew older and how the nation grew older through the Depression, World War II and the Vietnam War.

The story unfolded as he walked from painting to painting in his home.

Raised in Stevens Point, Wisconsin, he attended school at the State Teachers College and Choinard Art Institute, Los Angeles, before hitting the road.

His early paintings were sometimes cubist, sometimes mirrors of the scenery around him — which changed often in the forties. Mexico, California, New York . . .

"I was always playing piano to make a living. It was the time of life when it was a matter of not knowing if you're going to get this and that. You don't know what the possibilities are, what's going to happen," he said.

He paused for a moment. "It's kind of a shame when life becomes fossilized and you do know what's going to happen," he added finally.

Strong themes began to emerge from

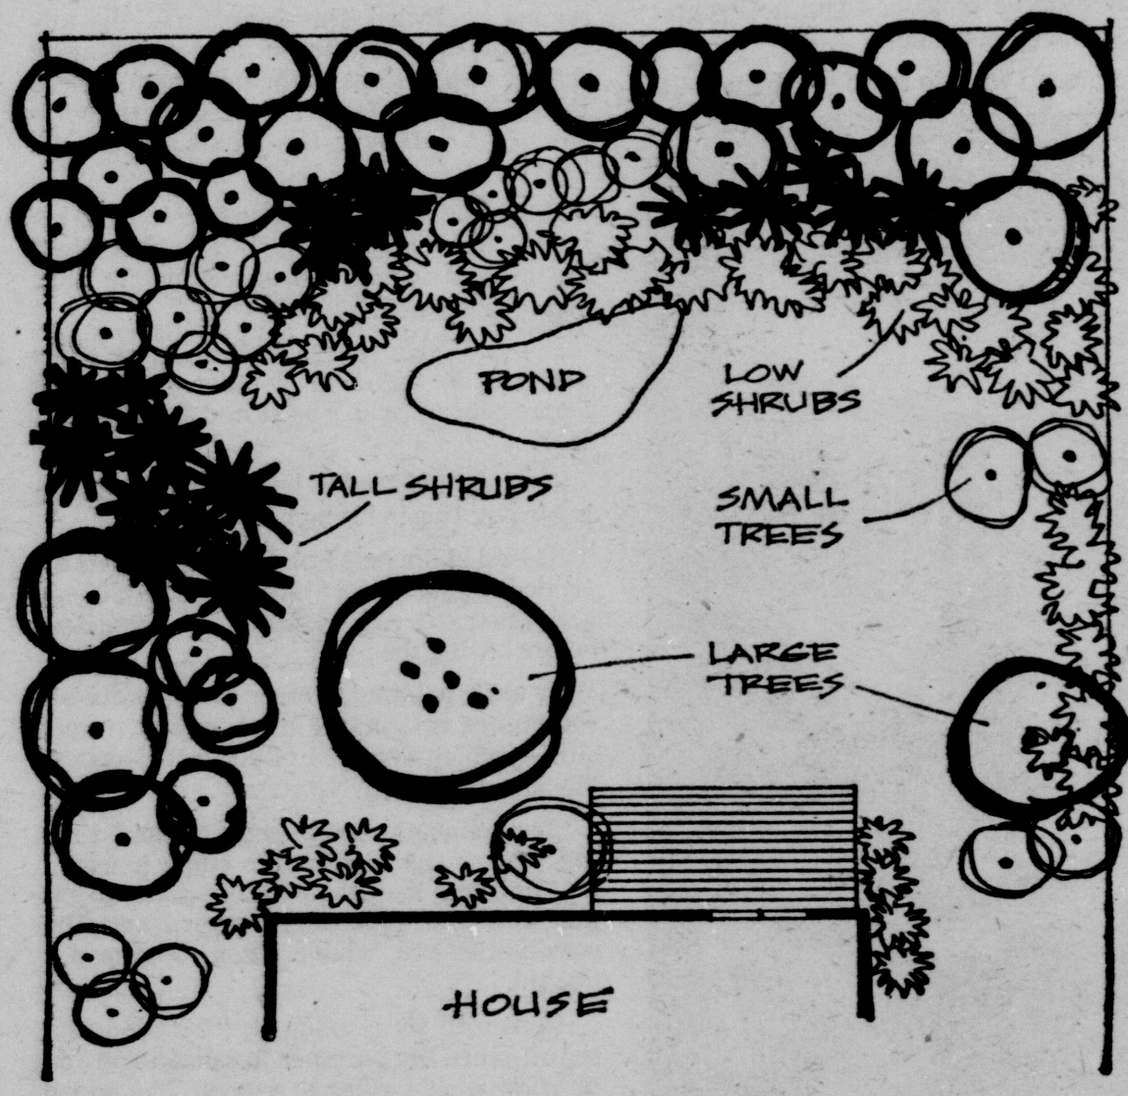
Call of the wild

The animals will love you and the neighbors will envy you when you turn your backyard into a haven for wildlife



A backyard Wildlife plan, as suggested by the National Wildlife Federation, includes food, water and cover for birds and small mammals. Some plantings will attract butterflies, too.

Photos by Dom Najolia
Story by Lea Tonkin

Butterflies drifting lazily from one showy blossom to another . . . the sweet call of a songbird . . . robins flocking to a nearby mountain ash decked out in bright orange berries . . . a squirrel making its rounds amidst a cluster of stately oaks . . . this could be your own small nature sanctuary.

Impossible, you say. The crabgrass is running amok, and that's the only back-to-nature trend you've seen all year. Even the bumblebees shy away from your yard.

Whether you have a small lot or an estate, a backyard plan will ease the transition to a more abundant wildlife habitat. There's plenty of time in the current growing season to begin the makings of a private nature sanctuary, right at home.

"It's definitely a good idea to have a plan," says Tony Fulmer, assistant manager at the Charles Klehm & Son nursery, Arlington Heights and Algonquin roads, Arlington Heights. "If you know where you're going, you can put in a few things this year, and a few more next year."

Begin by boning up on soil conditions in your area, plantings and other landscaping projects which will be attractive to wildlife.

Local nurseries and libraries are good starting points. Talk to experts at nearby nature centers. The U.S. Soil Conservation Service, in Lake Zurich, the University of Illinois Cooperative Extension Service in Rolling Meadows and suburban birdwatching enthusiasts and environmentalists can supply information.

Contoneaster, honeysuckle, viburnums, weigelia, barberry and highbush cranberry are among the shrubs suggested by Fulmer to attract birds to your backyard. Trees which will have berries attractive to birds include mountain ash, crabapples, and hawthorns.

Your list of back yard greenery will be important when you get down to the nitty-gritty of mapping out a landscape plan. Personal preferences, the size of your budget and your yard and soil conditions will have an impact on the final results, Fulmer says.

"One common mistake is to over-plant," Fulmer warns. "people see how little their bushes are, so they plant more." A confused jungle of plants will eventually appear in your yard, if bushes and trees have been clumped too closely.

Homeowners interested in birdwatching can create a backyard habitat suitable for various species of birds and small mammals, according to Ron Gebhardt, district conservationist at the U.S. Soil Conservation Service office, 560 B W. Main St., Lake Zurich.

"Songbirds are often found in older residential areas, because they like the large trees and shrubs," Gebhardt said. "Some like open areas. You can strike a balance between the two."

General information on soil conditions and suitable plantings is available from Gebhardt's office. A free pamphlet called "Invite Birds to your Home" is distributed at the Lake Zurich office.

Once you've researched soil conditions and suitable plantings, you're ready to begin a backyard landscape plan. Start with a plat of survey for your house or a drawing of your lot. The location and size of the house, trees and shrubs, window locations in the house and features which will affect the plan should be included in the drawing.

Wildlife enthusiasts may decide to work out their own landscape plan, Gebhardt noted, or they may call on local nurseries and landscape architects for counsel. For more enjoyment, birdbaths and bushes which will attract birds can be located within view of your house.

You'll gain more than a glimpse of butterflies and birds as a reward for backyard landscaping efforts, Gebhardt says. He counts erosion control, increased land value and pleasant natural surroundings as an added bonus.

For those who'd like a little coaching in the art of designing and creating this backyard bonanza of wildlife, an easy-to-understand pamphlet published by the National Wildlife Federation is just the ticket. There's no charge for single copies of the reprinted "Invite Wildlife to Your Backyard" article from National Wildlife Magazine. You can write to the federation at 1412 16th St. N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036.

More than a million copies of the article have been distributed throughout the U.S. according to Craig Tufts, coordinator of the federation's backyard wildlife program. Although the pamphlet is an introduction rather than an all-inclusive report, it shows what can be accomplished in a backyard as small as 100 by 120 feet.

The NWF backyard wildlife refuge plan is divided into three stages. In Stage I, you start out with a sodded yard. Adding suggested trees and shrubs, you'll have the beginnings of a backyard wildlife habitat.

You'll need to add bird feeders and birdbaths during this early stage. Robins and other ground feeding birds will start to come, perhaps accompanied by cottontails.

"There's an awful lot of plants — both native and exotic plants — that can be used for landscaping around the house," suggests the NWF's Tufts. "They will provide food and cover for birds, small mammals and even butterflies."

"Roadside mowing in many parts of the country has wiped out plants that attract butterflies," Tufts said. "You can actually plant a butterfly garden."

Another hint from Tufts: look for plantings offering wildlife food as well as beauty. Firethorn, honeysuckles, flowering dogwood and shadbush, or juneberry, are among the bushes he favors for berries attractive to birds.

If your backyard already has trees, and shrubs, try to work them into your total plan, NWF suggests. Undesirable plantings may be relocated or removed.

The mature heights of all plantings should be taken into consideration. Varied heights of trees and bushes will give a pleasing appearance. Leave open space in your backyard plan so you will have a good view from the house.

Your enthusiasm, the legal availability of native shrubs and your pocketbook will affect your success in this initial stage of mini-wildlife refuge development.

In Stage II of the NWF plan, it has taken 5 to 10 years for your plantings to reach a fairly mature stage. Now's the time to thin out vegetation if it has become too dense. Flowers and fruits will attract birds and insects and in turn, reptiles and amphibians. A small pond may replace the birdbath. Rabbits and chipmunks may find a home here.

You'll have a long wait to reach the Stage III — approximately 30 to 40 years — if you planted hardwoods and fruit trees recommended in stage one. If mature trees were already in your yard, and you added bushes, you can reach this stage in five to 10 years. Rabbits and squirrels, garter snakes, toads, butterflies and an increasing number of birds may come your way.

The four elements required by wildlife include food, water, cover — as protection from natural enemies, and nesting areas. Be realistic — you can attract a variety of wildlife to your yard, but don't expect every conceivable species to accept the invitation.

Even a small yard or an apartment window feeder can provide good habitat for some wildlife. If your funds are limited, spread out the plantings over several years.

Share your enthusiasm for backyard wildlife. Bring the neighbors in on your plans. Maybe they'll decide to come up with a complementary plan. You'll stand a better chance of hosting wildlife when the surrounding area provides good habitat.

Then get started. A weekend trip to the local nursery or the library, a workable backyard plan, a few plantings, and you're on your way to an exciting backyard experience. §

movie guide

Designed to help readers decide which movies they want to see, this guide includes a listing of movies currently playing in the Northwest suburban area plus capsule summaries and comments. Films reviewed by Genie Campbell are rated excellent, four stars; good, three stars; fair, two stars; and poor, one star.

"New York, New York" — He is a selfish saxophone player, she is a bright young singer in the big band era immediately following World War II. It is an ill-fated love story but director Martin Scorcese rarely allows the jazz-driven pace to falter. Great performances by Robert De Niro and Liza Minnelli among cardboard sets and golden glows that evote the fashions and mood of the 1940s. ★★★

"The Spy Who Loved Me" — Roger Moore returns as 007 in a lavishly budgeted, rousingly constructed comic book come-to-life film. This time, Moore joins forces with a svelte Russian agent to quash Curt Jurgen's plans for world destruction. (PG).

"One on One" — Robby Benson co-wrote and stars in this college basketball story, a kind of "Rocky" on the courts, in which good guys finish first and love conquers all. The story doesn't have to be believed to be enjoyed, and the appealing performances help. (PG).

"Sorcerer" — Big, colorful, but impersonal suspense thriller about four outcasts trucking nitroglycerine through a South American jungle. Roy Scheider gives a strong performance, the visual effects are vividly convincing, and the tension groans to hair-raising proportions. But director William Friedkin forgets to clearly unravel the story as he manipulates your pulse. (PG). ★★

"Star Wars" — Director George Lucas (American Graffiti") pulled out all stops in mounting this space fantasy about intergalactic warfare, and the dazzling filmmaking, technical wizardry and rousing adventure make for one of the most spectacular entertainments of this or any other year. Not a heavy, heady "2001" trip, it aims to entertain, and the sky is the limit. (PG). ★★★★

"The Lake Remake of Beau Geste" — Marty Feldman directed and co-wrote this wildly uneven but funny send-up of Hollywood's Foreign Legion sagas. Essentially a string of gags and set pieces in the Mel Brooks vein, the film starts marvelously but progressively loses steam. (PG). ★★½

Paintings:

Pfiffner's paintings in the 1940s. Rejected from military service in World War II with a 4F rating, he painted his feelings about it as it raged overseas.

In "Air Raid" a crowd of agonized faces look upward, waiting.

Pfiffner played with various jazz bands during the war and throughout the jazz era. His painting was influenced. A black woman wails into the microphone on one canvas. On another, a black man cradles his saxophone, his cheeks taut as he forces the notes out. Both emanate a sort of nostalgic mystery.

"They were radical people in the way they dressed and the way they talked. They had their own society," he said of the jazz enthusiasts — or beat-niks as they were called then.

"They were a people set apart and they were just as misunderstood by the older generation then as the rock generation is today."

In 1951, Pfiffner left his last jazz band and wanderings to get married and raise a family.

"We had to settle down, didn't we? I got married and had a few responsibilities — the steady job was the thing to do."

He landed a job with Field Museum. "I worked myself to the top spot — the staff illustrator," he said. "There I learned scientific illustration, which has been my bread and butter ever since."

In 1963, Pfiffner decided to try it on his own once more, though, and quit to work freelance.

Though settled down into a middle-class setting, he never really took on the middle-class mindset.

When the Vietnam War exploded the 1960s into student riots, flower children and protest marchers, he found himself a sympathizer. His paintings evolved with the times from jazz themes to war themes.

"I was completely sympathetic to the civil rights proposition. I was one of the first dissenters of the Vietnam conflict," he said. "My painting showed it.

He used the canvas as a protest placard. A frightening soldier with grenade in hand screams from one painting.

In "The Hippie and the Sphinx" two naked flower children loll about in the grass, while a middle-aged couple in the background watch a distant war.

It's Pfiffner's favorite painting. "I don't often like my paintings — this one I like," he said, explaining, "Once I'm done with a painting and I look at it for awhile, I get bored with it."

The youths' oblivion to the war raging behind them expresses their rejection of society's mores.

"The youths are turning away from the myths of the past and becoming themselves as a complete group," he said.

"The Sucker Buck" is a statement on U.S. hypocrisy in the Vietnam era. A passenger pigeon is followed closely by the atom bomb — symbolizing man's potential destruction of himself, just as he destroyed the passenger pigeon.

But the loud cries of the sixties grew slowly hoarse, then silent. The war ended and exhausted reformers stopped screaming about the world's injustices. They faded into society, becoming more involved with self-searching self-potential.

Pfiffner's paintbrush also took on less volatile subjects. Landscapes. Huge close-ups of faces. A large close-up of his own face.

"My ideas about what I want to express change. It depends on the way my philosophy changes. It also depends on the temper of the times," Pfiffner said.

"I'm semi-retired now, I enjoy my life these days. I don't take my life so seriously at all," he said. "I forget the fellow who said, 'Live anonymously and you'll enjoy your life.' "

And so he lives fairly anonymously, semi-retired, in his oil and acrylic castle, his shady, peaceful backyard and the workshop he calls his "Rat's Nest." §

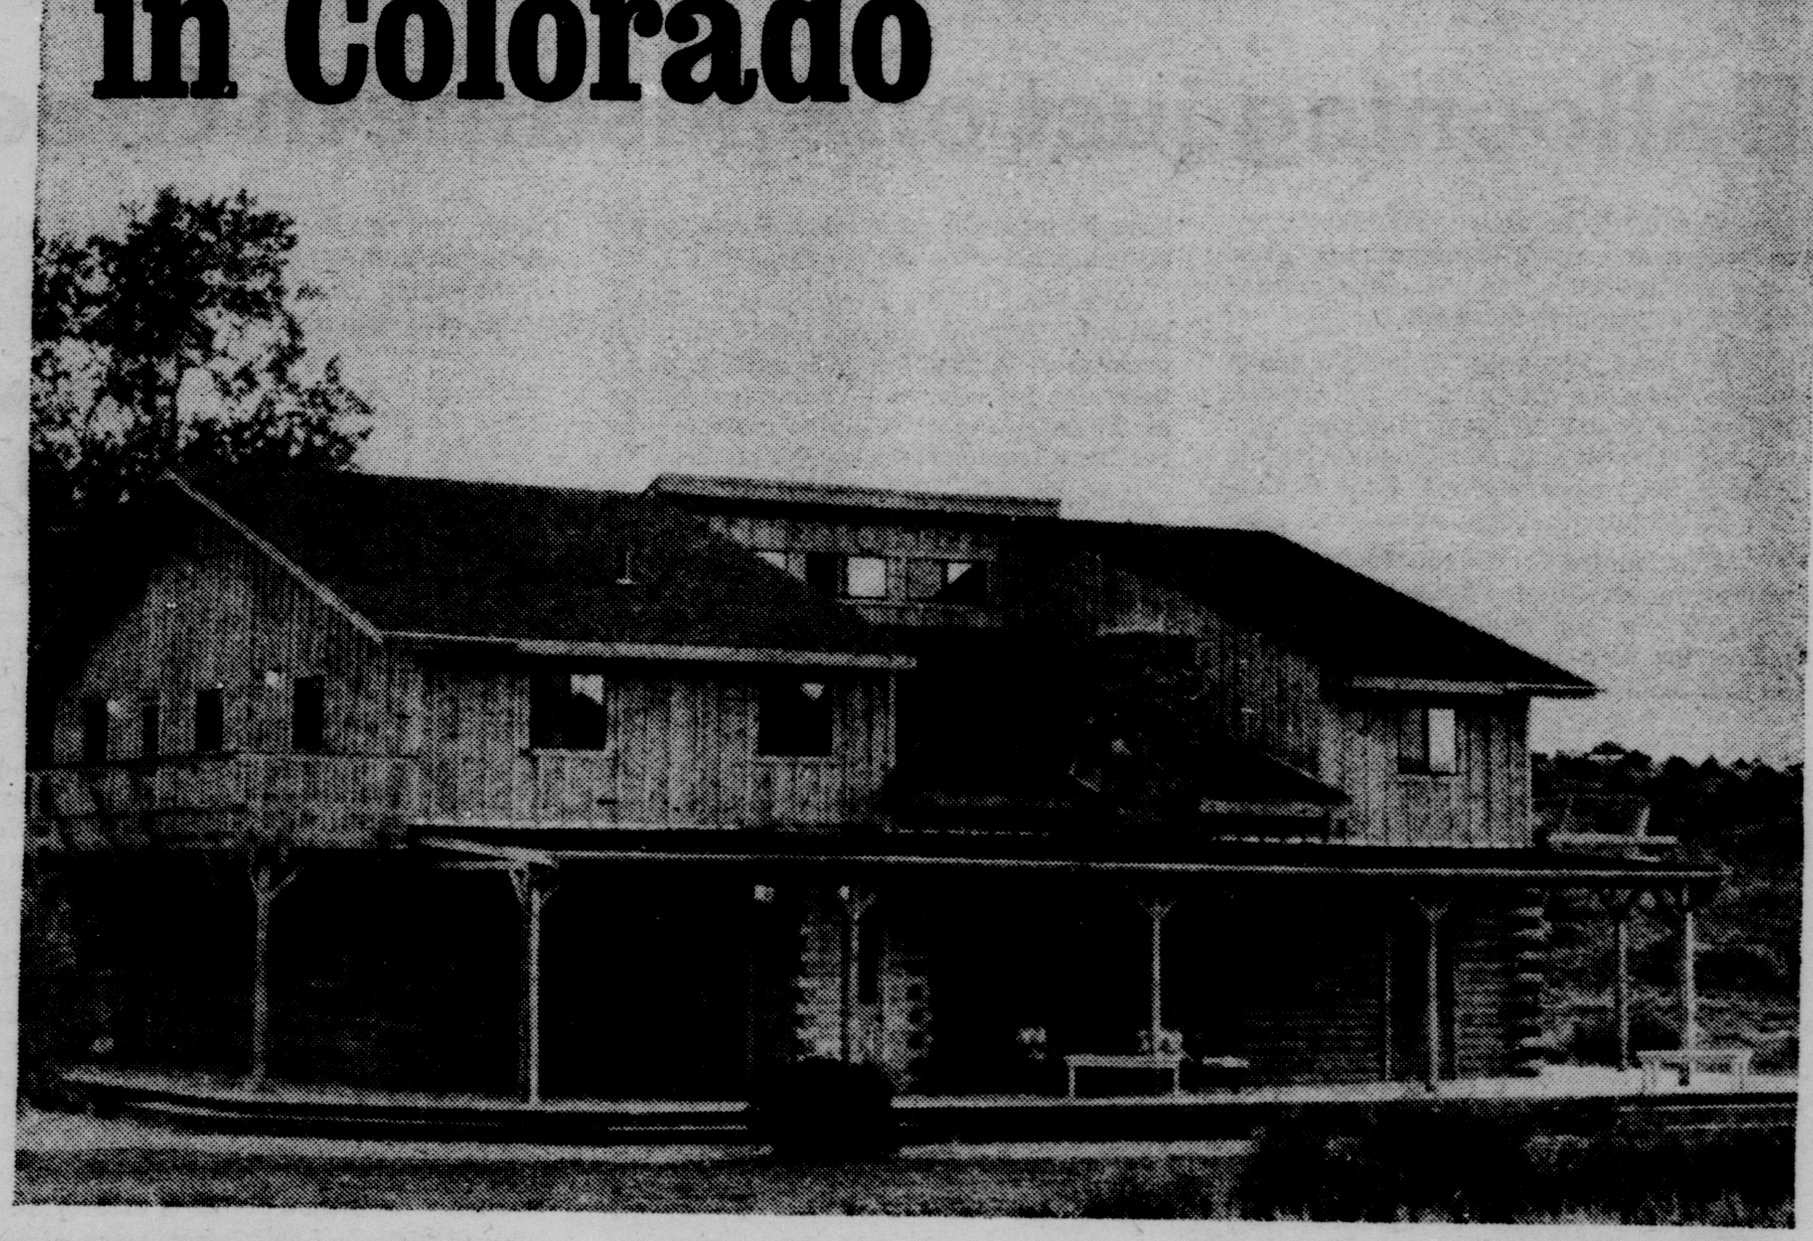
Going 'balloony' in Colorado



by Genie Campbell

Link Baum doesn't know what possessed him. One day while pouring over classified ads for used cars, his eyes strayed from automobiles to aviation and settled upon an ad for a single passenger hot air balloon.

He had never been up in a balloon before, but the original owner was very accommodating. "You fly it — you buy it."

After a few false starts and gentle bumping along the ground, Baum sailed peacefully away into the horizon. He loved it. And he forgot all about the car.

It's lucky for many adventurous vacationers that he did, too. Today, eight years later, Baum and fellow balloonist David Levin, both originally from New Jersey, operate the only hot air balloon ranch in the country — and as far as they know, even the world.

Located on 150 secluded acres in the San Luis Valley near Del Norte, 200 miles from Denver, Colo., The Balloon Ranch, as it is simply and appropriately named, caters to novice balloonists, persons who have never glided in a hot air balloon in their lives, but are game to try and primed for an off beat, memorable vacation.

"The ranch is an adventurous place. We have everyone from film producers to school teachers coming here. People who work inside a lot like to go someplace and do something besides just sit again," said Baum during a recent visit to Chicago.

Open a year the ranch, on the La Garita Creek near the Rio Grande River, also features rafting, fishing, tennis, horseback riding, hiking and bike riding to fill in and around ballooning time.

Early morning and late afternoon are the best times to try ballooning because that's when wind conditions are usually right. Yet with other activities available one will not waste the day even if the weather is not conducive to ballooning.

When Baum bought his first balloon, there were less than a 100 in the world. Today there are almost 700 hot air balloons. Five of those are at The Balloon Ranch.

Upon arriving at the lodge that accommodates twenty-six people at one time, vacationers watch a movie about ballooning to intensify their excitement for the sport. It is rarely necessary. Most are already psyched for the adventure ahead, according to Baum.

The following morning, guests learn how to rig and inflate a balloon. The simple mechanics are explained. Unlike many sports, ballooning can be enjoyed the very first time out. Practice is nice, but not necessary. With a pilot on board, people can sail away immediately.

Most people have little apprehension about going up for the first time because as Baum explains the situation, "We're away from all electrical lines and immediate dangers. It's like the beginner's slope at a ski resort. If necessary, you can bounce around for 5 miles and never worry about getting hurt."

Experienced ballooners are taken on extended trips in the adjoining foothills.

What is so appealing about ballooning?

"It's like making yourself into a cloud," described Baum. "Flying is like imitating a bird. You may feel the sensation of soaring in an airplane but never the gentle feeling of just drifting. There is no sensation of air speed and it is very peaceful and silent. Because the balloon is traveling at the same speed as the wind, you don't hear it. It's as safe as riding in a parachute that's already open," added Baum.

"All you have to do is pull one little cord, the burner throttle, to regulate the lift and descent. You learn to fly by instinct more than you do by instrument."

No special qualifications, equipment or athletic skills are required to balloon. The Balloon Ranch has catered to guests from ages 5 to 74. Familes find it an activity they can share.

Vacationers opting for an eight-day, seven-night package can complete 10 hours of instruction, pass a written exam and receive a FAA pilot certification. It happens quite often. Graduates have even been known to buy balloons of their own.

"We call it going balloony," said Baum who ought to know. Shortly after buying his first balloon he traveled throughout Europe with it — moving it from different sites in a Land Rover. He drew crowds wherever he went, but he did see the Swiss Alps from the best vantage point.

A year later in 1970, in a flight sponsored by Mick Jagger of The Rolling Stones, Baum at 22 became the youngest man to ever cross the English Channel in a hot air balloon. When asked how high he has flown, Baum replied, "10,000 feet or two miles."

Yet his partner, Levin, surpassed that in February, when at a height of 17,000 feet, he piloted the first hot air balloon over Pike's Peak. And head pilot at the ranch, Frank Rider, last year crossed the infamous Bermuda Triangle in a balloon on a course from the Bahamas to Florida.

Baum expects the popularity of vacation ballooning to mushroom much like the sport of river rafting. In both instances, nature is spotlighted.

"Here (referring to Chicago) everything is so tightly packaged and packed together. The world is only as high as the tallest building. One loses perspective where things are and how they relate. When you're able to fly above it all, you see things better. You begin to see patterns on the ground. You notice things you never would have before," said Baum.

The Balloon Ranch is open 9 months out of the year, closing only from Feb. 15 to May 15 when strong winds make ballooning impossible.

And believe it or not, winter ballooning does have its advantages. Extended trips are possible because less gas is consumed in winter and cooler air offers more control. There is no chill factor present because one moves with the wind, and therefore doesn't feel it.

And you don't have to wake up as early. In summer the best weather conditions for ballooning are at sunrise and sunset. In winter one is able to balloon a greater part of the day.

Cross country and alpine skiing are also available at the ranch in winter, along with ice skating and snowmobiling. Beginning this winter the ranch will offer a special "learn to ski, learn to balloon" package week utilizing the nearby skiing facilities at Lake Tahoe.

Lodge rates are quite reasonable though ballooning, like many sports, does not come cheap.

Three days with two nights of lodging (all meals included) is $70 per person based on double occupancy. A two-day introductory course in ballooning for groups of two to six is $75 per person. Private lessons are $190 an hour and the complete certification course is $800.

Ballooning just one pastime in Green Lake, Wis.

So you like to be active. You like to try new sports and activities and practice up on some old favorites. And you like a little change of scene once in a while.

Green Lake, Wis. may be just the place for you. Whether your game is golf, tennis, sailing, or scuba diving or enjoying "far out" experiences such as riding in a hot air balloon, this resort area near Fond du Lac, Wis. is packed with things to do.

You can tour the Fruit of the Woods Winery where you can sample Wisconsin cranberry wine, or you can enjoy a luxurious full-course breakfast or dinner on the Yachts of Fun excursion boat, or you can hire a know-it-all fishing guide who will cook up the best clam chowder you've ever tasted.

Lake trout fishing is excellent at Green Lake this summer and one local restaurant proprietor, Alfred Peck, is getting many takers on his offer to give one free dinner at Alfred's Supper Club to anyone who catches a 10-pound lake trout or better.

Golfers can play the state's oldest course, Tuscombia, one of the state's newest courses, Mascutin, or one of the country's most challenging, Lawsonia Links at Green Lake Center.

Sailing is big in this resort area and the Green Lake Marina, as well as Green Lake Center, has sailboats for rent. Tourists who need some sailing tips can get them merely for the asking, from some of the "old salts" on the lake, such as Bob Rogers, co-founder of the Green Lake Sailing School, Joe Norton, sailing instructor, or Pete Weinreis, one of the nation's few sail manufacturers.

Weekend

If sailing through the air is more your style go over to Green Lake's Heidel House Resort where hot air balloon pilot Dick Dehn, a licensed aeronaut, provides a ride and commentary on his seven-story tall "Majestic 1". The ride takes visitors above Green Lake, Little and Big Twin Lakes, Lake Puckaway, the Puckeann River and the Fox. The balloon is launched at sunrise and twilight and the ride lasts a minimum of one hour. Guests may help with the balloon inflation. Each flight is FAA weather briefed, insured and includes a full ground chase crew and two-way radio communications system. Cost is $85 a person or $125 for two.

Over at Green Lake Center, another resort in the Green Lake area, summer attractions range from arts and crafts classes in ceramics and copper enamelling to touring the grounds via bus or tandem bikes. You can get accommodations here in a hotel, cabin or old estate home and camping is also available.

"Yacht's Of Fun" excursion cruises on Green lake depart at 1:30 p.m. daily from Heidel House dock for 90-minute public tours. Cost is $3.50 adults and $1.75 for children between age 3 and 12. On Wednesday evenings at 8 p.m. a five course dinner with Cornish game hen as the entree, is served on board. Cost of the two-hour dinner cruise is $11.50. A Sunday brunch cruise, costing $7.85, departs at 9:30 a.m. Sundays through October 12. Reservations are suggested since a maximum of forty people are admitted for these meal cruises.

Reservations for the cruises and balloon rides may be made by contacting the Heidel House, Illinois Avenue, Green Lake, Wis. 54941, phone 414-294-3344.

Information on other attractions in the Green Lake area is available from the Green Lake Chamber of Commerce, Box 78 J, Green Lake, Wis. 54941.

Green Lake is about a 2½-hour drive from the Northwest suburbs. Take I-94 through Milwaukee, continue north on Rte. 41 to Fond du Lac, and then west on Rte. 23.

Hotels are overbooked in Portugal

Since the 1974 revolution disrupted Portugal's tourist trade, the government has been begging international travel agents to send back foreign travelers with their hard currency.

The result has become the classic dream-turned-nightmare.

During the first two years, the agents ignored the government's pleas. But this summer they have responded with more enthusiasm than the government really wanted and the starvation experienced by the southern Algarve's resort hotels has today turned into a severe case of indigestion.

Tourists by the tens of thousands with "confirmed bookings" are daily flocking to the 100 miles of beaches. Some of them are not getting the reception they anticipated.

For the hotel keepers, made overly cautious by two years of empty beds, accepted extra bookings as a safety net. Unfortunately, this time the cancellations did not materialize and some hotels have three to five times more guests booked than they can accommodate.

"Overbooking" — a newly coined Portuguese word — has reached the crisis level and is expected to get worse.

The government has called for an official inquiry with fines for offenders and urged the Portuguese to avoid their beaches so more rooms will be available for foreigners.

The national association of travel agents has warned the hotels could be courting diaster with their overbookings — for the contracts they signed with charter groups carry penalty clauses if agreements are not met.

A spokesman for the group said the biggest culprit was the state-run Torralta complex, which recently told twenty-four foreign agencies that their groups would have to be given alternative accommodations. A German company countered with the threat of a law suit for $200,000 while a Swedish company diverted charter flights to neighboring Spain.

Torralta's troubles were multiplied by militant workers sporadically cutting off lights and water to the high rise buildings. They were demanding immediate payment of back wages the complex had been unable to pay due to the lack of tourists.

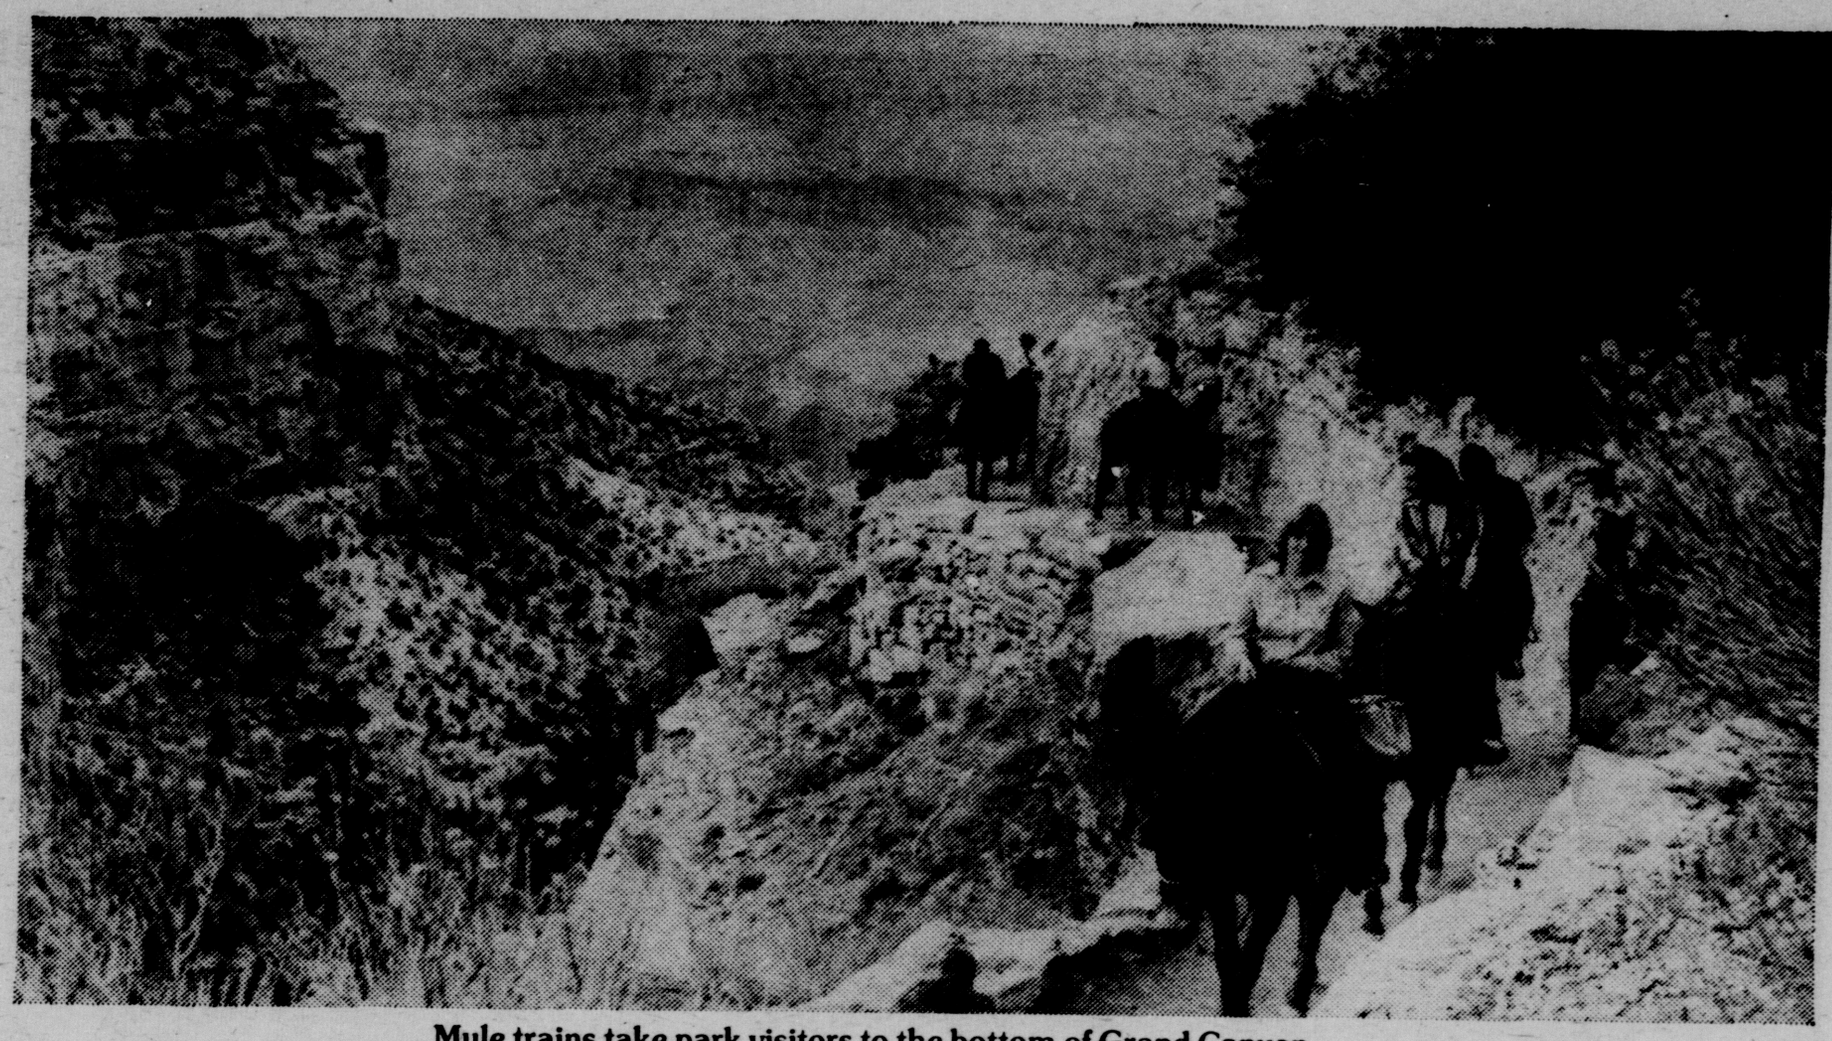
Many of the guests, who had to climb up to ten floors to reach their rooms, did not appear to support the workers' cause. One frustrated German demonstrated his displeasure by punching a hotel receptionist in the nose. Others simply checked out and went home.

As the problems mounted, the national hotel association worried the penalty clauses could be the last straw for the financially strapped tourist industry.

"If things go this way, by October the hotel industry will be bankrupt," association president Oliveira Santos said.

For the government, a setback in the tourism revival would be a body blow. It is depending heavily on the estimated $500 million plus to be spent by tourists to bolster its revolution-shattered economy.

But no matter what the future might bring, the showing so far this year has been spectacular. For even as the overbooking scandal brewed, the government announced that in the first five months that foreign tourism jumped 51 per cent to 400,000 visitors. (UPI)



Mule trains take park visitors to the bottom of Grand Canyon.

Leave car home when visiting national parks

by Murray J. Brown

If you are among the millions of Americans who will visit our national parks this year, why not leave your car at home and go by train, bus or bike.

Michael Frome says you will get more enjoyment out of your visit if you do. Frome is one of the country's foremost authors on the cnivronment, a long-time dedicated conservationist and a special champion of the national parks.

He feels that heavy auto traffic and pollution have already endangered the natural values that the parks are designed to preserve for future generations.

The National Park Service says nearly 270 million visitors — which includes repeaters — were recorded in 1976. Nearly 280 million are predicted in 1977.

"Autos for years seemed to give us freedom and independence but when they create traffic jams and other problems in the parks, the experience of serenity in nature that visitors expect is seriously diminished, if not destroyed," he said.

He said that alternatives to private transportation have proven successful.

"They help conserve fuel — save money, too — while protecting the park environment and allowing everyone to have a better time."

Frome highlights car-less travel in the 1977 edition of the "Rand McNally National Park Guide," which he has authored for the past 11 years. The updated illustrated soft-sided book covers all 300 areas of the National Park System, including natural, historic and recreation units.

According to Frome, 1970 marked the beginning of a new chapter in preserving the parks, with the introduction of free shuttle-bus service in the most congested areas of Yosemite National Park in California. Two years later free open-air tram bus tours were started in the Shark Valley section of the Everglades National Park in Florida "so visitors could better observe aquatic birds, alligators and other wildlife at close hand."

"Similar shuttle systems have been extended to a number of other parks since," he said. "They prove more liberating than restrictive. More wildlife is visible because there is less traffic to frighten it away. No bus passenger need miss seeing it, whereas drivers of private vehicles frequently do because of the demands of driving.

Frome said that buses pass in each direction ten to fifteen times daily on a regular schedule in Alaska's Mt. McKinley National Park and visitors may disembark at any point along the route "confident they will be picked up later."

At Grand Canyon, Arizona, the "Hikers Special" leaves every morning for trailheads along the West Rim, returning every evening.

"One of the most unusual shuttles operates at the Lyndon B. Johnson National Historic Site in Texas, carrying visitors on a one and one-half hour trip past Johnson's birthplace, the family cemetery and ranch house and through the ranch. Then it connects with a horse-drawn wagon ride from the boyhood home to the settlement where LBJ's grandparents lived in the 1860's," he said.

Frome said "fortunately" national parks are now developing bike routes instead of highways. Private cars have been prohibited from the east end of the Yosemite Valley and only bikes and shuttle buses may use the roads. Similar restrictions might be necessary in other areas, he said.

He noted that a number of national parks — including Grand Teton, W[illegible].; Mesa Verde, Colo.; Glacier, Mont.; and Grand Canyon — have bike rentals available.

"And in many instances," he added, "it is not even necessary to drive to the parks." For instance, he said Amtrak's Empire Builder stops at the west and east gateways to Glacier National Park; the Southwest Limited operates to Flagstaff, Ariz., from which there is daily bus service to the Grand Canyon, and the San Joaquin runs to Merced, gateway via bus to Yosemite.

Where the trains don't go, buses almost always do, Frome said. Continental Trailways and Greyhound have budget-priced passes valid for unlimited travel for periods from one week to one month, making it easy to plan one's own independent tour to national parks all over the United States, he said.

"However one reaches the parks, the main thing is to slow down and absorb the natural wonders at leisure," Frome concluded. "Take in the free films and lectures at visitors centers and join the guided walks.

"But avoid trying to see everything on a single trip — save something for next year." (UPI)

More American tourists are bound for Panama

Despite the controversy over the future of the Panama Canal, American tourists continue to come to Panama in record numbers, according to Jose Rogolio Arias, Jr., general manager of Panama's tourist bureau.

Arias said more than 100,000 American visitors are expected in 1977, the seventh consecutive year the country will enjoy an increase in tourists from the United States. He said figures already are running nearly 9 per cent over 1976, which saw a 10 per cent increase over 1975.

Reservations being taken for Moscow Olympics

Deposits are now being accepted for reservations at the Moscow Olympic Games, according to E. Wallace Lawrence, III, President of the Russian Travel Bureau, Inc.

"Interest in the 1980 Summer Games is mounting at an enormous rate," Lawrence said. "To acquaint interested U.S. citizens with the opportunities open for travel to the Moscow Games (July 19-August 13, 1980), the Russian Travel Bureau has published a special Olympic Newsletter with full details of the scheduled events and tour opportunities."

This Newsletter, available free of charge, serves a dual purpose as it also includes a "participant survey" to determine such things as desired length of stay in the Soviet Union, type of accommodations, other cities besides Moscow to be visited, and the Olympic events to be seen.

"Data from this survey," Mr. Lawrence explains, "is being supplied to Intourist, the Soviet agency for foreign tourism and to the Soviet Olympic Committee, to assist in coordinating all arrangements for American visitors."

Copies of the free Olympic Newsletter can be obtained from the Russian Travel Bureau, 20 East 46th St., New York, N.Y. 10017. Tel. (212) 986-1500.

Under the guidance of professional balloonists, brightly colored hot air balloons will take two participants on one hour flights over the chateaux, villages and vineyards of the three historic provinces.

The festive atmosphere of the daily excursions will be heightened by a post-flight champagne service, quality food and accommodations. Pan Am birthday flight over North/South Poles

Pan American World Airways will mark its 50th anniversary on Oct. 28 with a special Boeing 747 flight that will carry 150 passengers over both the North and South Poles.

The flight will originate in San Francisco and will fly over the North Pole to London, and then to Capetown, South Africa. From Capetown the aircraft will fly over the South Pole to Auckland, New Zealand, and from Auckland back to San Francisco. The total distance is 26,642 statute miles, and the estimated flying time is 48 hours, 40 minutes.

The flight, subject to government approvals, will come on the 50th anniversary of Pan Am's first flight. On October 28, 1927, a Pan Am Fokker F-7 trimotor aircraft lifted off a dirt runway at Key West, Fla., and flew 90 miles to Havana, Cuba, in a little over one hour.

Passenger reservations for the anniversary flight are available to the public through Pan Am offices or travel agents. Fares for the special trip, subject to government approval, are $3,333 in first class and $2,222 in economy.

The polar flight will be monitored by the National Aeronautic Association, the United States representative of the Federation Aeronautique Internationale, which governs world aviation speed and distance records. Pan Am will seek to beat the record set between November 15 and 17, 1965 by a Boeing 707-320 cargo jet which flew the polar journey in 62 hours, 27 minutes, and 35 seconds, making four stops along the way.

Passengers will be treated to a wide range of inflight services, including full meals and snacks on each sector, 24-hour bar and refreshment service, a selection of movies, and games and contests provided by four separate inflight service crews. The entertainment will include a fashion show, a strolling musician, a magician, and a hairdresser for the ladies.

The anniversary flight will make transit stops of about two hours each in London, Capetown and Auckland. The longest leg of the journey will be between Capetown and Auckland, with 7,523 miles. Other sectors include San Francisco-London, with 6,358 miles; London-Capetown, with 6,152 miles, and Auckland-San Francisco, with 6,607 miles.

Your rights as an airline traveler

What are your rights as an airline traveler? Chances are, they're greater than you think, especially if you've got a confirmed flight reservation. The Travel Department of the Chicago Motor Club-AAA has put together the following tips for air travelers.

If you've got a confirmed flight reservation on a regularly scheduled airline and are denied boarding because that flight has been oversold, you are entitled to compensation.

Here are the specifies which entitle you to compensation: If the denial of a seat was due to reasons other than U.S. government requisition of space, or substitution of an aircraft of smaller capacity; or if the airline can't reroute you to your destination so you get there within 2 hours of your originally planned arrival time on domestic flights, or within 4 hours on international flights (Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and U.S. controlled Pacific islands are considered "domestic destination"); and if you have complied with an airline's specified check-in and reconfirmation procedures and hold a valid ticket.

Your compensation can range from a minimum of $25 to a maximum of $200. The exact amount of compensation which a "bumped" passenger may receive is goverened by the value of the flight ticket.

Bear in mind that you are not obliged to accept the compensation offered. If you do accept the compensation, however, your case is closed. If you reject the compensation, your redress is through the civil courts.

The case of foreign airlines is special. Generally speaking, they are subject to the same time and eligibility conditions for paying "bumped" passengers as are domestic carriers, but only when the passenger who is denied boarding has made reservations for the flight in the U.S., its territories, possessions, or Puerto Rico; and is boarding an international flight which is destined for a point in the U.S. or taking off from a point in the U.S. for a point under foreign jurisdiction.

If your flight is cancelled, delayed, or experiences irregular operating conditions, you are not eligible for compensation.

Of course, all of this bother can be ignored if you manage to stay on the flight you want. To avoid getting "bumped" — arrive at the airport early. Allow yourself sufficient time to check in and get to the gate.

If you have any complaints about airline service or your treatment, contact that airline first. If you aren't satisfied with their response, write the Consumer Adocate of the Civil Aeronautics Board, Washington, D.C., 20428. You will receive a review of your complaint.

"Saga of the Upholstered Board"

Scene: Office of the Sales Manager of the major mattress manufacturing company.

Sales Manager: What is this terrific new idea of yours?

Product Engineer: It's a new mattress with a board in the middle. It makes the mattress harder than — I mean it makes it very hard.

Sales Manager: Sounds good.' We could call it the "Board-O-Pedic." The public wants hard mattresses today. We've been spending enough money telling them this for the last ten years.

Product Engineer: We do use a little foam padding, but with the board in the middle, you hardly feel the padding.

Sales Manager: Have you tried it yourself?

Product Engineer: Sure! I used it for three nights and it almost killed me. But it's harder than any of our competitors are making so it should sell.

Sales Manager: Maybe we should call in the "Upholstered Board"?

Product Manager: I don't know — there's a little company called Schaumburg Mattress Factory that makes fun of these hard mattresses. They tell their customers they shouldn't sleep on these "Upholstered Boards."

Sales Manager: How do you know so much about the Schaumburg Mattress Factory?

Product Engineer: That's where I bought my mattress and man, is it comfortable!!!

Exit: Product Engineer.

Fallaci: Interviewer of the powerful

by Louise Sweeney

The phone rings. Once. Softly. She is curled up on the hotel couch talking into a tape recorder, the instrument she has used to devastate kings, prime ministers, revolutionaries, and Henry Kissinger.

She stops talking. There is a long pause while she glares at the phone as though it were a cobra. Finally, she gets up, approaches it stealthily, then pounces on it. A carefully edited, brief conversation in her throaty, revved up Maserati-race-car of a voice — then "ciao."

Back to the interview, in which this ultra-disciplined journalist, Oriana Fallaci, admits she rarely answers the phone:

"It can ring for hours and I don't move, I let it ring." She lets nothing interfere with the solitude, the concentration of her work: "It is like being a monk that gets free of all the unnecessary things."

The subjects of some of her interviews wish they'd let the phone ring off the hook when she called. Henry Kissinger, while at the height of his powers as Secretary of State, said giving her the interview in which he described himself as the lone cowboy of American diplomacy "had been the stupidest thing of my life."

The Shah of Iran flinched in mid-interview when he discovered she was on his own country's blacklist. Her interview in which India's Indira Gandhi called Pakistan's Zulfikar Ali Bhutto unbalanced so incensed him that he summoned her for his own interview. That interview in turn disturbed Mrs. Gandhi so much, claims the journalist, that it delayed a proposed peace settlement between India and Pakistan.

Who is this woman in whom kings and world powers confide? She is a Florentine, a socialist, a feminist, the daughter of an Italian anti-Fascist and leader of the resistance in World War II, a woman tiny as a child, strong as iron.

She's been called perhaps the most powerful journalist in the world. How does this brilliant and provocative writer, who sees power as "an inhuman and hateful phenomenon," feel about her own power?

"Where did you see this power of mine, did I overthrow any government?" she storms. "Did I make Mr. Kissinger lose his job? Did I stop people from buying oil from the Shah of Iran? Did I resolve the war in Vietnam? Did I convince the people that (head of the Palestine Liberation Organization Yasser) Arafat was not sincere? Was I able to explain to the Americans that Zionism is unbearable? ...

"My work as a journalist has only value as the words of a historian that tells things."

Many of her most newsmaking encounters are compiled in her recent book, "Interviews With History," (Houghton Mifflin, $4.95) but it is promotion of her latest book, the novel "Letter to a Child Never Born," (Simon and Schuster, $6.95) that brings her here. The novel is a passionate, poetic, and judgmental account of the pregnancy and subsequent miscarriage of a feminist journalist — and is not, she stresses, autobiographical.

Midway through the interview, after she has instinctively slowed down and glanced at my tape recorder a minute before it needs to be changed, she growls, "You don't want to talk about this book, do you? I am here for this book."

She is told, "I'm interested in hearing anything you have to say about the book, but you're the mystery. I have read the book, but I've never read you."

Oriana Fallaci, who admits to having been interviewed even more than she has interviewed, always eluding the interviewer, permits a few almost subliminal glimpses of herself.

"I am very extrovert person locked inside herself. My third sister says: 'Oriana is an open book — you know when a person is clear, everybody understands, we say she is an open book. . . .' " There is one of the dramatic pauses she specializes in . . . " 'an open book — written in Chinese!' " And you caught that. It's the person who has done it. The journalist comes after. Everything is a consequence of the person.

"Even if I get excited or shout something (as she did at a former director of the Central Intelligence Agency, William E. Colby), and it seems that I'm revealing myself, I'm not revealing myself. And I know any second what I'm doing. I am always at the window watching what I am doing. And I know myself very well. Very well," she says, rolling her Vs and Rs.

"People do not like me very much. Usually those that I interview, they like me . . . I know that I look cold to you, eh? I look a cold woman."

She is reassured she doesn't, because, in fact, it is like interviewing a bonfire, talking to this impassioned woman. But she says two or three times that people usually don't like her, that it is a great grief to her, as a feminist, that women writers especially tend to do her in when they write about her.

She herself says: "I am not a fake . . . I am the least frivolous woman you can know,"

DYNASTY by Robert S. Elegant (McGraw-Hill Book Co., $10.95).

Reviewed by Joanne Van Wye

Wealth and political power are the traits of the Seeklong family which has its roots in both the Far East and the Western world.

The family's long struggle to bring harmony between these two antagonistic worlds on both a political and personal level is the theme of Robert S. Elegant's new book "Dynasty."

"I dreamt East and West could be united in harmony and in love," Lady Mary says of her marriage nearly 70 years earlier to Charles Seeklong. Lady Mary, now the matriarch of the Seeklong family, implores her family to carry out her vision as they gather in Hong Kong to celebrate her 90th birthday.

Elegant traces three generations of this powerful Chinese-European family and chronicles more than a century of the tumultuous history of modern China in his latest book.

Jonathon, founder of the House of Seeklong, was the illegitimate son of a Chinese woman and Irish man. He used his cunning and ambition to build a commercial empire and found the Seeklong dynasty. His achievements were recognized by a knighthood and permission to be the first Chinese to build on The Peak, an exclusive section of Hong Kong.

This same type of daring and cunning is characteristic of Sir Jonathon's daughter-in-law Lady Mary, the protagonist of the story. The daughter of an insignificant bandmaster in Her Majesty's Army, Mary arrived in Hong Kong in 1900 when she was 20.

She finagled an invitation to the Governor's Ball for Prince William. With the motto "If you're being foolish, go the whole hog," Mary went to the best dressmaker in Hong Kong to get a dress for the ball.

She was snubbed at the ball until the Royal Prince took notice of her and asked for a dance. That event catapulted Mary from an outcast to the belle of the year.

A year later she married Charles, eldest son of Sir Jonathon. They had four children, Jonathon, Guinevere, Charlotte and Thomas in the first four years of the marriage. When Mary said that was enough children, Charles looked elsewhere and finally took a concubine. This led Mary into a sexual liaison with her brother-in-law Harry, and James was born although his parentage was kept secret. Charles and Mary later had another son, Charles.

The cultural and spiritual differences of the parents and the historical changes taking place in China led the six children on divergent paths scattering them across three continents and into different political arenas.

Jonathon, the eldest, was groomed to take over the family's commercial enterprise but died unexpectedly in a plane crash.

Thomas and James both became soldiers like their "Uncle Harry." Thomas was a Nationalist general totally committed to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek while James followed Chou En-lai and became deputy political commissar of the Communists People's Liberation Army.

Charles, the youngest son, become a Cardinal.

Both daughters married, Guinevere moving to the United States only to return to Hong Kong during World War II to be killed in a poorly constructed bomb shelter and Charlotte moving to Europe after the death of her first husband.

The political events and wars that ravaged China during the 20th Century divided the Seeklong family.

Thomas and James, almost inseparable as youngsters, found themselves meeting as enemies in 1944 as the Nationalists and Communists discussed how to work together to fight the Japanese while still plotting against each other for control of China.

Even more tragic was the assassination in 1939 of Harry Seeklong. After years of fighting the Japanese, Harry in 1939 decided to follow his leader Wang Ching-Wei and became prime minister of the newly formed Sino-Japanese Provisional Government of the Republic of China. Days later he was assassinated by his own son James, "for China's sake."

It was another 31 years before James, attending Mary's birthday party, admits to his family that he killed Harry only to be told he had murdered his own father.

Shaken by the news James, who had been involved during the party in delicate negotiations with the U.S. Under Sec. of State decides to stop haggling to avert the war Lin Piao wants to liberate Taiwan. In exchange for U.S. disengagement from Taiwan, China agrees to better relations, trade, access to China's oil reserves and further negotiations.

Lady Mary can now rest in peace knowing that the improved relations between East and West for which she had so long yearned are possible.

Elegant, for 25 years Hong Kong bureau chief for the Los Angeles Times, provides an intimate insight into Modern China in "Dynasty," his ninth book. The book is full of Chinese culture, tradition and history.

Sections of the book are overwritten and tend to drag, especially the war years, but still "Dynasty" is a compelling saga of one family's struggle during a fascinating period of Chinese history.

Witty, sensible introduction to 'prime of life'

WELCOME TO THE MIDDLE YEARS by Robert Taylor, M.D. (Acropolis Books, Ltd., $10.00).

Reviewed by Bernadine M. Rechner

For generations, middle age has been the bane of our American youth culture but Dr. Robert Taylor challenges that concept and his message is worth our attention.

Taylor's book, "Welcome to the Middle Years," is sub-titled "A Doctor's Guide" and extols this period of personal development. It offers insight and advice on a variety of middle age concerns, and while it is not an in-depth study, it is a witty, fast-reading overview of the emotional and physical aspects of the prime of life.

It is, of course, impossible to define exactly when middle age begins. Dr. Taylor, a family physician from New Paltz, New York, says only that "finally, at age thirty or forty, you've found an image that fits you comfortably, a personality you can feel at home with. And, you settle into the middle years." An age of rebellion, a second adolescence, it is, Taylor says, a time of change, both mental and physical.

His book discusses sexual activity during the middle years, looks at the facts and fallacies of menopause and addresses skin and hair problems, proper diet, physical fitness, harmful substances (drugs, alcohol and tobacco) and the compulsion to work. He explains in detail the recommended annual physical examination.

There is an interesting section on seven organic "Diseases of Maturity" — what they are, what causes them and how they are treated — and on the mental problems of the age — anxiety, depression, hypochondriasis, the empty nest syndrome.

Traces of chauvinism appear in the section on marriage and may irk the reader. Though Dr. Taylor is apparently trying to overcome it, it seems he has not really decided which side of the equality fence he chooses; his solutions to identity problems of women tend to be cosmetic and designed to re-attract the male.

For instance, his prescription for the wife whose husband has a wandering eye is "a trip to the beautician, a new hairstyle, a crash course in cosmetics. Next, some new, with-it clothes — not expensive but in style."

The liberated woman, Taylor says, needs to "realize that personal liberation for you can upset the basis of a marriage founded in years of habit. Unless you're ready to risk that marriage for the principles of Women's Liberation, go slow."

Dr. Taylor does advocate compromise, even counseling if it is needed. But, in urging the "left-behind wife, the intellectual freeloader, the dutiful doormat" to catch up by "putting herself first," his good advice is coupled with scorn for the traditionalist woman who followed all the rules society decreed for her.

"Welcome to the Middle Years" takes a more sensible, less contradictory view of divorce, remarriage, aging parents and adolescent children. It talks about the rewards of middle age and suggests that plans for retirement be made during this period of our lives.

The book is simplistic and superficial but that is both its strength and its weakness. It is easy to read, can be picked up and put down as time permits, and entices, rather than taxes, one's mental faculties.

It is a good introduction to the subject of middle age and therein lies its strength. Scattered throughout the volume are numerous references to public and private agencies where more information can be obtained and, for the reader who wishes more comprehensive knowledge, there is a list of 47 other books, including four by Dr. Taylor, which touch on aspects of middle age.

All in all, "Welcome to the Middle Years" is worth a couple of your reading hours.

Fallaci:

one who cares nothing for fashion, food, or comfort, only for her work.

She says her Italian publisher calls her "Mastino," the mastiff, because when she clamps her jaws onto a book she won't let go.

She, who was nearly fatally wounded in Mexico covering the 1968 Olympics, has lived like a war correspondent.

"I am a woman of many defects and maybe few qualities, but one quality I have — and I'm sure of it, and I shout about it. I am brave. I am courageous . . . I am not only physically courageous. I am courageous with life. Because life has always been very tough with me. Very nasty. Very difficult."

She wears her memories around her neck: a collection of gold pendants and chains that clink and chink like temple bells as she talks. They were gifts from the two people she calls co-conspirators, the two people she loved most in the world and lost last year: her mother, Tosca Fallaci, whom she nursed till the end, and the man she loved, "possibly the most courageous man of our time," Greek resistance hero and poet Alexandros Panagoulis.

He was killed in a political assassination last May. "I am now alone totally. He died. My mother died. So you have a very lonely person in front of you, and just because she's courageous, she survives."

"Listen" — Fallaci often says "listen" in her compelling, dusky voice — "Listen to this: I am a novelist, a writer that has been rented to journalism. . . . Interviews are constructed as a piece of theater with a story inside. . . . That's the secret of those interviews. There is a beginning, a development, and an end. I am a narrator, and they are narrated as pieces stories."

"That's why my journalism is different," she says, quoting the editor of Europeo magazine, for which she has written for the last 21 years: "People want to copy you as a journalist, but they cannot because they are not writers. They are not narrators. They do not conceive of the story."

ARIES (March 21-April 19): The birds have eaten your bread crumbs, Ari, so like Hansel and Gretel, you can't go home again. Since retreat is impossible, stick firmly to your chosen path even though it's rocky and rough. On last day, you are saved by a good samaritan. No, she doesn't live in a "gingerbread house"!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): "Stompin' at the Savoy" was never like this, Taurus, you are really shaking the rafters. Ask no questions and do not hesitate. EVERYTHING you do now is right on! That humming you hear may be a friendly motor. Check it out..

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A venture a day may keep the doldrums away, Gem, but it also leaves plenty of loose ends. Take time out this week to tie a few things down. A tete-a-tete with a friend in a powerful position opens your eyes. Look and learn!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Time circles for you Moonbaby, like a lazy hawk in the desert sky. Wait for the present ebb and flow to stabilize before making decision. End of week finds you in solitude with a tiny acorn of an idea. Hold it carefully, it could grow into a mighty oak.

LEO (July 23-August 22): Lucky Leo, you've hit the jackpot again, and through no design of your own, as usual. Your warmth and energy ignite those around you. On last day, you and a new friend head up, up and away like a roman candle.

VIRGO (August 23-September 22): Life is not just a "land of eternal sunlight," Virg. Upon everything, a little night must fall. Use the intermission between acts this week to catch a few needed winks.

LIBRA (September 23-October 22): Like a moth to the flame, you are attracted to that which could harm you, Lib. Pull in your wings and look for a familiar place to land. One who really loves you has a softer but safer glow. On last day, you feel toasty!

Before the season fades and passes, share the splendor of the grasses. On last day, you're ear to ear with a friend.

AQUARIUS (January 20-February 18): A wolf in sheep's clothing will try to tempt you away from your firm resolve, Aquari. Hold fast. Listen to the silences and you will understand that the words are false. On last day, you do something daring and outrageous . . . and love every minute of it.

PISCES (February 19-March 20): You have been "a-slippin' and a-slidin', and a-creepin' and a-hidin' " for a LONG TIME now, Pisces. The hour has arrived to straighten up and take care of business. What you put your time and money into now will be future gain. "Jack" STILL needs to work once in awhile!

BEGINNER'S CORNER — Hint and explanation: Watch out for stalemate!

The United States will be represented by a brilliant young team in the upcoming World Student Team Championship to be held August 5-22 at the University of Mexico in Mexico City.

Although students under age 27 are eligible, the US team will average less than 19 years old! Yet it will have an average USCF rating of 2372!

The team members, listed in the order of their ratings, are Yasser Seirawan of Seattle, Washington, age 16; Nicholas DeFirmian of Santa Barbara, California, age 19; Kenneth Regan of Paramus, New Jersey, age 17; Jonathan Tisdall of Syracuse, New York, age 17; Danny Kopec, a student at Edinburgh University, Scotland, age 23; and Ronald Henley of Houston, Texas, age 19.

It is, nevertheless, regrettable that such young chess stars as 8th-rated U.S. player Saul Rogoff, International Grandmaster Larry Christiansen, World Junior Champion Mark Diesen and winner of the European Junior Championship, Michael Rhode, have declined to play.

A match between a US team including these players and the top Soviet team we can expect to show in Mexico would be a dream event.

A key to Burlington High School's victory in the National High School Championship ahead of teams from New York City and Los Angeles was the tough play of Chris Richmond. Here Chris, USCF rating 1970, beats the much higher rated Yasser Seirawan.

The Bureau of Engraving and Printing will issue a souvenir card in conjunction with PURIPEX '77, the silver anniversary Philatelic Exhibition being held Sept. 2-5 in San Juan, Puerto Rico.

The card depicts, on the left, a block of four 3-cent Puerto Rico stamps issued in 1937 as part of the U.S. Territorial Series. The adhesives feature the Governor's Palace (La Fortaleza) which is the oldest executive mansion in the hemisphere still used for that purpose.

On the right of the card is San Juan Gate where, in early times, arriving dignitaries were greeted and escorted to the Cathedral to give thanks for a safe journey.

The souvenir cards are $1.50 each and may be ordered by mail from "PURIPEX '77 Souvenir Card, Bureau of Engraving and Printing, Washington, D.C. 20228." There is a limit of five cards per customer for the first 30 days after release on Sept. 2; for the next 60 days cards may be purchased in unlimited quantities. The card will be withdrawn from sale on Dec. 1, 1977 or when stocks are exhausted.

Damaged first day covers may be the result of return addresses which are placed by the collector too low or too far to the left of the envelope, a U.S. Postal Service study has determined.

Operators of letter sorting machines have only one second to read the last three digits of the zip code and they are trained to look to the right of the envelope. If the zip code is not readily visible in that short a time, the envelopes get shunted off for manual sorting later. This often results in a second cancellation being applied to covers.

To avoid this, Gordon C. Morison, Director of Customer Programs, said collectors should place their address to the right of the envelope and at least 5/8 of an inch up from the bottom.

Slovik's widow loses appeal to Army

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Army Friday expressed "sympathy and compassion" for Antoinette Slovik but declined to reverse her husband's World War II conviction as a deserter and denied her $70,000 in insurance benefits.

Army Sec. Clifford Alexander, affirming a decision by a board of appeals, said there was no basis to change the record of Pvt. Eddie D. Slovik, the only American soldier executed for desertion since 1864.

Mrs. Slovik, who is 63 and lives in poverty in Detroit, may appeal the decision in federal court, the Army said, or ask her congressman to introduce a private relief bill on her behalf.

THE ARMY announced its decision in a two-paragraph statement.

"Although the report of the board expressed sympathy and compassion for Mrs. Slovik, it found no basis for changing Private Slovik's military records," the statement said. "It therefore recommended unanimously denial of the application.

"The record clearly reflects that Private Slovik deserted to avoid combat duty. The law covering the payment of National Service Life Insurance benefits precludes payment in the case of individuals who are convicted of desertion."

If the board had agreed to Mrs. Slovik's request, she would have been entitled to her husband's $10,000 GI insurance which, with interest, would now be worth about $70,000.

MRS. SLOVIK suffers from epilepsy and has no income aside from a small Social Security payment.

Slovik was executed Jan. 31, 1945, by a U.S. Army firing squad at Saint Marie Aux Mines, France, after his second desertion. But it was not until 1954, when Mrs. Slovik was interviewed by William Bradfod Huie for a book on the execution, that she learned how her husband died.

Slovik deserted twice and vowed in his confession "I'll run away again if I have to go" into battle.

Slovik, who had a record as a juvenile delinquent, gave himself up at an Army camp at Rocherath, Belgium, Oct. 9, 1944, after he deserted for the second time in France.

New information on Slovik, was released Friday after Alexander refused to reverse his World War II conviction.

Eddie Slovik

"I Pvt. Eddie D. Slovik 36896415 confess to the desertion of the United States Army. At the time of my desertion we were in Albuff in France. I come to Albuff as a replacement. They were shilling the town and we were told to dig in for the night.

"The flowing morning they were shilling us again. I was so scared nerves and trembling that at the time the other replacements moved out I couldn't move. I stayed their in my fox hole till it was quite and I was able to move. I then walked in town. Not seeing any of our troops so I stayed over overnight at a French hospital. The next morning I turned myself over to the Canadian Provost Corp."

"After being with them six weeks I was turned over to American M.P. They turned me lose. I told my commanding officer my story. I said that if I had to go out their again Id run away. He said their was nothing he could do so I ran away again and I'll run away again if I have to go out their."

On Nov. 11, 1944, a general court-martial of the 28th Infantry Division at Rotgen, Germany, convicted Slovik on two counts of desertion "to avoid action against the enemy" and sentenced him "to be dishonorably discharged, total forefeitures, and to be shot to death with musketry."

ANTOINETTE SLOVIK received sympathy and compassion from the Army but no money from her husband's $70,000 in insurance benefits.

'Slick' landing for space shuttle

The big 75-ton spaceplane popped smoothly off the back of its 747 carrier plane 24,100 feet above the Mojave Desert and glided at high speed to a 7½-mile long runway on a dry lakebed.

The solo flight lasted 5½ minutes and test manager Donald "Deke" Slayton said, "we're very, very happy with the whole thing."

"I'M VERY HAPPY," Haise said at a news conference three hours after the landing. "Everything went super slick. It went better than I had hoped for."

Fullerton, too, was ecstatic about the flight of the machine engineers call an orbiter.

"The orbiter flies like a good fighter aircraft rather than a transport, which in reality is what it is," he said. "I feel very fortunate to be part of this first step."

Enterprise's four rear wheels touched down at 210 miles per hour, kicking up a long plume of beige dust from the clay and silt plain that has been dry thousands of years.

THE SHIP'S NOSE slowly settled down and Enterprise rolled two miles before coming to a stop.

"Congratulations, it was a beautiful flight," astronaut Karol Bobko radioed the Enterprise pilots from Mission Control in Houston.

The black and white ship, 122 feet long with a wing as wide as a DC9 jetliner, came down on a landing approach that was three times steeper than that followed by commercial aircraft.

The weather was excellent, but the astronauts nevertheless relied on computers and instruments for the landing as planned.

"I THINK history will show this is probably the second most important flight that has ever been made," said Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., a reserve Air Force Brigadier General. "The first important flight was the Wright Brothers. This opens up all of space for man's use."

Goldwater was one of two thousand VIPs watching the landing from the hot desert viewing area. In addition there were many more thousands of spectators observing from distant hills overlooking the Air Force test center.

A national television audience also watched the spectacle, receiving pictures from one of four little T38 jet trainers that followed the Enterprise like flies.

THE SPACE SHUTTLE is the key to the nation's future in orbit. It is designed to be reuseable to make at least 100 flights to and from space every few weeks. It can carry seven men and women, satellites weighing up to 65,000 pounds and orbiting laboratories.

The capacity to land at an airport instead of parachuting into the ocean as did its predecessors gives the shuttle the versitlity and economy required to make space operations routine in the next decade.

Friday's test proved that the shuttle is able to make an airport landing without engines, relying on a battery of five computers an dthe most advanced guidance and control system ever installed in a spacecraft.

"She's flying good," he radioed the control center in Houston which directed the flight as if it were a space mission.

Enterprise flew a U-shaped course from separation to landing which required two sharp left turns. Haise did most of the piloting, but Fullerton 40-year-old Air Force Lieutenant Colonel, who has yet to fly in orbit, took the single stick control for awhile.

Enterprise was traveling a little faster than desired on its landing approach, so Haise applied the brakes — opening a tail structure like a clamshell to create more drag. The craft slowed as expected.

"It looks super," reported the Houston controller responsible for monitoring the flying qualities of the Enterprise.

The craft was 200 feet above the ground when its conventional airplane landing gear dropped out of the black underside.

Enterprise touched down at 11:54 a.m. EDT. The two pilots climbed out of the ship's roundside hatch 16 minutes later, smiling broadly and shaking hands with technicians who stood on airplane-like stairs that had been rolled up to the ship

An hour later, the spacemen met their wives, hugging them in front of a crowd of photographers.

Haise and Fullerton began their day when they were awakened at the base's officers quarters at 4 a.m. They had a breakfast of steak and eggs, which is a tradition for astronauts about to make a flight.

The Enterprise is scheduled to make three to five more flights. Astronauts Joe Engle and Richard Truly are due to make the next one Aug. 30.

Enterprise will be flown piggyback on the 747 to the Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala., next March for a vibration test.

A second shuttle, known now only as No. 102, will make the initial space flight. It is scheduled to be ferried from its Rockwell International assembly plant at nearby Palmdale next August to the Cape Canaveral, Fla. launch site.

RTA to begin feeder bus service in autumn

Commuter bus routes to railway stations in downtown Arlington Heights and Arlington Park Race Track will be started in mid-October or November, a Regional Transportation Authority official said Friday.

The two routes will serve residents in the southern areas of Arlington Heights and the south and southeast portions of Rolling Meadows, Richard L. Brazda said.

"Essentially, the service will be designed to meet three or four trains in both the morning and evening rush periods," Brazda said.

SPECIFIC ROUTES will not be developed until officials in Arlington Heights and Rolling Meadows have submitted comments on the bus route plan, he said.

"One route will probably run as far south in Arlington Heights as Central Road and White Oak Street and we hope the other will go west of Ill. Rte. 53 briefly to serve parts of that area. Of course, there is a limit to what you can serve and still meet a number of trains," Brazda said.

Unlike most RTA bus services, the two new routes will be put out for bid to private bus companies, Brazda said.

"We decided to do it this way because there aren't any carriers that are clearly operating in that area. Also, because of various problems at the national level, only a limited number of buses have been built and so we're short of equipemnt," he said.

Specific routes should be known in early September and the program will then be let for bids, Brazda said.

Residents on the north side of Arlington Heights have been served for more than a year by a commuter bus that makes runs between Buffalo Grove and the downtown railway station.

Ft. Knox clerk recalls days with Sam suspect

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI)—A civilian employe at nearby Ft. Knox recalls the man accused of the "Son of Sam" slayings as "very shy, but completely normal" during several weeks of close association when he broke her in on her clerical job.

"I just couldn't believe it was the same guy when I saw him on television," said Mrs. Diana Heaberlin, who was still single when she knew David Berkowitz at the Army post from March, 1974, until his discharge June 24, 1974.

"I really don't know if he was especially shy around women because my contact with him was strictly a working relationship."

IN A TELEPHONE interview from the Ft. Knox office where she works, Mrs. Heaberlin said she couldn't remember a single incident of abnormal behavior on the part of Berkowitz. He was assigned to a training brigade at the base after Army duty in Korea.

"I guess the biggest thing out of the ordinary was that he said he was a bird-watcher," said Mrs. Heaberlin, who married a soldier assigned to the same headquarters after Berkowitz left the Army.

Mrs. Heaberlin, 24, the same age as Berkowitz, said she also found it difficult to believe reports that his personality was warped by taking the drug LSD during Korean duty. The New York Daily News reported Friday that letters written to unidentified friends revealed a drastic transformation in his personality while in Korea.

"He just never showed anything like

Thomson hearing Monday

A 23-year-old Michigan junk yard owner faces arraignment Monday in criminal court after being extradited from Michigan for the July 7 murder of Mark VanDellen, 22, of Prospect Heights.

Brian Thomson of Ypsilanti, Mich., was brought Friday to the Cook County Sheriff's headquarters in Maywood from Ypsilanti. Thomson had earlier said he would fight extradition to Illinois, but he changed his mind after he retained a lawyer in Chicago, police said.

Thomson's attorney, Robert McGee, said Thomson will be arraigned before Judge Richard Fitzgerald in the Cook County Criminal Courts Building, 26th Street and California Avenue, Chicago.

THOMSON is charged with the stabing murder of VanDellen in what police believe was a love triangle involving Thomson's former girlfriend, Angela Morgan, 21, with whom VanDellen was living.

Thomson was arrested July 12 by Washtenaw County and Ypsilanti police at his parents' home in Ann Arbor Township, Mich., police said.

VanDellen's body was found July 7 in a hallway otside Miss Morgan's apartment at 16E. Willow Rd., Prospect Heights.

Police have said Thomson confronted VanDellen in the apartment hallway near Miss Morgan's door. Miss Morgan later told police she heard VanDellen's cries and the noise of the struggle but did not open the door.

Thomson had dated Miss Morgan for seven years until seven months ago when they broke up, police said. VanDellen, a truck driver for the Pedian Rug Co. warehouse in Morton Grove, had moved to Miss Morgan's apartment from Glenview three weeks before his death, police said.

Scavengers take over when crew leaves ship

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — As soon as it became apparent the tuna boat Mary Lucille would have to be abandoned, skiffs from other tuna boats moved in to wait — not to help the crew, but to rush the stricken ship and strip her before she went down.

Permitted under salvage laws of the sea, scavengers from Mexican and American boats fishing with the Mary Lucille Sunday night went aboard and ripped out equipment and supplies the minute the crew abandoned ship 130 miles to the south in the Pacific, crewmen reported Friday.

Sam Parmigiani, chief engineer of the vessel which later sank, described a distressing sight as his fellow mariners rushed to the advantage of the ship's misfortune.

HE SAID MEN from U.S. and Mexican tunaboats gathered all around the Mary Lucille in their skiffs.

"They were just waiting for us to get off. As soon as we went off, they were all over the boat."

Parmigiani said the salvagers took electronic eqiupment, outboard motors and "everything they could."

"I even saw some brand new sheets my wife had bought for me being taken off by the Mexicans."

HE SAID THE boarding party took shoes, clothes, "the big food mixer out of the galley, the toaster, pots and pans, everything that could be moved.

"They even ripped the fire hoses off the walls," he said.

Raul P. Lira, 43, skipper of the stripped and sunken boat, said "it always hurts to see that, but I guess they have the right to do that."

Lira and his crew of 14 abandoned ship to a skiff and were rescued by the J.M. Martinac, another San Diego tuna boat, after abandoning efforts to pump water out of the Mary Lucille's flooding hold.

Bard-quoting hijacker gets quick hook

BRINDISI, ITALY (UPI) — a crazed Egyptian teenager shouting "To Be Or Not To Be" hijacked an Air France jumbo jet Friday, but was overpowered by police while talking to ground personnel during a refueling stop at Brindisi Airport.

The crew slammed the door of the plane on the air pirates, identified as Tarek El Sajed Khater, 19, of Cairo, as he stepped outside. Airport Police then rushed him and took him into custody.

No injuries were reported.

The hijacker, dabbing his neck with perfume as he spoke to the 242 passengers and crew over the jet's public address system during the drama screamed out Hamlet's soliloquy in a jibberish of English, French and Arabic.

"I have 1,000 pounds of dynamite in here and I can blow up all the passengers and the plane," He said, holding a biscuit tin aloft. Passengers quoted him as saying he was "fighting for the rights of the Islamic people."

The French airbus, hijacked after a stopover in Nice, France, on flight from Paris to Cairo was forced to fly to Benghazi, Libya, but was not allowed to land.

The aircraft then flew over the Greek Island of Corfu to Brindisi on the Southern heel of the boot of Italy, landing with only 11 minutes of fuel left.

Police backed by marksmen rushed forward to the floodlit plane as the crew members slammed the plane's door on the hijacker's back, locking him out.

Police grabbed an ax and some small boxes containing an unidentified but nonexplosive material from the hijacker, bundled him into a waiting car and rushed him to Brindisi police headquarters.

A YOUNG SAUDI Arabian passenger said about 10 minutes after the plane had taken off from Nice he saw the young man, wearing blue jeans, a sports shirt and sweater, head for the cockpit.

Another passenger, who said her name was Miss Thanaa, said the air pirate shouted confused messages to the pasengers over the address system.

"To be or not to be" she said he shouted.

She said he had claimed to have three comrades aboard whom he identified as K1, K2 and K3. But neither she nor any of the other passengers reported seeing the other three alleged hijackers.

The hijacker demanded a million francs — he did not say what kind of francs — and diplomatic passports for himself and his accomplices.

BEFORE HIS arrest about 20 passengers, mostly women and children, had been allowed to leave the French Airbus, the same type of plane hijacked last June to Entebbe, Uganda. Israel freed the passengers in a stunning commando raid.

Italian officials negotiated the release of the initial 20 Brindisi passengers in exchange for fuel for the plane.

Air France said the plane, Flight 120, carried 230 passengers and a crew of 12. Most of the passengers were reported to be Egyptians although at least 26 were French tourists, according to a travel firm in Paris.

Police sources in Rome who had been communicating with Brindisi police said the hijacker was a 19-year old Egyptian. They said the hijacker said he wanted to "Fly to Athens, Cairo or Benghazi, Libya, after the plane was refueled.

Police marksmen took up strategic positions around the floodlit airliner while the Brindisi chief of police negotiated with the plane by radio.

"He seemed to be very young and very excited. He was speaking an almost incomprehensible language. A sort of mixture of English and Italian," the pilot said.

Seats on space shuttle hard to get

by JOHN F. SIMS

NEW YORK (UPI) — I tried to reserve a seat on the first commercial passenger-carrying space shuttle flight, but the National Aeronautics and Space Adminstration said it could not accept my booking.

"We're open to offers for carrying payloads," said NASA spokesman Miles Wagner. "But carrying people is going to be a little more difficult."

Rockwell International manufactures the space shuttle that made its first free-fall flight under NASA auspices Friday. Both companies are predicting that the future will see the shuttle used for commercial purposes.

NASA is preparing a list of potential passengers, but only of space and aviation writers who want to be the first newsmen in space.

"There is room on board each shuttle for one passenger," Wagner said. "At some time in the future we'll work out a way of choosing a writer to be that passenger and be a pool reporter on behalf of all the news media."

Even so, that's not expected to happen until the early 1980s.

"It's all a bit hazy," said Wagner.

NASA has said the space shuttle could carry a 200 pound payload into space for as little as $3,000 in the mid-1980s.

By 1985 I think I could afford the $3,000, and I hope I won't weigh more than 200 pounds. So I thought I would get my booking in early.

The trouble is that some enterprising company will have to build a passenger compartment that would fit into the cargo hold of the space shuttle. And so far nobody has announced plans to spend the few million that would take.

"Apart from the mechanical considerations, there will also be some restrictions on passengers — health standards that you don't have to fulfill to fly an airliner," Wagner said.

Persons with heart conditions and other ailments would not be able to stand the shock of take-off, when acceleration imposes gravitational forces several times the norm.

"I'm sure some travel agent will start selling seat reservations," said Wagner. "But for the moment it would be a little like buying the Brooklyn Bridge."

Vandals cause $1,500 damage to Rob Roy lawns

Vandals struck at Rob Roy Golf Club early Friday, making it the third area golf course to be vandalized in the last three weeks.

The vandals drove a car across the course at 505 E. Camp McDonald Rd., Wheeling Township, causing an estimated $1,500 damage to fairways and greens.

Tire tracks showed the small car left Wheeling Road and cut across several fairways, stopping at three greens to skid and gouge out chunks of sod.

THE VANDALS then drove through the Rob Roy practice range and onto Euclid Avenue.

On Aug. 5, vandals caused $5,000 in damage to Buffalo Grove Golf Course, wrecking five golf carts and tearing up three greens.

On July 30, 45 golf carts were destroyed in a fire at Rolling Green Country Club, Wheeling Township, about a mile from Rob Roy. Fire officials suspect arson in the incident, which caused $90,000 damage.

Local authorities said there is no apparent connection between the incidents.

ROB ROY course workers discovered the damage about 6:30 a.m. Friday. The damage was most severe to greens on the third, sixth and seventh holes.

Bob McDonald, the club pro, said this was the third time vandals had struck the course this summer but that other incidents had been minor.

"With the wet weather lately, the ground was soft and easy to tear up," he said.

The softness of the turf may make repairs easier, McDonald said. The moisture is deep enough to allow new sod to be placed on the greens, he said.

Golfers at Rob Roy Friday were angry about the damage, which interferred with play on the three greens.

"IT'S LIKE tearing my own skin off," one golfer said. "But I hope they catch those — and give them what they deserve," he said.

"They ought to shoot 'em," another player said.

"I wouldn't want to be those guys if we catch them," said Keith McDonald, a course worker who was replacing sod.

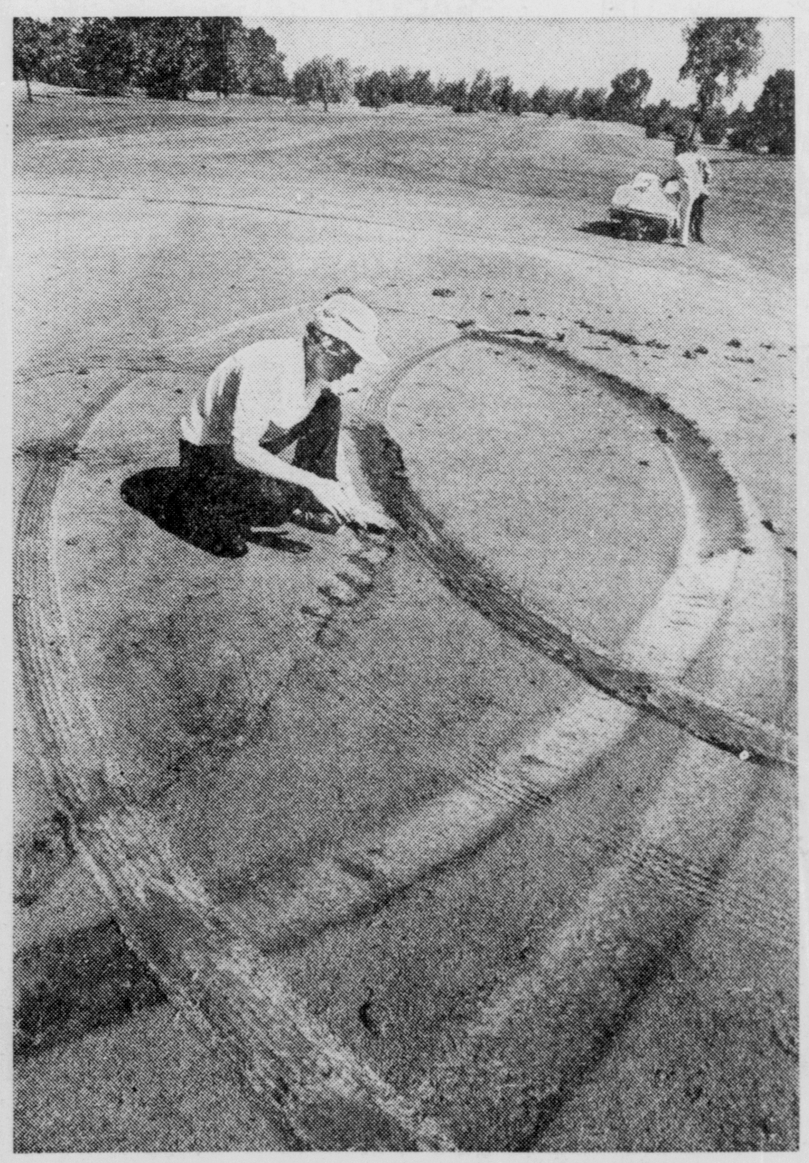
Local authorities say several factors make golf courses likely targets for vandals.

"Golf courses are largely unprotected at night, and there usually isn't anyone around," said Sgt. Peter Lippert of the Buffalo Grove police.

"WE'VE TRIED putting officers on patrol on a course at night, but it is still a big area," he said.

A golf course offers rolling terrain that attracts thrill-seeking drivers, said Capt. Paul Buckholz, Arlington Heights Police.

"Where else can you ride cowboy style in the suburbs?" said Buckholz.



A WORKMAN REPLACES sod ripped from a green early Friday when vandals caused an estimated $1,500 damage to the Rob Roy Golf Course, 505 E. Camp McDonald Rd., Mount Prospect. Rob Roy is the third area golf course to be vandalized in the past three weeks.

Panama gets canal control in treaty plan

BY HELEN TADAAS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Hailing a "new day in hemisphere relations," President Carter Friday announced terms of the new Panama Canal treaty giving Panama control of the strategic waterway at the turn of the century.

In a statement indicating he expects a tough fight for Senate ratification of the pact, Carter said the treaty "would strengthen our security interests, be fair to ourselves and the people of Panama and ensure free international use of the canal in the spirit of cooperation and friendship."

Carter noted all presidents since Lyndon Johnson had worked toward a new treaty and said he was happy that work on it was completed in his administration.

Press Sec. Jody Powell said Carter, anticipating a battle over the agreement, telephoned Gerald Ford and former Sec. of State Henry Kissinger earlier this week to discuss the issue.

CARTER, OUTLINING terms of the new agreement Friday, said a "neutrality" pact issued along with the main treaty gives the United States a permanent right to defend the canal.

He said U.S. warships will have a permanent right to use the canal, and for the next 23 years, American military forces will have primary responsibility to protect and defend the waterway.

Other provisions:

• Panama will assume general territorial jurisdiction over the present Canal Zone Dec. 31, 1999.

• Panama, which now gets about $2.3 million per year in tolls, would get $40 million to $50 million each year in tolls; $10 million per year from toll revenues and up to an additional $10 million per year if canal traffic and revenues permit.

The United States has been getting $220 million a year in revenues but negotiator Ellsworth Bunker gave no indication whether that amount will change under the treaty.

• The United States for the rest of the century will maintain control over all lands, waters and installations, including military bases, necessary to manage, operate and defend the canal.

• A new U.S. agency will operate the canal, replacing the Panama Canal Company, and will assure U.S. control of canal operations for the rest of the century. The Canal will be open to all shipping.

• Panama will receive up to $200 million in Export-Import Bank credits; up to $75 million in AID housing guarantees and a $20 million Overseas Private Investment Corporation loan guarantee.

• The package contains "buy American" provisions that will benefit U.S. businesses that invest in and sell goods and services to Panama.

• All U.S. civilians now employed in the canal will remain on their jobs until retirement.

• America and Panama will jointly study the feasibility of a new canal.

The President also said the United States will work with Panama to assess the need for a sea-level canal and to cooperate on possible improvements to the existing canal.

He said the treaty "will help to usher in a new day in hemispheric relations," and he will seek Congressional approval for it.

EFFORTS TO WIN support for the pact already are under way.

Treaty negotiator Sol Lindwitz said he met with Ronald Reagan a few weeks ago to discuss the treaty, but failed to persuade him to support it. Reagan made American ownership of the canal a big issue in the GOP presidential primary campaign last year.

Linowitz also said he conferred with Kisisnger several times and found him "interested, helpful and pleased."

He asid there are "no limits" on the number of troops the United States could send to Panama if necesasry after the year 2000.

Linowitz said Senate failure to ratify the treaty would damage U.S.-Panamanian as well as U.S.-Latin American relations.

Nazis told to end 'hate' phone tape

The American Nazi party must stop playing a recorded telephone message that urges whites to kill blacks, Cook County Circiut Court Judge Raymond K. Berg ruled Friday. The message constitutes a "clear and present danger" to society, Berg ruled, and the organization cannot play it or any similar message. The tape, which played for a week when persons dialed a Nazi headquarters telephone number, refers to the looting during New York City's blackout. It then offers $200 to "the first white man or woman who will exercise his right to protect his life and property and blow one of these black criminals away."

Columbo witness quits county job

Roman Sobczynski, 35, the county employe who got sexual favors from convicted murderer Patricia Columbo by posing as a hit man, has resigned from his $17,000-a-year civil service job with Cook County. Sobczynski, a former deputy sheriff, had worked for the county as a government recruiter for nine years. During the trial of Miss Columbo and her lover Frank DeLuca, it was disclosed Sobczynski and another witness, Lanyon Mitchell, had sex with Miss Columbo while pretending to be hit men for the mob. Both Sobczynski and Mitchell were listed as unindicted co-conspirators in the case and were granted immunity from prosecution.

Bomb-making ring probed

McHenry County sheriff's police Friday said they are continuing an investigation of a bomb-making ring which is believed to have manufactured and exploded as many as 100 bombs in the past several years. Two persons were arrested Thursday night and a pipe bomb which police said was intended for a Fox River Grove police car was seized. Other suspects, detective James Connelly said, include teen-agers who were being trained in the making of explosive devices. Those arrested were identified as Carl A. Hall, 31, Crystal Lake; and Audie C. Ellard II, Fox River Grove. Hall was charged with manufacture, possession and sale of explosives. charged with manufacture, possession and sale of explosives.

Adjusted plan could get OK

Mayor Michael A. Bilandic Friday said city officials might approve a proposed 54 billion development along the south branch of the Chicago River if some "adjustments or changes" are made in the proposal. The Chicago Plan Commission Thursday recommended rejection of the proposal, which would consist of three connected towers housing as many as 11,000 families. "This thing has happened many times in the past where proposals are made and modifications and adjustments are made and they eventually get approval," the mayor said.

Rep. Breslin booted out again

Sangamon County Circuit Court Judge Jerry Rhodes Friday tossed Rep. Peg Breslin, D-Ottawa, out of the Illinois House. Rhodes said he was affirming the validity of a June 30 House vote ousting Mrs. Breslin because she did not meet residency requirements. Her lawyer, John Keith, argued the case should not be in court at all, calling it strictly a legislative affair, but Rhodes said the legislature would be powerless to enforce many actions without court backing. Rhodes also said the reappointment of Mrs. Breslin to fill her own vacancy the day she was ousted "is a nullity" because the Illinois Supreme Court has ruled the appointment procedure unconstitutional.

Defense rests in death penalty case

The defense rested its case Friday in what could be the first death penalty trial in Illinois under the state's new capital punishment law. Closing arguments were scheduled Saturday in the Cook County Circuit Court trial of William R. Hill, 27, who is charged with the contract slayings of Chicago pharmacists Robert Fields, 47, and Allen Ziperstein, 61. Presiding Judge John J. Moran ruled earlier in the proceeding to let prosecutors ask for the death penalty if Hill is convicted.

Rule all workers get union benefits

Illinois Atty. Gen. William J. Scott Friday said Gov. James R. Thompson, a fellow Republican, has the legal right to give thousands of state workers represented by a union the same benefits won for others via collective bargaining. Democratic Comptroller, Michael Bakalis, who would like to take on Thompson in 1978, asked Scott last month for an opinion. Such opinions are not legally binding but do influence state government decisions.

Wheeling's Zerkle may lose job looking for chief

by LINDA PUNCH

Wheeling Village Mgr. Terry L. Zerkle's job is in jeopardy apparently because he has refused to bow to pressure from Village Pres. William Hein and several trustees to appoint Wheeling Police Lt. Ted Bracke as police Chief.

A special meeting to discuss "the status of the village manager" was called for 9 p.m. Monday at the village hall, 255 W. Dundee Rd., by Trustees Dolores Dahm, Roger Powers and Robert Ross.

Hein and the three trustees Friday were unavailable for comment, but sources in village hall said "things look bad for Terry" and he could be fired. The sources said the major problem is Zerkle's reluctance to appoint Bracke as police cheif.

"ZERKLE WOULD not coment Friday.

The special meeting was called Friday morning on the heels of a confidential memo issued to board members by Zerkle, who was objecting to board interference in his job.

In the memo, Zerkle said Hein, Dahm, Powers, Ross and Trustee Hugh Sommerfeld have repeatedly interferred in administrative duties, particulary in pressuring him to appoint Bracke as police chief. Police Chief M.O. Horcher is retiring Sept. 16.

Under the council-manager form of government which Wheeling employs, othe village manager has the authority to make all administrative decisions, including hiring of all personnel. The village board sets policy.

Zerkle said in the memo that on several occasions Hein stated that "he wanted the appointment to come from within, that he wanted the appointment to be Ted Bracke, and that he was speaking for a majority of the board."

THE CONTROVERSY comes in the midst of a selection process in which Zerkle and the Police Services Bureau of the Illinois Assn. of Police Chiefs have reviewed resumes of more than 150 applicants.

Zerkle has said there are a number of promising candidates from outside the village and that he wants to fill the position "on the basis of merit and fitness, as determined through a competitive selection process." The search began in early June.

Trustee Charles Kerr Friday said the special meeting "obviously means they're going to drop the ax on Terry." Kerr released the memo issued by Zerkle, saying "it's time somebody took stand and let the village know the harassment Terry has taken since these hoodlums were elected."

Hein, Mr. Dahm, Ross and Powers all were members of the Wheeling Citizens Party which swept the village election in April. Trustees Kerr and John Cole are board holdovers and repeatedly have opposed Hein and his slate.

Sommerfeld, another member of Hein's slate, was out of town Friday.

"TERRY'S A professional guy and has never taken one side or the other. I'm sure if I asked him for permission to release this information, he'd say no. But I feel it has to be released,"

Cole Friday said he agrees with Kerr about releasing the information to the public.

"My personal opinion is that if they get rid of Terry and put in their own person, there goes the last vestige of respectibility for the billage. We're going to sink into slime and become one-man fiefdom," he siad.

Cole said he hopes "the citizens care enough to pack the village hall on Monday night."

"THE ONLY thing that will help now is for the citizens to have an uprising," he said.

In the memo, Zerkle said that "a cumulative series of actions in recent months by some board members is jeopardizing our joint working relationship and is causing a breakdown in communications between the board and the manager, and, also, in the chain-of-command.

"I cannot function effectively under the present circumstances, and it would be a disservice to the community, to the village organization, and to the city management profession for me to continue as village manager unless these circumstanoes are changes," he said.

Zerkle attached a report to the memo documenting 11 instances when Hein, Dahm, Powers, Ross and Sommerfeld allegedly interfered in village administration. Seven of the incidents, he said, involved "unwarranted pressure and interference by some meembers of the village board on the village manager relative to the appointment of a successor to retiring Police Chief M.O. Horcher."

Citing the village code that prohibits board interference with administrative services, Zerkle asked that trustees "deal with employes in the administrative service only through the village manager."

ZERKLE ALSO said that the village code authorizes the village manager to select the police chief and asked that he "remain free to make position appointments on the basis of merit and fitness without political pressure and interference."

Zerkle last Monday called for an executive session to discuss his grievance with the board but his efforts were blocked by Hein, Dahm, Ross and Powers.

In his memo, he said he called for the closed session because "I sincerely wanted to air this matter with the board in private and see if there was some way we could come to a mutual understanding.

"During my association with the village, I have never played games with the present village board, the previous board or the village employes. I do not intend to start now," he said.

Zerkle was hired as village manager in June 1976, to replace former Village Mgr. George Passolt. During his 14 months with the village, he instituted a major capital improvements program, hired top administrative staff to fill crucial positions and oversaw budgeting procedures which returned the village to a stable financial position.

Zerkle also drew up collective bargaining guidelines, which averted the major salary disputes faced by the village in the past.

Pressure instances documented in confidential note

Wheeling Village Mgr. Terry L. Zerkle has said he has been pressured by Village Pres. William Hein on several occasions to hire Wheeling Police Lt. Ted Bracke as police chief.

In a confidential memo to the board, Zerkle documented several instances in which Hein and Trustees Dolores Dahm, Robert Ross, Hugh Sommerfeld and Roger Powers, allegedly attempted to interfere with his duties. On several occasions, Hein said the trustees allegedly attempted to use their influence to gain zoning and building favors.

Incidents cited by Zerkle include:

• July 15, 1977: On the day following the first round of interviews for the police chief position, "President Hein made contact with me (Zerkle) and indicated that he felt Ted Bracke should be appointed the new chief."

• First of the week following the interviews: Hein tells Zerkle "that he felt Ted Bracke should be appointed the new chief and that he was speaking for a majority of the village board."

• July 22, 1977: Zerkle is approached by Hein, Ross and Powers about the police chief selection. Hein said he was speaking for Ross, Powers, Sommerfeld and Dahm. Both Ross and Powers said they wanted "the new chief to come from within the department." Zerkle tells them he feels there is no one from within the department qualified to handle the job. "I could tell that President Hein and Trustees Ross and Powers were upset with me for that response. Trustee Ross stated 'Let the chips fall where they may.' He did not elaborate."

"Trustee Powers stated that he wanted the appointment to come from inside and that 'a lot depends upon it.' He did not elaborate and I did not inquire."

Zerkle tells the three men he is looking for the "best man for the job based on merit and fitness. I stated further that the interview panel had recommended no one fron inside based on the oral interviews . . . President Hein stated that all we wanted was someone who could do the job and that, in his opinion, there was such a person from within (on two previous occasions, he stated that person was Ted Bracke)."

• July 26, 1977: Hein asks Zerkle whether he has made a selection for plice chief. Zerkle said he is still looking into several promising applicants. "President Hein stated that he wanted the appointment to come from within, that he wanted the appointment to be Ted Bracke, and that he was speaking for the majority of the board," Zerkle said.

• July 26: Ross tells Zerkle in a phone conversation that he (Ross) wants "the appointment to come from within, that there won't be a police department in six months if the appointment comes from without, and that they have four votes."

• July 27: Dahm, in a memo to Zerkle, states that "if we have men qualified and if they have applied for the position, they should be considered before anyone else." Dahm asks Zerkle "to do what is right for our town to avoid the disaster that would happen. You'd have a new out-of-house chief of police, but he'd have no policemen to be chief of."

• Aug. 3: Hein asks Zerkle about the status of the police chief selection. Zerkle said he is still reviewing applicants and has not made an appointment Zerkle tells Hein he plans to give the board an update on the police chief selection in executive session at the Aug. 8 meeting.

In his memo, Zerkle also said that Hein May 13 used his influence to have a zoning request from Rock Road Construction Co. placed on the board agenda although the staff had no chance to review the application. "I contacted President Hein and stated that it was standard operating policy to fully check petitions, including the accuracy of legal descriptions, etc., and to have the petitioner make corrections prior to forwarding the petitions to the board. President Hein reiterated that he wanted this item placed on the agenda."

Zerkle said he placed the request on the agenda, noting deficiencies in the application.

Rock Road is seeking a special-use permit to make their asphalt plant at 231 Wheeling Rd., a conforming use. The plan commisison has recommended denial of the request after residents and village officials testified the facility causes noise and air pollution.

Hein also contacted Walter Repholz, village building director, on May 13 and "inquired as to what was holding up the building permit to alter the attic" of a building at 1111 W. Dundee Rd.

The office building, owned by Richard Calfa, in 1975 was cited by village officials for violations of the building code. The village later filed suit against Calfa, his partner George Harhen and former building director William Bieber on charges of conspiring to violate village ordinances in construction of the building. The lawsuit was later dropped.

Repholz issued a building permit on July 28 after Calfa submitted information clearing up defiencies in the building plans.

995-unit development urged for Rob Roy

by DEBBE JONAK

A 995-unit development of houses, condominium units and apartments lined with a nine-hole golf course was proposed Friday for the Rob Roy Golf Course.

The mystery developer of the 180-acre site at Euclid Avenue and Wheeling Road, Wheeling Township, revealed himself and details of his plan for the first time at a hearing of the Cook County Zoning Board of Appeals in Prospect Heights.

Anthony Pasquinelli of Flossmoor is asking the county to rezone the site from half-acre single-family lots to a general residential area.

HE WAS GREETED BY about 50 protesters, many representing local government and citizens' groups. However, few received a chance to speak because the developer's presentation lasted close to five hours. The hearing will be continued next month.

Pasquinelli, of Pasquinelli Construction Co., Flossmoor, made a brief appearance before the board.

He has built about 3,500 units in the Chicago metropolitan area since 1956.

Because Pasquinelli kept his plans and identity secret for so long, Prospect Heights City Atty. Donald Kreger complained the city did not have adequate time to prepare a case against the project.

Upon learning of Pasquinelli's identity, Board Chairman, Alex R. Seith said he will not vote on the issue because his law partner is the attorney for Pasquinelli's brother and business partner.

The development, as described by a land planner, engineers, real estate assessors and other consultants of Pasquinelli, would add about 2,600 persons to the area.

THE DEVELOPER proposes 37 acre lots and the nine-hole golf course as a buffer zone between the project's multifamily units and nearby homes on half-acre lots.

The golf course would cover the unbuildable flood plain area along McDonald Creek.

There would be 202 lots smaller than a quarter acre each, 384 condominium units and 372 apartment units.

The project would not place an extra burden on area utilities, streets or drainage, the consultants said. Real Estate taxes would pay for an additional load on schools and would not hurt land values in adjacent areas, they said.

They said that from marketing, land-use and esthetic viewpoints, the project would be the best way to develop the property.

Critics took all those points to task, adding it would intensify the water shortage plaguing the area. They said the best use of the property would be as an open recreational area or single-family homes.

SEVERAL LOCAL TAXING bodies, including Wheeling Township, River Trails and Prospect Heights park districts and the City of Prospect Heights have expressed interest in purchasing the site for a recreational area.

Rapp pleads innocent to extortion

Carl W. Rapp Jr., Buffalo Grove village engineer, Friday pleaded innocent to one count of extortion at his arraignment in U.S. District Court.

A federal grand jury indicted Rapp Aug. 3 for attempting to extort $5,000 from a developer.

KIRKLAND granted Rapp's three defense attorneys 10 days to file briefs with the court and also granted Assistant U.S. Atty. Jeremy Margolis seven days to respond.

Waiting for more than an hour and a half before his arraignment began, Rapp appeared calm sitting in Judge Alfred Y. Kirkland's courtroom in the Federal Building, 219 S. Dearborn St., Chicago.

The case will come before U.S. Dist. Court Judge John Grady, Sept. 7 when a trial date is expected to be set.

Rapp, 1170 Thompson Blvd., Buffalo Grove, was arrested May 16 by two FBI agents after he allegedly received $5,000 from developer Louis P. Shassin, president of Wilmont Home Inc., Deerfield, which is building the Devonshire development at Busch Road and Ill. Rte. 83.

The payment was the first installment of $10,000 Rapp allegedly demanded for speeding Shassin's project through village approval processes.

Rapp, 34, was suspended without pay from his positions as village engineer and director of community development May. 17. Other village staff members and a consulting engineering firm have been performing Rapp's former duties while he awaits trial.

Charged with violating the Hobbs Act, which prohibits extortion, Rapp faces a maximum penalty of 20 years in prison and a $10,000 fine if found guilty.

Rand-Dundee corner under study

The high number of traffic accidents along U.S. Rte. 12 north of Dundee Road during the past 18 months has drawn the concern of Palatine and Lake Zurich officials.

Harvey C. Carothers, chief of the Palatine Fire Dept. said the interesection of U.S. Rte. 12 (Rand Road) and Dundee Road has become "our main place" for requests for ambulance service.

"I've always said we could practically station an ambulance at that corner," Carothers said. "We have a hell of a lot of accidents up there."

PALATINE PARAMEDICS answered 21 personal injury calls at the interesection since January of 1976 An average of more than once a month. In the same period, there were at least 40 more personal injury accidents involving vehicles that had turned off Rand Road or were headed toward it in Palatine Township he said.

Lake Zurich officials who are tabulating accidents reports in an attempt to have the state improve the hazardous situation on Rand Road report 112 accidents and 181 injuries on Rand Road from Lake Zurich to Lake Cook Road since January 1976.

There have been six fatalities in the last 18 months, five of them near the Rand Motel south of Quentin Road.

Among the fatalities were at least four pedestrians killed on the road. A recent victim was Bernhard Friedrich of Palatine, who was killed July 23 as he walked across the highway near Long Grove Road. He was struck at 2:30 a.m. by a hit-and-run driver whose headlights were out.

LAKE ZURICH officials have said the large number of businesses and the high speed limit, which ranges from 55 to 40 m.p.h. along Rand Road between Dundee Road and Lake Zurich, make the road hazardous.

In Palatine Township, only a narrow shoulder separates Rand Road from entrances to businesses such as taverns, restaurants, an adult bookstore and an outdoor theater. The speed limit for that area is 45 m.p.h.

Lake Zurich officials have asked the state to reduce the speed limit on Rand Road. They also have asked for more traffic lights and improved road conditions.

The state has suggested that local law enforcement agencies provide a selective enforcement program to slow drivers down.

CAROTHERS SAID much of the heavy traffic and accidents occur on weekends when Chicago and suburban residents head to the northern lakes region and Wisconsin.

"Between May 1 and Oct. 30 — every Friday through Sunday you have a whole crew of cars going through there," Carothers said. "Everybody is in such a hurry."

Paramedic Mark Toussaint of the Lake Zurich Rescue Squad said many of the accidents involve drivers who have been drinking.

"We need a much tougher judicial system to put these guys in jail or they're going to keep on killing people." he said.

A savings and loan and a music store will open within a month in the Arlington Market shopping center, Dryden Avenue and Kensington Road, Arlington Heights.

The Douglas Savings and Loan Assn. will expand into a 4,000-square-foot section of the center by early September, vice president Richard Brechlin said.

Neutron bargaining chip, Young says

U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young Friday said he hopes the neutron bomb is never built, but used only "as a bargaining chip in strategic arms limitation talks." Young said the neutron bomb and the President Carter's concern for human rights are in apparent contradiction, "but our world is a contradiction." The U.N. ambassador, who arrived in Venezuela Friday, said, "The problem is how to protect freedom in a world where many people do not respect freedom. "I would hope that the neutron bomb would never be built, but would simply be used as a bargaining chip in the strategic arms limitation talks," he said. Young met with President Carlos Andres Perez for two hours and then told a news conference the Venezuelan leader has "a concern for the problems of the developing world and a willingness to provide leadership both in the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Problems and in the Third World."

Quake hits shaky Californians

San Fernando, Calif., Fire Chief Durwood Lewis was at a banquet at the Elks Club when the building started a rolling motion. A man next to him said, "oh, no, not another one" and a woman addel, "I hope it's not that bad." The "minor" earthquake Thursday night registering 4.4 on the Richter scale caused little damage and only one minor injury. But so sensitive are the people of the San Fernando Valley to quakes that their thoughts immediately flashed to the 1971 disaster that destroyed or damaged thousands of homes and killed 65. The epicenter was only five miles north of Sylmar, site of the center of the quake six years ago, and it rocked houses, sloshed water from pools and knocked books, dishes, ornaments and bathroom items off shelves.

Jury to probe Senate computer

A federal grand jury in Washington will investigate the award of a contract that could be worth up to $9.9 million to a Pittsburgh firm for a computerized Senate mailing system, a Justice Dept. official told UPI Friday. Assistant U.S. Atty. William Block said the grand jury also will look into a $7.5 million contract awarded by the Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare to the company, On-Line Systems, Inc. On-Line President Jack Roseman and Chairman John Godfrey were away from their Pittsburgh offices and not immediately available for comment. Senate officials signed a three-year contract with On-Line May 22, but the system must survive a test before it will be accepted fully by the Senate Rules Committee. If the system proves out, the contract could be extended five more years on a year-to-year basis.

Winds blow Big Sur fire on

Twenty-mile-an-hour winds blew the Marble Cone fire in the California's Big Sur country northward Friday, jumping creeks and fire lines and expanding into a 100,000-acre "monster." Humidity was a bone dry 7 per cent, and the mercury was in the 90s — conditions that fed the fire's spread. "This is bad, ugly terrain in which we couldn't use heavy equipment," Jim Rice, a fire information officer, said. "Now the weather has made things worse and turned this thing into a monster." Until Friday the air tankers commonly could not see to fly because of smoke and fog. Bulldozer use was limited because the terrain was too rough. Along a dozen miles of fire line, "hotshot crews" set backfires as the main blaze approached.

Church urges 'reciprocal gesture'

U.S. Sen. Frank Church reported to President Carter Friday on his four-day Cuban visit and said he expects the United States to make a "reciprocal gesture" to Fidel Castro for allowing Cubans married to Americans to emigrate. But Church told a news conference Castro did not ask for any "quid pro quo" when he made the gesture. While Church was in Cuba, Castro told him that 80 to 100 Americans living in Cuba were free to leave and take their Cuban families with them, reversing a policy that allowed Americans to leave, but not their Cuban families. Church, D-Idaho, said he expects "some kind of reciprocal gesture" by the United States in the future.

Test to check if body is Nazi's

Authorities in Paraguay attempted to determine Friday if Nazi war criminal Eduard Roschmann, "The Butcher of Riga," was the elderly man who died of a heart attack in a pauper's hospital earlier this week. Roschmann was accused of ordering the deaths of 40,000 Jews in the ghetto of Riga, Latvia, while an SS captain in World War II. Friedrich Beck, West German public prosecutor, has said Roschmann "pulled the trigger himself" in many cases. A man identified by his documents as Federico Bernardo Wegener, 64, a naturalized Argentine, died early Wednesday of a heart attack at Asuncion's Clinical Hospital for indigcents.Wegener is a known alias used by Roschmann during the nearly 29 years he hid in neighboring Argentina.

Chile abolishes secret police

With a U.S. State Dept. official visiting to discuss human rights, Chile announced the abolishment Friday of its dread secret police agency, DINA, because it's no longer needed. The military government said President Augusto Pinochet signed the decree abolishing DINA — which achieved a worldwide reputation for brutality in its suppression of Marxists — because it had "accomplished the delicate functions of national security that were assigned to it." However, the decree that abolished DINA, a Spanish acronym for National Intelligence Directorate, also created the CNI, (National Information Center) to carry out basically the same functions of DINA.

Kidnaped exec phones 'I'm fine'

Kidnapped U.S. executive William Andrew Weinkamer told his family in Mexico he was well in a recorded message played to them over telephone Friday, police sources said. Police sources quoted a family friend identified as Raul Flores as saying Weinkamer told his family in the message that, "I am fine." A U.S. embassy spokesman said a local representative of Weinkamer's company was negotiating a ransom with the kidnapers. But unconfirmed reports said the company already had paid a ransom of $2.25 million. Weinkamer, manager of Clevite de Mexico, S.A. — a subsidiary of a Cleveland-based firm, was abducted late Tuesday by three men wielding submachine guns as he left his offices in Naucalpan, an industrial suburb of Mexico City. The gunmen shoved him into his own car and drove off, later abandoning the vehicle on a freeway.

Rightists say they stole treasures

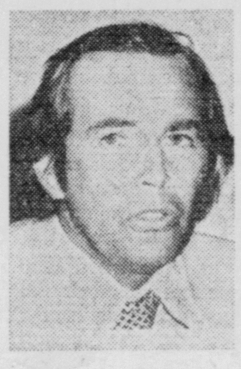
An obscure right-wing group in Spain said Friday it plundered the Oviedd cathedral in northern Spain and stole priceless works of religious art to prevent them from "falling into Communist hands." "The day Spain has again a government like the one of (late dictator) Generalissimo (Francisco) Franco, the treasure will be returned," the group, which calls itself the Anticommunist Iberian Alliance said in a taped message telephoned to the news paper El Pais.

Racism makes S. Africa 'scum of world': medic

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — Dr. Christiaan Barnard, the pioneer of heart transplant surgery, told his countrymen Friday that South Africa's racial policies had made it "the scum of the world community."

Barnard, speaking at the South African Freedom Foundations Conference on "Bridge Builders 1977," said his country's mistake went back to the late 1940s.

"This was a critical period in the history of the human race." he said. "It was just after World War II and the stench of the Nazi concentration camps was still fresh in our nostrils.



Christiaan Barnard

"YET WE COME along and talk about the purity of the white South African. It is no wonder that we are called Nazis, that we are called Fascists, because this is the impression that we give the world."

Another mistake was the "arrogant and ignorant way in which the government tried to implement its (apartheid) policy," he said, adding, "South Africa has become the scum of the world community. Nobody wants to have anything to do with us.

"We have unleashed an anti-white South African campaign by the mass media that has no parallel. All whites have become the oppressors and all blacks the oppressed."

A second speaker, John Barratt, warned against the danger of reacting simplistically to U.S. criticism of South African policies.

Barratt, who heads the South African institute of international affairs, said, "The approach of Americans to our problems is based on their own experience. The civil rights movement has had a profound effect on the United States.

"After their own experience, Americans, generally speaking, will not be tolerant towards policies based on race anywhere else," he said.

Hilton payment to GOP studied

by STEVE BROWN
Of our Springfield bureau

SPRINGFIELD — A $200 payment by the Arlington Park Hilton to the ganization will be studied by the state liquor commission to determine whether t violated state law.

Records filed with the State Board of Elections show the hotel made the payment on Jan. 28, 1976. State liquor laws forbid liquor license holders from making political contributions to candidates or political organizations.

Jack Wallenda, the commission's executive director, said he will have investigators examine the GOP organization's report.

Joseph Kane, manager of the hotel,confirmed the $200 payment was made to the township organization, but insisted it was not a contribution.

"WE BOUGHT an ad in the program book they put together for a dinner that was held here," Kane said.

"We know the law and would not jeopardize our licenses," he said. State records show the hotel-theater complex, Euclid and Rohlwing roads, has four liquor licenses.

Wallenda, however, said purchase of ads in program books are contributions and are prohibited by state law.

Frend Yonkers, Wheeling Township Republican committeeman, said Friday that as long as there was advertising value from the Hilton's page in the program book it was not considered a campaign contribution and was not illegal.

"THIS QUESTION came up two years ago. We checked into it and it was cleared at that time so there wasn't anything particular done about it last year when Hilton bought the ad," Yonkers said.

"The ad was for the hotel's weekend package," he said.

State law forbids either direct or indirect contributions of any kind by liquor license holders. The license could be suspended or revoked.

In addition to this new inquiry, state liquor commission agents also are looking into contributions made to Gov. James R. Thompson by men who were involved with corporations that hold liquor licenses in Chicago.

Thompson has insisted that the contributions were proper because they were made by individuals and not the corporations that hold the licenses.

4 political groups miss filing election expenses

by STEVE BROWN
Of our Springfield bureau

SPRINGFIELD—More than 80 political candidates and organizations are expected to be called to hearings before the State Election Board to explain why they failed to file annual campaign financing reports.

The state election law requires candidates and political organizations raising or spending more than $1,000 between July 1, 1976, and June 30, 1977, to file the report by July 31.

Richard Anderson, an official with the public disclosure section of the state election board, siad there were a number of organizations and candidates that did not file, but they refused to say which ones.

THE HERALD, however, has learned that among groups and candidates who failed to file were Democrat William Sarto of Elgin, who unsuccessfully sought election to the Illinois House in the 2nd Legislative District; the Palatine Township Democratic Organization; the Elk Grove Township Democratic Organization; and the Wheeling Township Dmocratic Organization.

Former Sec. of State Michael Howlett also is expected to be called before the board for filing late. Howlett had sought additional time to file because his campaign manager was ill.

A full report is expected to be turned over to the elections board early next week and the order for the hearings will follow.

The state began ordering the hearings last year when it was discovered large numbers of candidates and political organizations were failing to comply with the state's campaign financing disclosure law.

GENERALLY, THE errant candidates and groups have filed reports. The board has been able to achieve about 98 per cent compliance, Anderson said.

Palatine Township Democratic committeeman Walter Soroka confirmed that his organization was late in filing the report.

"We are in the process of preparing it now," he said, without explaining why the organization had missed the July 31, 1977, deadline.

Spokesmen for the Democratic township organizations in Elk Grove and Wheeling townships could not be reached for comment.

State law does not allow the elections board discretion in cases involving persons or groups that fail to meet the filing deadline, but in the past the board has dropped court action if the report is filed when the notice of the hearing is prepared.

John Lewis, state official, dead

TERRE HAUTE, Ind. (UPI) — Former Illinois Sec. of State John W. Lewis, a veteran legislator, auctioneer and livestock producer, died Friday in Union Hospital. He was 71.

John Lewis

Lewis, a Republican who lived in Marshall, Ill., all his life, was a contemporary of the late Paul Powell, former Sec. of State., and worked closely with Powell both on legislation and on county fairs and harness racing.

Lewis was born in Marshall on Sept. 6, 1905. He attended grade and high school in Marshall and the University of Illinois.

He served nine consecutive terms, starting in 1940, in the Illinois House, one term in the Senate and three more terms in the House. He had 26 years total legislative service and claimed a perfect attendance record.

He served as majority whip, majority leader and was elected speaker for the 73rd General Assembly.

Richard B. Ogilvie, then governor, appointed Lewis agriculture director in 1969 and named him secretary of state after Powell's death the following year.

Lewis was a bombastic orator who used a "down home" twang and country boy expressions to drive hard bargains. When some race track stock dealings on his family's behalf were uncovered in 1971, Lewis held a press conference to denounce the reporter who had written about the scandal, threatening at one point to "clean his plow."

Visitation is at 2 p.m. today in the Moore Funeral Home in Marshall. Services will be Sunday at St. Mary's Church and Lewis will be buried in Marshall Cemetery.

Carter budget on welfare too low: Crane

U.S. Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-12, has charged that President Carter's welfare reform package is underestimated by $3.4 billion.

The administration's $2.8 billion estimate of the program's cost does not include $3.4 billion price tag on the expanded income tax credit, Crane said.

"This so-called reform moves in precisely the wrong direction by emphasizing Washington bureaucratic control over welfare programs," he said.

"In many cases, persons now working will become eligible for welfare while millions working at subsidized jobs will continue to receive supplemental welfare payments."

Under the earned income tax credit proposal, welfare assistance would be available to persons making $14,000 to $16,000 a year under the Carter plan, Crane said.

CANCER DETECTION
HEART ATTACK PREVENTION

A resting electrocardiogram is taken at the Northwest Center for Early Disease Detection, Inc. to detect any heart abnormalities.

Of every six people who get cancer today, two will be saved and four will die. Of the four who would otherwise die, one might be saved with earlier diagnosis and prompt treatment. (According to American Cancer Society publication '76 Cancer Facts and Figures.)

The health examination services available at the Northwest Center for Early Disease Detection include all cancer detection procedures recommended by the American Cancer Society, Illinois Division.

Heart Disease accounts for nearly half of all deaths each year. Unlike most Cancer, Heart Attack can be postponed through reducing one's risk factors such as diet, exercise, blood pressure, smoking, etc. Dr. Morris Collen, a well-known specialist in preventive medicine, was quoted in the January, 1977 Issue of FORTUNE "if one has a checkup every year or two at age thirty-five and thereafter, directed at postponable diseases, the mortality rate from those diseases after seven years is approximately 50 percent of what it would have been without exams."

The Northwest Center for Early Disease Detection, Inc. offers a preventive health screening examination designed for three purposes:

1. To establish a health profile for each individual to be used as a baseline for future care.
2. To analyze an individual's risk factors for heart disease and cancer and statistically forecast probable life expectancy and suggest ways it might actually be increased by reducing the risk factors found.
3. Screen for treatable disease. Early detection and prompt treatment increase the probability of a favorable outcome.

This meticulous 3 hour, low cost examination includes a computerized medical history, health risk analysis, physical examination, proctosigmoidoscopy, chest x-ray, electrocardiogram, blood pressure, over 30 chemical determinations on blood and urine, vision, audiometry, spirometry, glaucoma test, body measurements. Women also receive a pap smear and instruction in breast self-examination. Exercise stress test, 24 hour holter monitor, and echocardiography are available as options.

Give yourself the best protection available today against cancer and heart disease by calling your physician or the Northwest Center for Early Disease Detection, Inc. located at 1000 Grand Canyon Parkway, Hoffman Estates, Illinois (Near Woodfield Mall.) Ask Andy

Andy sends the Encyclopaedia Britannica's 1977 Yearbook of Science and the Future to Gary McAuley, 9, of Portland, Ore., for his question:

WHAT IS VOODOO?

Many of the people in Haiti today still follow the customs their forefathers brought from Africa. Most live on small farms that are tiny plots of land that were once part of large plantations where the ancestors worked as slaves.

A religion called voodoo is practiced by many of the Haitians. It is a blend of both Christian and African beliefs.

Believers in voodoo say that by performing certain rituals a person can become possessed by gods. They believe that a voodoo priest — a man they call a houngan — has certain great powers. The houngan draws designs on the ground with flour and then the people dance until they believe a god has possessed one or more of them.

Haitians believe in many gods, including the gods of rain, love, war and farming.

Voodoo is also called vodun. It is a West African word that means god or spirit. The practice of magic is often included as part of the religious experience. Followers believe in sorcery and fetishes.

Voodooism says that the spirits of people who have died continue to live in a world of ghosts. They also believe that these ghosts can visit the world of the living and that they can either bless or curse the people here.

During a voodoo ceremony, chief magicians bring the living into touch with the dead. A medicine man may go into a trance and then talk with a wooden image, saying that a spirit is answering him through the image.

In the practice of voodoo, a person might make a wax image of one of his enemies. He then may stick pins into the wax image, hoping that with the help of voodooism he will injure his enemy.

Some put voodoo and black magic together. Black magic, often practiced by so-called witches, often attempts to harm certain people.

Many believe that the practice of voodooism and black magic is wrong, and in some societies the practice of these rituals is forbidden. Many believe that it is very wrong to use so-called magical medicines, such as powdered animal horns or teeth and to have a ceremony that hopes to inflict pain and agony on certain people.

Andy sends the book 200 Illustrated Science Experiments to Christine Velis, 13, of Salt Lake City, Utah, for her question:

HOW ARE PING PONG BALLS MADE?

A special machine is used to make the feather-light balls we use to play ping pong, or table tennis. Made of thin celluloid, the ball measures between 4½ inches to 4¾ inches in circumference and weighs just one-tenth of an ounce. The balls are first made in halves but are sealed into the round shape by a special machine.

A British firm registered the table tennis name of ping pong in America in 1901 and soon after sold the rights to Parker Bros. An international organization of players in 1921 adopted the unpatented name table tennis as the official name of the game.

The game was first called miniature lawn tennis when it was originated in 1884. Cork balls were first used; celluloid balls were introduced in 1890.

Win at bridge

King appears to set 3 NT

Lee Hazen of New York, the general counsel of the ACBL and a player who has won 11 major championships, including four Vanderbilt Cups, is also responsible for some of the finest bridge stories.

Sitting West, he elected to open the nine of spades against South's rather normal three-notrump contract. The queen was played from dummy and East followed with the three spot.

A diamond was led and Lee took his ace. In spite of that discouraging three of spades, Lee saw no reason to try another suit. The game was matchpoints and Lee did not want to help declarer with any problems he might have in hearts and clubs.

He led his eight of spades. The ace was played from dummy and East played the six. Declarer cashed three diamonds while East chucked a couple of clubs. The king of clubs was led next and Lee was on lead once more. He led his last spade!

His partner started to play a card, jumped in shock, put the card back, produced the king of spades, cashed two more spade tricks and apologized to Lee for not seeing the king of spades earlier.

Lee said: "You sure found it at the right time."

David E. Anderson

World of religion

The American public may not really be taking President Carter's notion of an energy crisis — and the consequent need for energy conservation — very seriously.

But a growing number of churches are.

According to the Interreligious Coalition on Energy, made up of Jewish, Protestant and Roman Catholic groups, the energy crisis shows "how far American institutions (including the church and synagogue) have strayed from the Judeo-Christian tradition of stewardship."

It said the "overwhelming majority" of the 330,000 religious buildings in the Untied States "can accurately be described as energy sieves."

AMONG THE leaders in the energy conservation effort is the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, the congregational arm of the Reform movement in organized Judaism.

Three major Protestant denominations have begun arranging for construction of at least four solar heated church buildings as an experiment energy conservation. The three denominations are the American Baptist Churches, the United Methodist Church and the American Lutheran Church.

Board should remain cautious on campus plan

A second campus for Harper College has been a source of discussion and controversy since before the Sept. 27, 1975 referendum authorizing purchase of land for the campus in Arlington Heights.

That referendum succeeded, but during the campaign college officials pledged to study the entire issue further before committing the school to construction of the second campus.

That pledge is even more important today because the college's enrollment, while still growing, did not skyrocket last year as it did earlier.

Despite the less than anticipated growth, the college board has been under increasing pressure in recent months to authorize the second campus. It has so far resisted the urging of the administration to hire an architect for the second campus.

It is clear the college board is doing the right thing in moving slowly on building on the second campus. What the board must now do is ensure that alternatives to the second campus are fully and fairly considered.

In a series of stories this week by Herald reporter Rena Wish Cohen, college administrators from other parts of the country, including Florida, Missouri and North Carolina, discussed alternatives they had found to building traditional second campuses. These alternatives were variously called "colleges without walls" and "open colleges."

Under the alternatives in use elsewhere, facilities such as public schools, churches and libraries were used for classes. Books and audio-visual materials were put in local public libraries.

Harper already is using off-campus facilities for classes. The board should press the college administration to expand such programs. In addition, use of closed elementary schools ought to be considered carefully as a way to provide more space for the college without additional construction.

All involved in the Harper decision must remember that the land for the second campus at Palatine and Schoenbeck roads Arlington Heights will be ready for a second campus anytime in the future. Buying the land in 1975 was a farsighted move by the college.

It is better to let the land wait empty for a while rather than later to be the title holder of a campus that isn't needed.

Youth center progress

Buffalo Grove has been talking about starting a youth center for a long time now.

Every few years someone decides it would be a good idea to give the kids a place of their own, but despite all the good intentions, interest usually wanes before anything is done.

This year may end that pattern. At the urging of village Trustee Robert Bogart and 870 residents who signed petitions, the village board has agreed to spend $20,000 to move a building from Cambridge on the Lake development to a site near village hall for use as a youth center.

This is a good start, but there still is much work to be done before a youth center opens.

Bogart has proposed the formation of seven citizens' committees to work on different phases of the teen center including programming, staffing and funding. Residents should take the time to get involved.

If Buffalo Grove is going to have a successful youth center, it is only going to be through the hard work and interest of its residents.

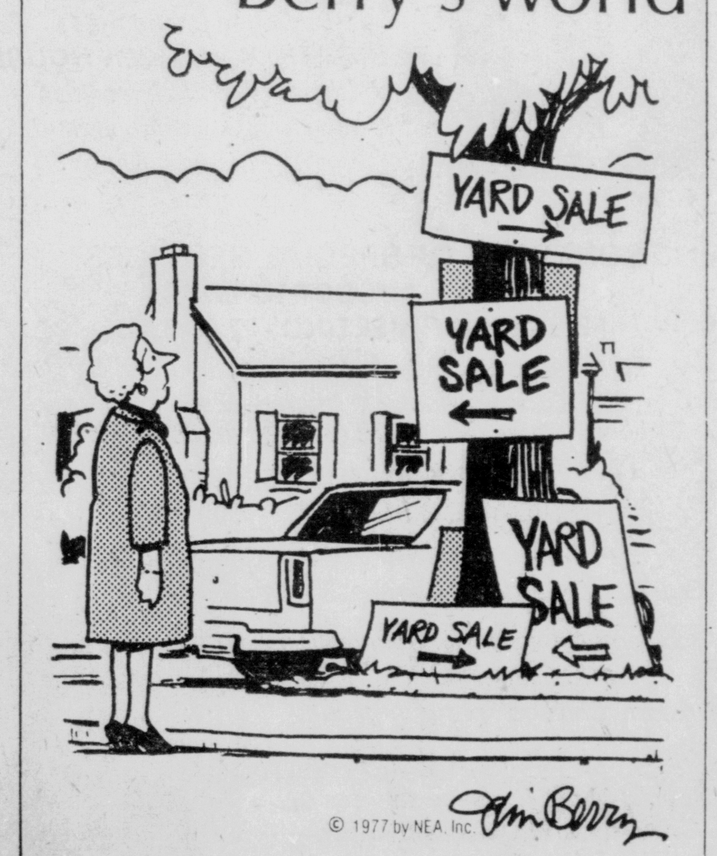
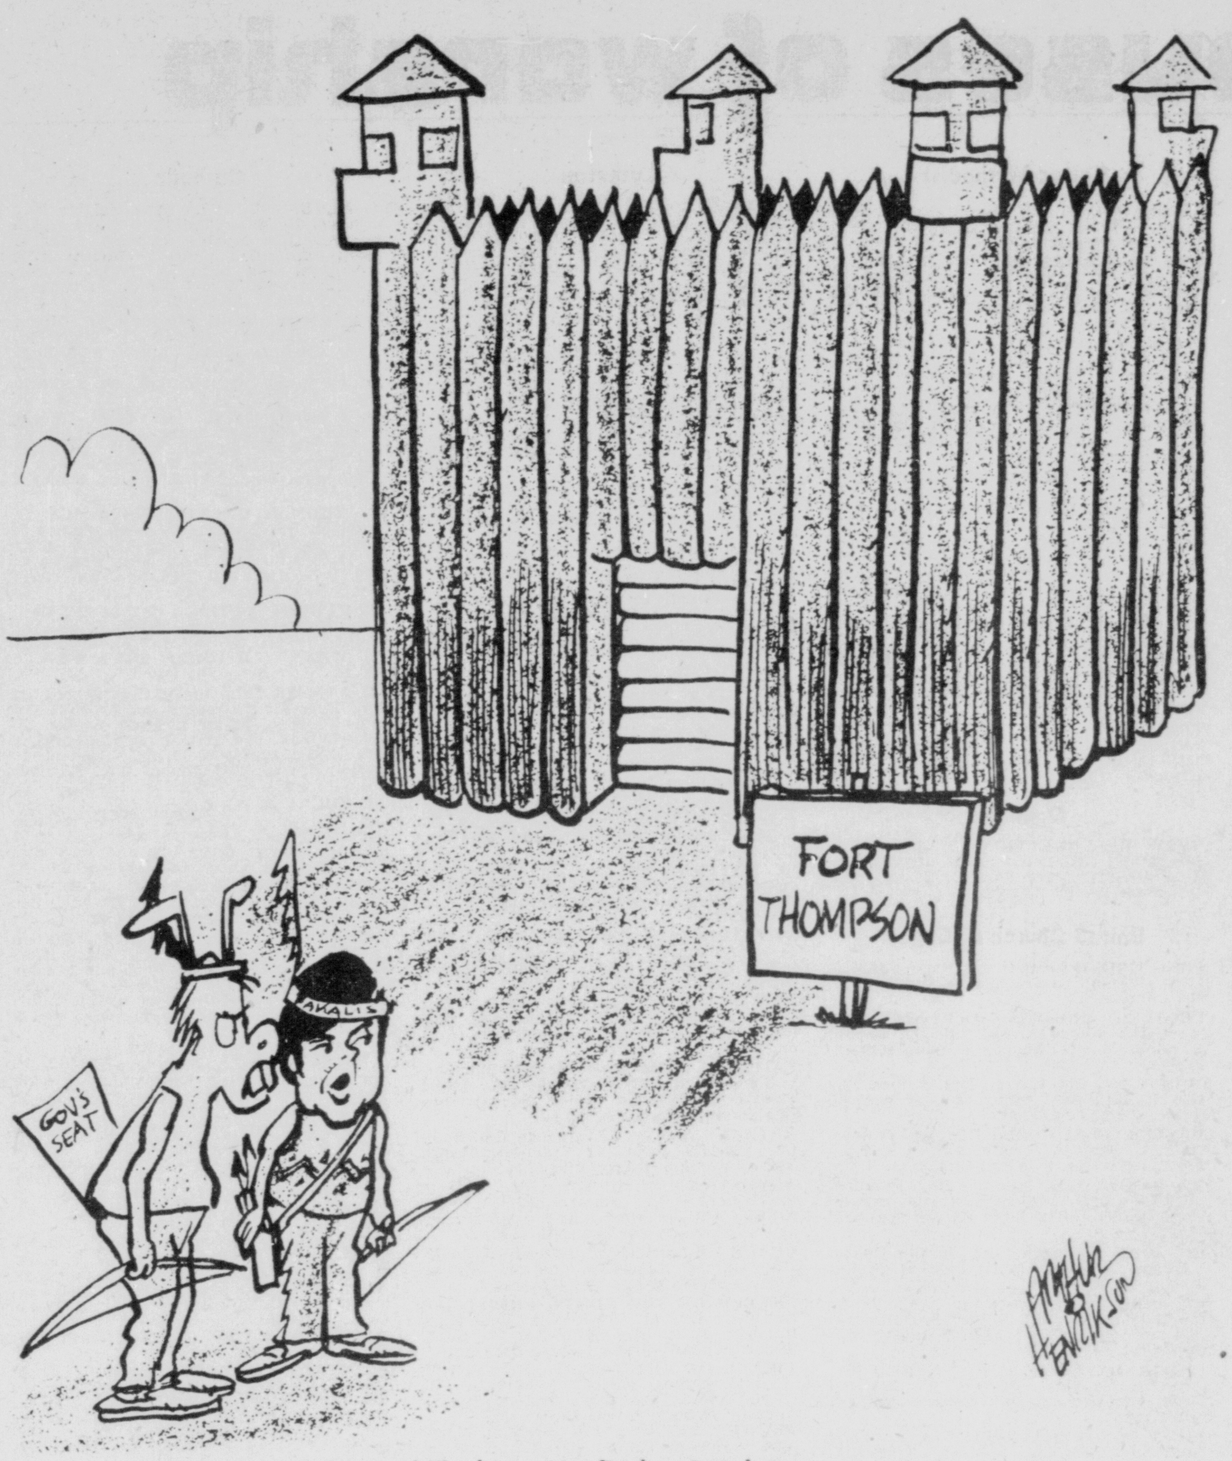
Berry's world





U.S. may send jobs to Ulster

President Carter is planning, despite tactful denials from the White House, to push American money towards Northern Ireland — a distinct change in attitude from the studied American silence of the past which has often been taken as tacit sympathy for the Irish Republican Army.

The Carter initiative, still very much at its formative stage, could be anything from a modest statement encouraging private American investment in the province to a more ambitious dollar-denominated aid program offering real incentives to industry. The single idea would be to create jobs, one of the few necessities upon which both Protestant and Catholic politicans in the province agree. Great care would be taken to see that no partisan political or religious connotations could be put on the program.

The governments in Britain and Ireland have remained surprisingly coy about the idea. They are wrong to do so. America already has the largest slice of foreign investment in Ulster and the jobs that a Carter-inspired program could create would be exactly those the province most needs: modern, profit-making jobs in the private sector. The idea is to suggest investment only in companies "responsive to natural market forces"; exactly not the traditional loss-making industries that are now being propped up in the province.

IN THE PAST a small minority of the 15 million Irish-Americans, backed by a strong folklore, has always shied the United States away from lending what could be considerable assistance to Northern Ireland. President Carter clearly thinks that he can outflank those few who believe in continuing armed struggle in Ireland and win the support of the vast majority who would like to see the administration give positive support to the old country.

In the spring of 1976 Jimmy Carter, the candidate, had little support from the largely urban, northern, Catholic, Irish voters. So he succumbed to folklore, walking down Fifth Avenue in a St. Patrick's day parade with a "Get England out of Ireland" button pinned on his coat. Since then things have changed.

But not because Britian has made the United States the problem it faces in Ulster. It has not. Instead four leading Irish-American politicians, acting as a group, have tried to do the sensible thing. Their progress has been remarkable in swaying public opinion.

IN MARCH Tip O'Neill, the speaker of the House of Representatives, Hugh Carey, governor of New York, and Senators Edward Kennedy and Daniel Patrick Moynihan issued a St. Patrick's day appeal for an end to all private American support for the IRA. In April Carey, speaking in Dublin, called Ulster's terrorists "assassins". By May Kennedy felt confident enough to tell an Ireland Fund dinner in New York: "While the killing in Northern Ireland goes on, let no American have it on his conscience that his effort or his dollars helped to make the violence worse."

By June, the four leaders served a formal notice on Secretary of State Cyrus Vance that they endorsed a peaceful settlement in Ulster. An initiative by Carter is being delayed, however, perhaps until the end of August, until it can be cleared in London and Doublin. Hurry London, hurry Dublin, clear it quick.

The fight for language

New usage shows tin ear

Paul Greenberg

One of the really great things about the American lifestyle is language. Hopefully, its support structures are in place and meeting the felt needs of the people. For the bottom line of creative writing, or of communication arts in general, is making meaningful contributions to consciousness-raising.

In short, the state of the language is not good. Too much of it is like that first paragraph. Horrendous. It's as if the American language has been sandbagged by television and sociology. If H. L. Mencken were yet with us, would he even bother to dissect modern language? Or would he just start calling names from the first?

Non-alarmists will point out that bemoaning the state of the language is a satisfying custom as old as Confucius, yet language lives. After all, writers have been viewing English with alarm at least since Jonathan Swift's day and look what's happened. Yes, look. Compare the King James Bible to the Revised Standard Version, Elizabethan English to computerese and Educanto. It is like comparing a noble ruin to a plastic raincoat.

Perhaps the greatest service rendered by the latest guide to English usage (the Harper Dictionary of Contemporary Usage) is to have inspired a sizzling review in the Times Literary Supplement. That solid appendage of the London Times tries to keep up the old standards, but it's not easy. As the reviewer, Joseph Epstein, would be the first to confess.

EPSTEIN MAY BE a bit persnickety for American tastes (for example, he finds the use of the word Ghetto to describe a slum ideologically unacceptable) but he is in the tradition of H. W. Fowler, that grand old fulminator. And in these times there is even more to fulminate against.

As Epstein puts it: "Tolerance, moderation, sweet reason, everywhere else rightly deemed virtues, have no place in the battle for good usage." He is thoroughly intolerant of sloppiness in language and a delight to nod in agreement with.

Joseph Epstein can speak from a considerable and harrowing experience as a university teacher of English composition. He relates that these days he can give his students the most agglutinated examples of prose, ask for their critique, and gets only "a chill silence."

It is, alas, an accurate reflection of the state of the language. And the state of the language says much about the state of society. His students, for example, no longer seem to distinguish between the words "uninterested" and "disinterested." But he is charitable — and grim — on this score: "Certainly it is difficult to become angry with students who do not know the traditional meaning of disinterested. How can they know it when in their lives they probably have not seen it?"

EVERYONE HAS AN interest in the clarity and meaning of language, although not everyone may realize it. Honest illiteracy and a pretentious semi-literacy seem to slug it out for dominance over what is left of the language. The great danger in denouncing both is that one will be branded as opposed to all change. Opposing any change is no way to preserve the meaning of language, either. For as an Oriental proverb has it, even to preserve things as they are, one must make some changes. It is the character of the change that matters. It is the absence of mind, the tin ear, the mechanical heart of much that is new that offends, not change itself.

To say something new or even something old in a new way . . . that is as welcome as it ever was. But to do it poorly is to lose, in Joseph Epstein's language, "the critical ability to see through others' and one's own deceptions."

They say Dist. 59 board vindictive

Every issue of the Herald proves the old saying that difference of opinion is what makes a horse race. The editorial policy is a splended example of an inflexible point of view. To wit, the present board of education in Elk Grove Twp. Dist. 59 is a strong board, or so states Wandalyn Rice. Also, if a "blue" pencil were applied to the articles written by Sheryl Jedlinski and all the editorial comments removed, there would be little left to publish.

Harold Harvey and his cronies are not a strong board of education. They are merely out for blood. Their attitude, which is supported by the other Herald, is that they have a mandate from the voters. They came in on the tails of an issue, a single issue, unit district. The other supposed horrors they think were elected to solve are no different in 59 than in any other district (reading, writing and arithmetic); complaints about schools to fail to deliver in those areas are universal and reflect on our society more than a local failing.

If Harold and the The Herald were to be honest with the public the issue would be summarized this way: Dr. Bardwell and his staff had the nerve to support unit district; they were not chosen by Harvey et al; they represent a stepping stone to bigger things; they must go. Harold Harvey, if you don't like Dr. Bardwell, why don't you fire him instead of degrade and embarrass him? If he resigns there is no contract to pay off?

Also, why does the Paddock never point out that Harold Harvey may be in conflict of interest? His first responsibility is to his bank, Tollway Arlington National Bank, and its customers. Anything that results in a higher tax can mean bad relations with key bank customers (area businesses). Harold Harvey is serving two masters; one has to come out on the short end of the stick. (It won't be the one that feeds him).

Saul Cohen
Elk Grove Village

MY HAT IS off to Mrs. Zanca, board member of Elk Grove Twp. Dist. 59. She has the courage to tell it like it is. On August 3 The Herald quotes Mrs. Zanca as saying, "Leah (Cummins) was doing her job by promoting the unit district and now they (the four unit district opponents elected to the board in April) are punishing her for it." The article reported that by majority vote the Dist. 59 school board decided to terminate Leah Cummins' job as coordinator of community affairs. It appears that those who opposed the unit district idea cannot tolerate any difference of opinion on this issue. Mrs. Zanca's statement reveals that there is still quite a bit of animosity on this issue.

I suspect that those people deeply involved in defeating the unit district idea in the March referendum are scared stiff because they really pulled a fast one on the voting public and the taxpayers. The issue is clear-cut. Because most of the tax revenue comes from the Dist. 59 area, we would cut ourselves off from the rest of the district and keep all the money for the schools in our immediate area. Those outside the district were not even allowed to vote on this issue, and acceptance of this idea by a referendum vote seemed quite certain. However, some school teachers in Dist. 59 were against this idea, probably because they thought their jobs would be jeopardized. So they used the school children in their classroom (and I do mean used) to send messages to the parents. The propaganda, as silly and incoherent as it was, worked, and the unit school district idea was defeated.

Those responsible for the victory had to prove to themselves that they really had nothing to fear from the voters they had just duped, so they had themselves a victory picnic at the taxpayers expense. In a way I really have to agree with them — we are pretty dumb.

But getting rid of Leah Cummins shows that they are still scared, and maybe when the next school board election comes up, we can show them that we are not so dumb after all.

Higher taxes hit

Which comes first — the horse or the cart? I had always thought that each taxing body submitted their budget and when all the budgets were added together, from that the tax rate was determined.

If you multiply this year's tax rate by last year's equalized assessed valuation you would find an approximate 9 per cent to 10 per cent increase in your bill. Sounds reasonable in view of the bond issues and referendums we have approved without too much thought.

Divide this year's tax bill by last year's equalized assessed valuation and you will find a tax rate of about 14 per cent. Did we approve of bond issues to increase our tax rate that much?

It is my contention that there is a mistake in the tax rate as set. But how will we ever find out?

In the poetic wasteland with a very bad bard

Dorothy Meyer

Two remarkable things happened last weekend — my daughter was awarded her master's degree and I learned how to write a rotten poem. The first event was most important of course, but I won't dwell on that because nobody wants to listen to a doting mother dote.

However, I became infected by the rotten-poem bug and I intend to spread it around because I hate to suffer alone.

It happened during an ordinary conversation when a professor of one of Marilyn's friends said that a rotten poem followed a strict formula. (If you've read any lousy poetry lately, you may recognize it.) The first line MUST be, "In the (something) of my mind," followed by a line that is a contradictory statement about the five senses. The third line can be about absolutely anything, but the fourth line has to be about the future. And of course, nothing is supposed to rhyme.

WHEN I FIRST heard the formula, I said, "Huh," and Marilyn immediately whipped up an example. It went: "In the vast wasteland of my mind/ I hear the smoke/whatever happened to Baby Jane?/Don't ask me until yesterday comes."

I said, "Ye gods, that's awful," and Marilyn said, "Gee, thanks, Mom."

The more I thought about it, though, the more I realized that I've read some serious poetry in recent years that made about as much sense as Marilyn's impromptu offering.

So I decided to try it.

THINKING about all the garden produce waiting for me at home I rotten-poemed this one: In the Kerr lid of my mind/I see the sound of jars exploding/Tomatoes get stewed but apples are saucier/In the year 2010 I'll be an old lady if possible.

When the professer shuddered and said, "That really stinks," I felt like I'd won a Pulitzer Prize.

Then Marilyn's brothers became afflicted. The bus driver chanted, "In the fare box of my mind/I smell the feeling of a traffic jam/Little old ladies sometimes forget their transfers/Next week I may take up needlepoint."

And the lawn doctor said, "In the landscape of my mind/I hear the sight of broad-leafed plantain/I never promised you a rose garden/But it will probably rain tomorrow anyway."

I COULD HARDLY wait to get home and contaminate my friends, but the first one I talked to was so mad at her husband for vegetating in front of the TV set that she didn't seem to hear a word I said. However, while I was talking about the weather, she suddenly yelled, "In the Big Valley of my mind/I taste Space 1999 reruns/My phone number is Hawaii Five-0/The new TV season starts in September."

Then she smiled and muttered, "Gad, that felt good."

Finally, I tried to infect the boss and after explaining the formula and giving some samples, I suggested he sponsor a rotten poem contest.

HE LOOKED AT me like I had a wart on the end of my nose and said, "You try something like that around here and I'll — ."

-."

In interrupted with, "In the pink slip of my mind," and he said, "You got it, lady."

He'll be sorry when I get to be a rotten-poet laureate.

'48 election fraud was vintage LBJ

Watch on Washington

The recent confession of a former Texas election official is the "smoking gun" testimony that should establish beyond doubt Lyndon B. Johnson's responsibility for the blatant theft of a Senate seat as well as the cover-up of that election fraud.

In the case of Luis Salas, 76, the depth of corroboration for his story of the primary election steal in 1948 and the cover-up has been a matter of public record for nearly 30 years.

There is no reason to doubt these elements of Salas' story:

• THAT SALAS falsely certified 200-odd votes added to Johnson's total after the polls had closed on the orders of George B. Parr, the corrupt and twice-convicted political boss of the Mexican-American area in Duval and Jim Wells counties.

• That on instruction from Parr, Salas was not available for testimony or interviews by law enforcement officials or the representatives of former Texas Gov. Coke Stevbnson in connection with a challenge filed to Johnson's 87-vote Democratic primary victory.

• That Johnson, the beneficiary of the vote fraud, was knowledgeable about the specific 200-vote fraud to assure his victory over Stevenson in the Democratic primary.

In the years since 1948, Texas newspapers and several historians have chronicled massive evidence that a vote fraud did take place in Jim Wells County. They did it despite the successful efforts of Johnson, his campaign manager, John B. Connally, and his lawyer, Abe Fortas, to block a full hearing in the court of United States District Judge T. Whitfield Davidson.

THE PRELIMINARY proceedings established that there were direct witnesses, including two former FBI agents, Kellis Dibrell and Jim Gardner, who said they had reviewed the "corrected" list in Precinct 13 in Jim Wells County. They said 202 names had been added in alphabetic order and in blue ink whereas the original list was in black. They also said the names appeared to be in the same handwriting. There was no challenge with the hearing in his Fort Worth court.

An order from the Jim Wells County attorney barred Dibrell, Gardner or others from photographing the lists or even copying the names on the voting list in Ballot Box 13 which was stored in the vault of a bank owned by Democratic political boss Parr.

A later effort to subpoena the list for copying and preservation revealed that it had disappeared. The explanation given was that a Mexican janitor, not aware of its importance, had dumped it in the wastebasket and burned it.

That list of certified votes was in the custody of Tom Donald, the secretary of the Jim Wells County Democratic executive Committee, who was also an employe in Parr's Texas State Bank in Alice, Tex.

TO GET TO THE bottom of the dispute, Judge Davidson named a master in chancery to summon witnesses to take testimony and subpoena documents. Two of those on his list were Luis Salas, who had certified the list, and Donald, who had insisted on keeping Ballot Box 13 in the Parr bank from which it had disappeared.

On the eve of Judge Davidson's hearings, Washington lawyer and Johnson confidant Abe Fortas persuaded Supreme Court Justice Hugo Black to sign an injunction that barred Judge Davidson from proceeding

Salas remained silent until a recent interview with the Associated Press when he said: "Johnson did not win that election; it was stolen for him. And I know exactly how it was done."

Johnson, a canny political operator, did not keep tape recordings of his devious political shenanigans. Those who tried to track his peripheral involvement in the Billie Sol Estes scandal and the notorious Bobby Baker case learned that Johnson seldom wrote letters or notes of instructions to associates who were obviously acting for him.

It should be no surprise that the LBJ library would release an unsigned, undated memo, which they believed to be in Johnson's handwriting, that was no more than a vague self-serving declaration of innocence.

"I AM WITHOUT knowledge, concerving the ballots in either Duval, Jim Wells or Zapata counties, or any of the other counties in Tesas, except what I have seen in the press," said the statement released by the LJB library.

The low level of Lyndon Johnson's credibility over his entire political career and the efforts he and his political associates made to block a full public hearing in 1948 are further reasons for believing Luis Salas — the repentant participant in a political crime that ranks with Watergate.

Freedom must feel great if so many of us pursue it

by ANTHONY RIPLEY

DENVER, COLO. — It was an ordinary going-home afternoon.

I was thinking about Armageddon, the ultimate battle between the forces of good and evil in which the world is consumed in fire and brimstone.

When I think about Armageddon, I keep having this problem about which side I'm on in the battle. Suppose all my life I am convinced that I'm on the side of good and actually I'm not?

THIS WAS GOING on as I was cruising along Federal Boulevard, up where the erotic massage and dirty movie motels are, and suddenly:

FAP! ROWRRRR! GARRRRRRR-RUNGE!

Two chopped motorcycles whooshed by. The riders leaned well back, feet up, and the wind tattered their hair and beards. They were smirking as though they knew some secret I didn't. It was the kind of smirk that causes housewives to take the kids indoors.

There were no vibrations of anger, no ripples of fear. But they seemed supremely in control of themselves, their machines and the pavement around them.

I wasn't sure what side they'd be on during Armageddon and I also wasn't sure what it was that made them look so strange and cocky. I hadn't seen men like them on the street in a long time.

The motorcycle helmet law had been repealed and for the first time in years, there were real people out there on the street driving real motorcycles.

The machine people with the round plastic heads are gone. Abstractions have suddenly come alive and there is flesh and bone astride the bikes.

It was safer for the bikers in the helmets. But should the state of Colorado interfere in our lives and force us to be safe? The General Assembly hovered over that question for a bit and finally said, "No, the state should not force you to be safe." They were right. The governor let it become law without his signature.

We speak of freedom but we are slaves to safety. We want a safe job, a safe car, a safe place to raise the kids. But the life of a free man is not safe. Life for him is a gamble. And when you gamble, you must be willing to lose, though you always hope to win.

FREEDOM IS A burden, a danger and a risk. So perhaps many think it is a reasonable trade. But without freedom, life is a heartbreaking grayness, flat and empty.

All this was tumbling through my mind so I leaned out my car window and shouted to the man with the greasy hair on the Kawasaki.

"FREEDOM MUST feel great. You know, no helmet," I said, pointing to my head to show what I meant.

"What? I can't hear you," he said and cupped his ear.

"I said freedom's great, isn't it?"

I think he thought I was a drunk. He gunned his machine and took off.

I guess philosophy has its limitations.

Carter's human rights policy just a bit too pushy

by PAT M. HOLT

The more President Carter talks about human rights as a fundamental part of his foreign policy, the more he sounds like he is making it an evangelical crusade. This is bad, because it has been evangelism — or dogmatism, if you will — that has produced some of the most grievous mistakes in American foreign policy.

William McKinley explained his decision to take the Philippines as the result of divine guidance "to uplift and civilize and Christianize" them. The results have not been particularly happy, either for the Filipinos or for ourselves.

Woodrow Wilson explained his Mexican policy as being to teach the Mexicans to live with the results of their elections, no matter how many interventions it took. This is the lineal intellectual ancestor of a policy which, 50 years later, said in effect that the Vietnamese were going to be free and democratic if it killed us.

FRANKLIN ROOSEVELT abjured negotiation and insisted on unconditional surrender in World War II. This prolonged the war and increased the destruction of Germany and Japan, which we later rebuilt at great cost.

Now comes Jimmy Carter to explain, to thunderous applause, the relationship between his Southern heritage and his commitment to human rights. He mentioned deep religious feelings of the Bible Belt and the thought that, in the year after the Bicentennial, "we ought to stand for something" in the tradition of Jefferson. Although denying that he is trying to change foreign governments, Carter finds that the yearning for freedom is worldwide. He goes on to relate his human rights policy, by implication anyway, to a guilt feeling over the treatment of blacks in the South.

THERE ARE SEVERAL disturbing aspects in all of this. In the first place, it sounds like the kind of zealousness that has gotten us in trouble before. It has echoes of Wilson's crusade to make the world safe for democracy when what we ought to be attempting is, as John Kennedy put it, to make the world safe for diversity.

In the second place, there is osme doubt as to how worldwide the yearning for freedom really is. One does not have to abandon his sympathy for Soviet dissidents to point out that they are, so far as we know, a minority of the population. And one also may question whether the suffering masses of the third world would rather have the U.S. Constitution's Bill of Rights or a square meal.

In the third place, if Carter is not trying to change governments with his human rights policy, what is he trying to do? He may not be trying to change the makeup of governments, but he is certainly trying to change the way they manage their own affairs.

Finally, it is a grievously simplistic mistake to try to transfer the lessons of America's own peculiar and shameful racial experience to other parts of the world.

It is none of America's business how other countries organze themselves for the conduct of their own affairs. It is America's business what kind of relations we have with them.

There is a middle way between turning out backs on the rest of the world and trying to make it over in our own image. But this is the way which the Carter administration seems not to have found. And it's making disconcerting noises that it's not even looking for it.

Son of Sam under 24-hour guard

by RON CLAIBORNE

NEW YORK (UPI)—David Berkowitz, the self-confessed .44-caliber killer known as "Son of Sam," Friday began undergoing a battery of psychiatric tests to determine if he can be held criminally responsible for the ambush murders of six young men and women in the last year.

Officials said Berkowitz, 24, would spend at least the next two weeks locked in "Spartan" quarters in G building at Kings County Hospital in Brooklyn as psychiatrists begin probing his thoughts in conversations and formal tests. Guards watch him through a reinforced glass panel in a door.

"I'll try to engage the man in conversation and as the conversation flows, that is how it will go," Daniel Schwartz, director of forensic psychiatry, said Friday.

"IT WILL BE my function to ascertain whether or not he understands what is going on, if he is criminally responsible for his act . . . whether he can assist in his defense," Schwartz said, adding the tests would take about two weeks.

Schwartz refused to say what, if any, discussion he has had with the accused killer.

At the same time Friday, old friends of the suspected killer told of how Berkowitz underwent a vast transformation in the Army, casting off his conservative upbringing to espouse radical left-wing groups and experimenting with LSD and other drugs.

"He was in Korea for a year or so and he used to tell us how heavily into dope he was," said Paul Billow, 25, a security officer at Saginaw (Mich.) Valley College who knew Berkowitz in the Army at Fort Knox, Ky.

"WHEN I FIRST met him in 1973," Billow said, "he was a Jesus Freak," having renounced his adoptive parents' Judaism and becoming a Baptist. "Where he was outgoing and a source of laughs, he became sullen and reclusive. He didn't want to get involved in anything."

Billow also said he believed Berkowitz had a "hang-up" about women, particularly those with dark hair, because of his experiences in Korea.

"He'd talk about how liberal the Korean girls were about sex and that," Billow said. "He'd tell us how they'd just come up to him on the streets and proposition him. I think all but the last of his victims had black hair. Maybe these girls (his victims) taunted him somehow."

Berkowitz, who is under 24-hour-a-day guard, was completely isolated Friday in a room large enough for three beds and a toilet. Two barred windows look out to the street and another wing of the hospital where Son of San's last victim, 20-year-old Robert Violante, lies virtually blinded from a .44-caliber bullet fired into the left side of his head last July 31.

ONE HOUR A day, Schwartz said, Berkowitz is allowed into the day room of the prison ward, either before or after the other inmates have been there, where he can watch television.

Thursday night, a band of about five youths stood outside the hospital chanting, "We want Sam." They were briefly detained. Other citizens called the hospital demanding to avenge Sam's year-long reign of terror.

DAVID BERKOWITZ

Meanwhile, a special Brooklyn grand jury convened for two hours Friday to consider an indictment against Berkowitz, a stocky Army veteran with a sharpshooter's medal, in the death of 20-year-old Stacy Moskowitz and the near blinding of Violante.

Police sources have said Berkowitz, an adopted child with apparently no love life, has admitted he is the .44-caliber gunman who terrorized New York City for more than a year, starting a manhunt larger than those for London's Jack the Ripper and the Boston Strangler.

that during the three months we worked pretty closely together," she said. "There is no way I would have known whether he had been on any kind of drugs."

SHE DESCRIBED Berkowitz as an efficient worker who "knew his job well" at the headquarters of the 8th Battalion, 4th Training Brigade, a unit no longer in existence.

"It involved quite a bit of paperwork, setting up for graduations of trainees and things like that," Mrs. Heaberlin said. "He was so shy it took a while to get to know him. But then as I got to know him better he seemed to have a pretty good sense of humor.

"Altogether, we had a clerical staff of about eight in battalion headquarters and he just fit right in with everybody else. We called him 'Berk.'"

She said she first found out on a radio newscast about her former colleague's arrest on suspicion of being New York's dreaded ".44-caliber killer".

"But I couldn't be sure it was him until I saw him on TV," she said. "From the pictures they showed on TV, his hair is longer now than it was in the Army and he has put on quite a bit of weight. But I recognized him immediately."

Young to speak Oct. 1 at local Dems meeting

Andrew Young

Andrew Young, the freewheeling and outspoken U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, will make his first appearance in the Chicago area Oct. 1 as the guest of the Evanston Township Democratic Organization.

Young will be at a party fund-raising event and deliver what Evanston Township Democratic Committeeman Thomas Fuller described as "Ambassador Young's first public political speech."

A cocktail party, limited to 200 persons, will begin at 6:30 p.m. A dinner at the Orrington Hotel in Evanston will begin at 8 p.m.

TICKETS FOR THE Evanston Township Democratic Organization's cocktail party are $20. Dinner tickets are $40.

Fuller said efforts to secure the controversial Young have been going on for several months. "We are very pleased he's coming and have had requests from a lot of other areas to have Ambassador Young 'stop by,'" Fuller said.

Fuller did not know the subject of Young's Oct. 1 speech.

The 45-year-old Young has been very controversial since President Carter announced his appointment as U.N. ambassador last December.

AT ONE POINT Young characterized Presidents Ford, Nixon, Kennedy, Johnson and Lincoln as "racist in some ways," explaining later that he meant they "had no understanding of the problems of colored peoples anywhere."

Young said the New York City blackout in July was an invitation to looters. "If you turn lights out, folk will steal especially if they're hungry," he said.

Young was the first black congressman to be elected from the Deep South in modern times and he was the first black to accept a cabinet level appointment from Carter.

He made several visits to Africa soon after becoming ambassador and was soon embroiled in controversy over white rule in Rhodesia and South Africa.

IN APRIL, Young charged that Britain had institutionalized racism "more than anyone else in the history of the earth" but later apologized for unfairly singling out Britain.

He has called the presence of Cuban Communists in Angola a "stabilizing" influence and said that Americans should not be paranoid about Communism.

Despite critics' suggestions that Young should resign, Carter has continued to stand behind Young.

A computer does it

Pure water from garbage

by JAMES LAWRENCE

BOULDER, Colo. (UPI) — Binx Selby has invented a computer the size of a textbook he claims puts into action all the talk about recycling sewage and garbage into drinking water.

Selby, 34, also boasts his recycled water not only meets federal standards, but far exceeds the quality of drinking water in any city in the country.

"It's been tested by the Environmental Protection Agency and compared to water supplies of dozens of municipalities around the nation," said Selby, who also heads a successful word-processing computer firm in Boulder. "Through all of the tests, we always came out on top."

SELBY'S PROPOSAL is one of about 130 submitted since last fall to the federal Office of Water Research and Technology under a new program autorizing government funding of water re-use projects, according to Robert MaDancy, head of the OWRT in Washington. He said a final decision on the proposal will be made soon.

Selby also is seeking state funds from several states. He wants to use the federal and state grants for a 20-home demonstration of his system.

"Our water is absolutely crystal clear and 100 per cent pure," Selby said. "In fact, because of its purity there are no minerals, which gives it a bland taste. But we're thinking of adding calcium to it to remedy the flatness."

His water recycling system, designed for household use, consists of a module tank the size of a compact car, Selby said. The tank is positioned outside a dwelling and attached by nance.
pipes. He said it can be replenished with rain water by attaching a dwelling's roof gutter to the tank.

THE SYSTEM operates through the use of a 12-inch long microprocessor which monitors and analyzes the quality of the waste water as it moves through several stages of purification.

"The end product is 100 per cent pure water, which is better than that found in most municipalities, and even bottled water," said Connie Wex, the firm's marketing director.

The tiny computer is capable of shutting down the system if any malfunctions are detected and automatically informs a nearby service center of the problem through use of the dwelling's telephone system, Selby said.

Mrs. Wex said the system, feasible only in developments of at least 20 homes, also is monitored by the service center where trouble calls are received. The center services the units twice a year to remove accumulated solids and perform normal mainte-

THE SYSTEM requires an initial 500 gallons of water. Selby said it will sell for $5,000 when marketed by his 18-month-old firm, Purecycle.

He first became interested in water recycling while studying at the University of Colorado where he graduated 10 years ago as a biochemistry major. He developed his system over the past seven years.

Selby's application is for two grants of $96,564 each from the federal government and the Four Corners Regional Commission, made up of Colorado and adjacent states, for the demonstration project — installation of the system in 20 households in Steamboat Springs, Colo., for a nine-month period.

Ms. Wex said Purecycle is principally interested in serving households rather than industry and cities because the firm's sterilization system uses an ultra violet process. Industrial waste is more difficult to recycle and the effectiveness of ultra violet sterilization would be significantly reduced with city water because of its constant movement, she said.

"DOMESTIC sewage is a lot easier to clean, even more so than salt water," she said. "And besides, use of our system by households gives local officials the opportunity to direct growth and solve their expansion problems."

Ms. Wex said the recycling system can be retro-fitted to homes but the company is aiming its sales market at housing developers who work with cities with restricted growth due to a shortage or poor quality of water supplies.

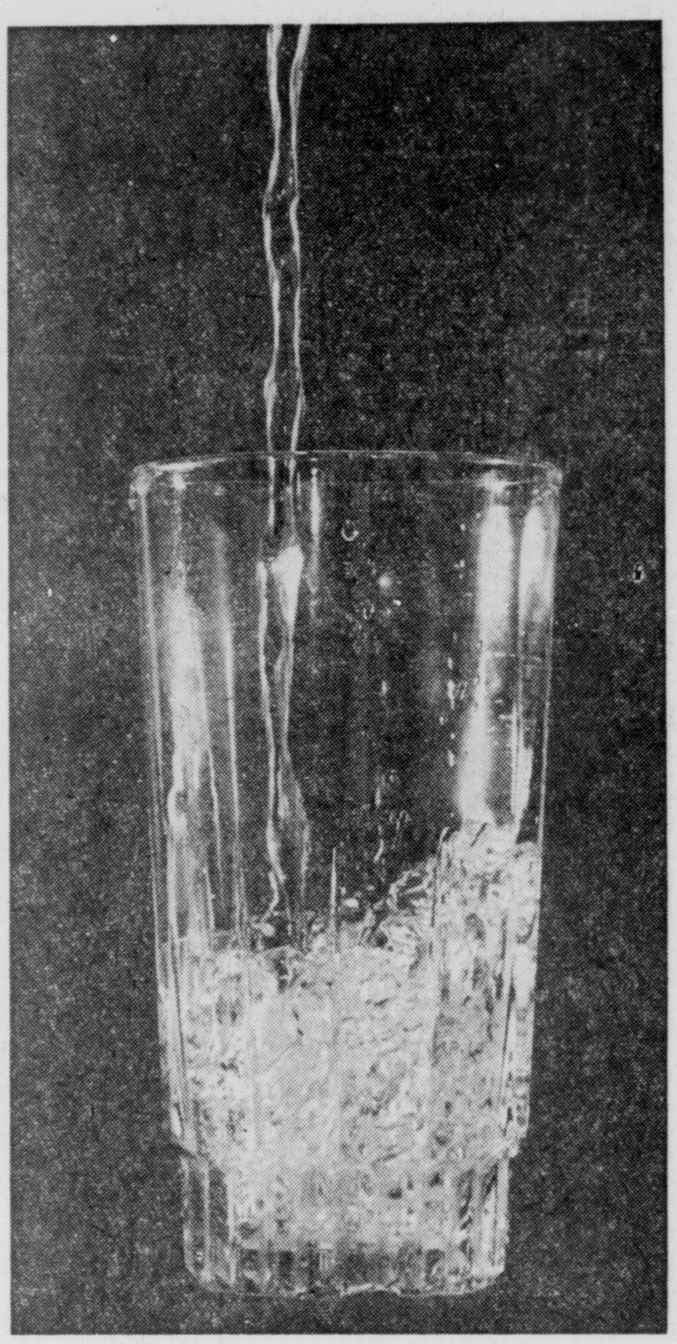
She said the system also could be used to quickly establish military installations without regard to polluted local water supplies or the expense of building a waste water treatment plant.

Selby envisions use of the recycling system's computer for other household functions.

"SINCE IT ALREADY can automatically dial up the service center when a problem occurs, we're thinking of using it to monitor fires in the home, turn lights on and off while you're away . . . and so on."

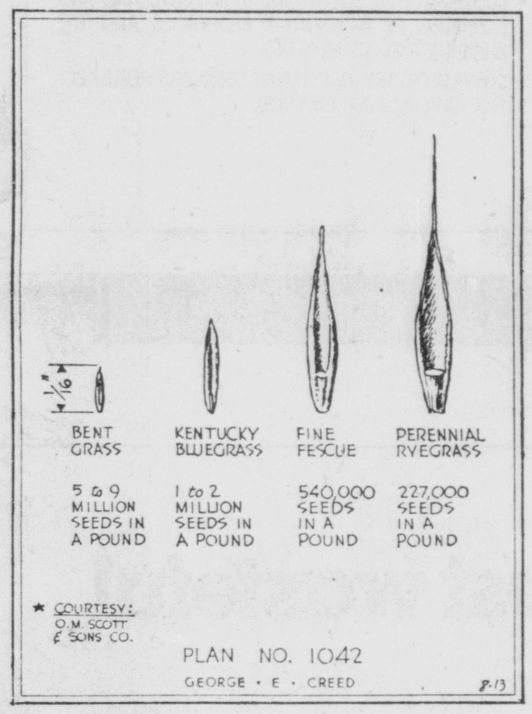
Ms. Wex said the recycling system could lead to innovative housing developments because straight streets no longer would be needed for sewer lines, thus freeing developers to build dwellings in clusters.

"A whole new way of living could result from our recycling system," she said.



CLEAR, CLEAR WATER. A Colorado man says his system for recycled water meets all federal standards. He's hoping for state and federal funds that will enable him to set up a demonstration project.

Finest grass seed best for fall planting



by George E. Creed

There are many good reasons why early autumn is the best time of the year for lawn making and lawn repair. During the season from the middle of August to the middle of October the soil is usually workable, topsoil is obtainable and warm days and cool nights are favorable for grass growth. Seed planted at this time has a long enough growing period to become well established before the advent of freezing temperatures.

Autumn planted grass also has two other advantages: one is that it has little competition from annual weeds. These have flowered, produced seed and are on their way out. The other advantage is that healthy grass with strong root systems is in prime condition to compete with and to crowd out weeds that germinate in the spring.

When you plant your lawn this fall or rehabilitate it, be sure to use only the finest grass seed obtainable. When you consider that the labor involved in preparing a lawn prior to seeding and the seeding and after-care account for the major cost in making a lawn, it doesn't make much sense to buy cheap grass seed.

What do you get for your money when you buy grass seed at a bargain? You can determine this for yourself by comparing the information shown on a package of low cost seed with that printed on a container of equal weight of high grade seed. Size of seed is one important factor in judging what you are actually buying. Note on the sketches that the smallest of the grasses shown is bent grass. In a pound there are five to nine million seeds whereas with the large perennial rye grass one pound contains only 227,000 seeds. This means that if you buy a pound of grass seed with a high proportion of rye grass or fescue you will get what seems like a lot of seed because of the greater volume occupied by the larger seeds. In other words, you will receive a big package that may not contain enough of the kind of seed you want for your lawn.

You can learn much about the contents of a package of grass seed by reading the seed label. This label reveals several important facts about the contents that should help you evaluate the quality of the seed.

Besides telling you the proportions of the various kinds of grasses included in the package, it will give you the percentage of seeds that will germinate, the weed seed content expressed as a percentage and the percentage of inert materials (chaff, corn cobs, broken seed, sand). The latter are fillers and have no value whatsoever — but they do make a package larger.

A. Yes, it has white flowers resembling those of the lilac. It will not bloom, of course, if it is pruned frequently.

Mary B. Good

Potting shed

Wouldn't it be great if summer lasted all year long? You can carry summer into fall and winter by drying homegrown flowers.

Check your flower beds to see what plants are suitable. Statice, strawflowers, celosia, acroclinium, bells of Ireland, Chinese lantern, lunaria, globe amaranth, daisies, delphinium, marigold and larkspur are most popular for dried arrangements because they dry naturally. And don't overlook the roadside weeds such as goldenrod, cattail, wild grasses, Queen Anne's lace, especially if you don't have any good garden prospects.

DURING AUGUST and September most flowers should be at their best for drying. Don't wait too long to pick them, as older flowers may tend to shatter when dried. They should be picked just before their prime. Exceptions are acroclinium and globe amaranth, which should be picked r'de anaranth, which should be picked when the flowers are fully mature. Natural stems may be left intact on these two.

Strawflowers are perfect for drying when the lower two to four rows of petals are open. Select flowers in graduated sizes for more variety.

Statice is a florist's standby, and if you planted it, you're fortunate in having one of the easiest and most foolproof varieties to handle and arrange.

Lunaria, also called honesty or money plant, with its papery, disc-shaped seed pods is usually ready to pick the second summer after planting. Remove the seed husks and the inner, papery lunaria is ready for use.

Spikes of bells of Ireland have sharp spines, so have a knife handy or wear glove sto strip off thorns.

CHINESE LANTERNS TURN a vivin orange-red in autumn. Pick them when the lower lanterns have changed color and dry them in a vase.

Perfect timing in picking different flowers comes from trial and error. The most important thing to remember is to pick flowers on a dry day, when there is no dew or moisture on the flowers or leaves.

Remove all leaves from the stems of flowers you want to dry. In most cases, with the exception of acroclinium, globe amaranth and Chinese lanterns, remove all but a one-inch stem on each flower head.

Pick up a couple dozen wires and green floral tape from your local florist. Insert a piece heavyweight 22 gauge wire into each head, but no so far as to show. The purpose of the wire is to make the stem flexible so it can be bent at any angle for arranging. Wind floral tape around the base of the flower, catching the one-inch stem and wire.

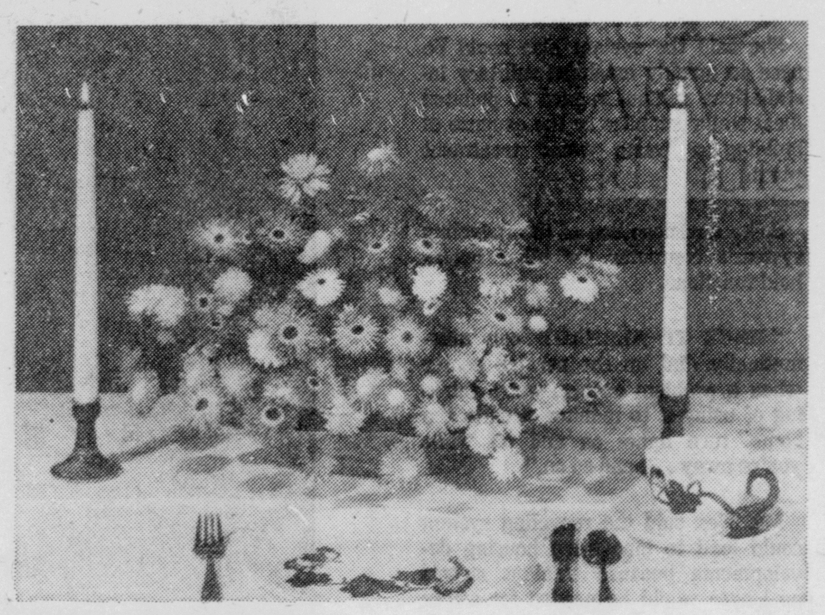
FASTEN THE FLOWERS into small bunches by twisting a wire-tie loosely around the stems, and hang upside-down to air-dry in a darkened, well ventilated room.

Wire coat hangers or a clothesline is convenient for suspending bunches. Drying time varies from a few days to two weeks or so. The faster the flowers dry, the better their colors stay. Flowers can be stored for later arranging, in labeled, ventilated boxes in a cool spot or used right away.

Many other plants such as asters, roses, zinnias, calendulas, carnations, pansies, dahlias, mums can be dried, but they need to have the moisture removed from their petals by setting in a box of silica gel or equal parts of household borax and cornmeal.

FLOWER-DRYING KITS which include helpful booklets on processing summer blooms for drying are available in the Burpee Fall Gardening and Gift Catalog or your local garden center may carry such kits under a variety of trade names, such as "Flower-Dri."

Permanent bouquets from your flower beds are a lovely way to preserve the memory of your summer all winter long. +



CAROLINE WHITENACK, horticulturist and flower arranger for Burpee Seed Company, dried this lovely design of acroclinium blossoms.

Plants can use a good vacation

Houseplants, like people, benefit from a good vacation.

A home gardening coordinator says a plant sitter is the best solution for plants whose owners will be away. Second best, and still good, is the bathtub, if the bathroom gets enough sunlight.

Barbara Voigt-Boltes, an extension specialist at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Institute of Agriculture Natural Resources, recommends setting potted plants on boards supported by bricks in the tub. Run cool water to within one inch below the bottom of the plants to provide humidity without endangering the root systems.

Plants should be all right for 10 days or so with this arrangement, she said. For longer periods, she recommends the same setup, with one addition: wicks made of old clothesline cord. Cut them long enough to allow an inch inside the pot through a drainage hole and at least one or two inches reaching into the water.

"Let the plant dry out and then carefully remove it from the pot," she said. Fray both ends of each cord, stick one end through a drainage hole and dangle the other in the water.

Ms. Voight-Boltes said this system keeps plants at a constant level of moisture. It works well for about three weeks and is best for larger plants, she said.

Another alternative: greenhouses made by draping plastic bags over plants. To avoid rot, she advises against too much watering to begin with, and keeping plants away from too much sunshine to prevent their baking.

For short vacations, she suggests simply grouping plants in one area where they will absorb moisture from one another and won't dry out as quickly.

Get rid of the most wasteful part of your air conditioner.

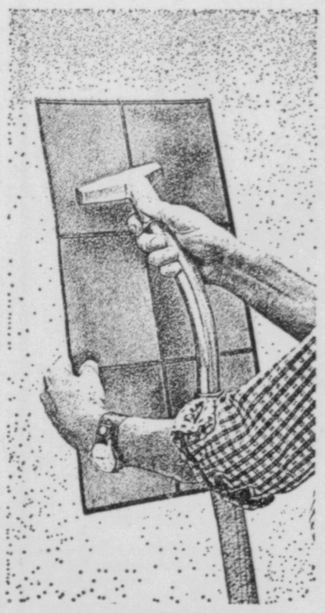
The dirt inside.

Save with regular cleaning.
Your air conditioner does more than just cool. It cleans, too, by filtering dust and dirt out of the air. After awhile, the dirt builds up on the filter, and clogs the air flow. This makes the unit work harder. And that costs you money. Take a few minutes to get rid of that dirt and you'll hold down your operating costs.

How to clean window-unit filters.
Check your owner's manual for specific instructions. If you don't have one, do the following. Pull the plug, and remove the front panel. Lift out the filter and vacuum it. If your filter is made of a spongelike material, wash it in warm water and detergent. Then let it dry, and put it back in place.

How to clean central-unit filters.
Your central cooling system has a filter, too, usually in the blower section of the indoor unit. Before opening the access panel, turn off the power. If the filter is reusable, vacuum it. If it's washable, wash it. If you have a throw-away filter, or your filter is too dirty to clean, replace it with a new one of the same size and material (note arrow on side of filter indicating direction of air flow).

If your heating and cooling system has an electronic air filter, be sure to follow the cleaning and maintenance procedures recommended by the manufacturer.



Get professional help when necessary.
Occasionally, your air conditioner's condenser coil, refrigerant charge, or motor may need attention from a qualified serviceman. Maintenance of these parts may be best left to the professional.

Remember: the less energy you waste, the more money you save. And a clean air conditioner can save you plenty.

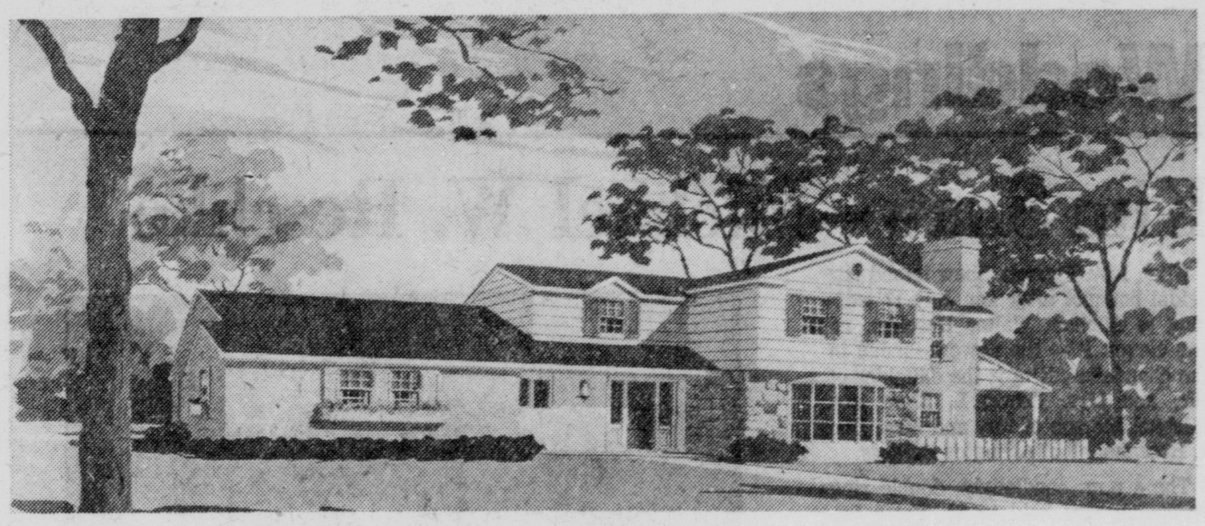
Overhang style remains popular



This type of exterior design was popular in the 1940's and was used only on the large homes of the very affluent. Today, this size home is considered rather modest and yet the general design has retained its popularity. A particular characteristic is the forward projecting center section, two stories in height with the upper story overhanging the first with a baywindow under the projection.

Actually, this is a combination of a one and two-story home with the two-story portion being located over the library, living room and foyer only. The exterior gives the impression the house actually is a full two-story one.

Utilizing the forward-projecting master bedroom, a covered porch is formed to create a recessed front entrance over 16 feet wide. It places the proper design emphasis where it belongs.

THE REAR-LOCATED two-car garage completes the lefthand one-story wing and adds bulk to this side as well as hiding the garage.

Inside, a 9x11 foot foyer leads, by its various accesses, to the living room, library, master bedroom, family room, upstairs and the garage. A guest powder room is just outside the foyer—private, but easily accessible from the library, living room, family room, garage and basement.

The living room is the sunken type and has a conversation niche built-in near the fireplace. From the inside it appears to resemble a bay window seat. French doors lead out to a 17-foot long side porch. (Architect's sketch shows these details.)

The combination family room—kitchen is 28 feet long and connects to the dining room as well as to the rear service porch.

THE MASTER bedroom, on the first floor, enjoys a wing of its own, with the ultimate in privacy. It has its own bathroom with shower and adjoins the separate lavatory.

On the second floor are two additional large bedrooms, one with a bay window seat. Both have large walk-in closets.

A hall bath is located close by in the bedroom foyer and is flanked by two linen closets. The stairway has two windows which provide natural light by day.

Traffic circulation throughout the house is first class and closet storage is abundant.

Exterior materials are clapboards, brick, stone surrounding the library and a panel of stucco at the front entrance.

Buyers like single level

The convenience of single level living in a well-planned floor plan made the Woodmar one of the most popular models at Brookside, a single family home community in Streamwood being offered by Residential Development Group, Inc.

According to Jim Morgan, sales representative for Brookside, many buyers find that the placement of the third bedroom between living and sleeping areas of the home gives them a desirable option to use this room as a den or study.

"Our buyers are generally young," he said. "They don't necessarily need a third bedroom immediately. The idea of having a room they can adapt as their lifestyle changes appeals to them. We also have buyers who have a growing family now and need three bedrooms, but see the room as a future den when some of the children are no longer living at home."

THE WOODMAR, priced from $58,900, has been popular enough to have sold out in the first two phases of Brookside.

Another attraction of the home is the 17-foot family room with convenient entrances to the attached two-car garage, the backyard through sliding glass doors and to the kitchen and foyer.

"The traffic flow in this home is very good," Morgan said. "Ffrom the foyer, you enter family room, dining room, kitchen and living room. . .or go down the hall to the bedrooms, without crossing another room."

The home has a 16-foot living room with double windows, a formal dining room, large kitchen with breakfast bar entrance into the family room. There is an attached two-car garage and the family room is available with a woodburning fireplace.

The other two models at Brookside are the Glendale, a raised ranch with three bedrooms, listed from $61,500, the Windsor, a tri-level three-bedroom home priced from $63,750, and the Exmoor, a two-story three-bedroom home priced from $61,500.

ALL BROOKSIDE models include the following features in the basic cost of the home: wall-to-wall shag carpeting, stained mahogany trim, doorbell chimes, insulated tempered glass patio doors with screens, light fixtures, baths with ceramic tile bath areas and wood vanities with cultured marble tops. Kitchens have continuous clean electric oven and range, built-in dishwasher and garbage disposer, exterior vented range hood and fan, double bowl stainless steel sink and wood cabinetry. All homes have utility rooms, attached two-car garages, outside post lights, concrete driveways and service walks and textured wood or aluminum siding in a variety of exteriors and color combinations.

To reach the models, take the Northwest Tollway and exit at Barrington Road south. GosouthonBar-Northwest Tollway and exit at Barrington Road south. Go south on Barrington to Bode Road and turn west (right). Go three and a half blocks on Bode to the Brookside entrance.

Reader seeks advice to cope with angina

I went to my family doctor with chest pains and he took a cardiogram and said I have angina pectoris. Will you explain what this is? I was off work for five weeks and when I returned and exert myself the symptoms are still there. After I rest for a while they disappear. Is this angina pectoris a permanent heart disease or could a person overcome this?

I've had a high cholesterol and fat lipids but have been on a low fat diet for several years. Has this anything to do with this disease? Also, I cannot breathe cold air. When I first had this we still had cold weather and when I was outside in brisk air, my throat seemed to constrict and cut off my breathing. I've had to wear a mask so I could go out in the cold.

What can I do to overcome this angina pectoris, if anything? I am 49 and too young to be tied down. I have been an active person all my life and can't get used to the idea that I can't do everything I would like to do.

Strictly speaking, angina pectoris means strangulation of the breastbone — describing the sensation that many people have with the dull oppressive pain in the center of the chest.

It is caused by inadequate blood flow to the heart muscle. The blood flow is usually restricted because of a buildup of fatty-cholesterol deposits in the arteries to the heart muscle. These are often associated with a high blood cholesterol level or high levels of other blood fats and with high blood pressure.

The pain occurs when you exert yourself because that is when your heart has to increase its workload. At rest you have enough blood flow through those clogged arteries to nourish your heart muscle and supply oxygen. When the oxygen demands go up re quiring an increase in circulation, this just is not possible. Hence, you get pain when you exert too much and the pain goes away when you rest.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 2-10, Heart Attack, Myocardial Infarction, Angina Pectoris, to give you a more complete understanding of your problem. These disorders resulting from fatty-cholesterol deposits are the most common cause of death in our population. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it.

The condition usually persists until you either decrease the work of the heart or there is some improvement in circulation to the heart muscle. The latter is not always possible. We do have small blood vessels in the heart muscle that will open and help some.

You can help by decreasing the work of the heart. That is best done through eliminating any extra body fat you have. The less you weigh the easier it will be for you to walk and not exert yourself.

Cold weather is known to trigger angina attacks. Walking into a cold wind is particularly bad. Patients with heart disease should bundle up properly and protect the chest and throat area in cold weather. It is a reflex mechanism. The cold air going into the lungs can also trigger the attack.

If your blood pressure is high, lowering it, and loss of fat helps to do that, will also decrease the attacks.

Trick those pesky ants with powdered cloves

Dear Roberta: How can I get rid of big black ants in the house? R. H. Geckler.

Let's hope these are a variety of harmless, however pesky, ants — and not carpenter ants, which can excavate soft or rotting wood around your house or porch. For those you'd need professional extermination. For various other ants, there are numerous effective commercial and homemade poisons, but I don't recommend laying these out where there are children or pets. Some nonpoisonous home remedies work well, too. If you can find the ant nest outside by watching their travels, a kettle of boiling water poured over it will finish off that colony. What I do is sprinkle a thin line of powdered cloves across the window sill and door threshold, behind the kitchen sink and back of the countertop. If it's another room that's attracting them, no reason you can't use the same trick there.

Dear Roberta: Crows ate up our cherries, and rabbits got the berries. Every year the neighborhood kids grab the pears, but that's okay as we don't much like that fruit. We would like to enjoy our grapes this year. How do we stop the birds and bees I don't know. Does anyone have an answer for Mrs. Stillman?

Dear Roberta: My recipe box runneth over. How do you keep your recipes organized, and newspaper clips from falling apart? — Norma Colt.

I paste clippings, or type recipies on six by nine index cards, scissored slightly to fit into stackable plastic shoe boxes. This size card is easier to handle than smaller ones. Frequently I fit two similar recipes side-by-side, and then select the best features of each in preparing a dish. By the way, household tips can be filed the same way.

Weddings

Kim Shaw — Michael W. Reschke

When Kim Patricia Shaw tossed her bridal bouquet after her July 17 wedding to Michael Walter Reschke, no one caught it — the flowers landed in the chandelier. Kim is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin L. Shaw and Michael the son of Mr. and Mrs. Don J. Reschke, all of Arlington Heights.

The 4 p.m. candlelight, double ring ceremony was held in St. Peter Lutheran Church, Arlington Heights. Kim wore a polyester organza gown trimmed in pearl clusters and lace. A mantilla veil with matching lace framed her face and she carried a cascade of pink bridal roses, orchids, stephanotis and baby's breath.

Maid of honor Sharon Weiss, Saginaw, Mich., was in an ice blue floral print halter dress with a matching organza jacket. She carried pink bridal roses, snowflake mums, blue baby's breath and ivy streamers.

Robin Shaw, Kim's sister; Donna Reschke, the groom's sister; Cathy Lemke, Schaumburg, and Sue Eisenhuth, Champaigne, were bridesmaids and were gowned like the maid of honor. They carried nosegays of pink bridal roses, snowflake mums and blue baby's breath.

ANGELA LORD, a cousin from Wheaton, 5, was flower girl. She wore an ice blue dress and carried a bird cage basket and pink roses, white mums and blue baby's breath. Kevin Shaw, 9, Kim's brother, was ring bearer.

Mr. and Mrs. Michael W. Reschke

Michael's brother, Glenn, Hamburg, Mich., was best man. Tom Patterson, Houston, Tex., Kim's brother, Keith, Bob Lemke. Schaumburg, and Don Nolimal, Cicero, also served the groom.

Following the nuptials, a reception for 200 guests was held at Casa Royale, Des Plaines. The couple took a two-week honeymoon in the Pocono Mountains, Niagara Falls, Canada and Michigan.

Kim, a graduate of Hersey High School, expects to work as a dental assistant in Champaign, where Michael, a graduate of Arlington High and Northern Illinois University in DeKalb, will attend law school at the University of Illinois. The newlyweds are living in Champaign.

Dawn Olson-Eric Loewe

A couple who met while attending Rockford College, Dawn Berann Olson and L. Eric Loewe, were married July 16 and are now making their home in Evanston.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Olson, Wheeling, Dawn and Eric, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. Loewe, Freeport, Ill., were married in Long Grove's United Church of Christ in a 3:30 p.m. double ring service.

Dawn is a graduate of Wheeling High and is now employed by Allstate Insurance, Northbrook. Eric is a law student at Rockford College.

AN ORGANZA gown trimmed in Venise lace was Dawn's choice in wedding gown. Her floral headpiece was designed to match her bouquet of white mums, carnations and roses with yellow roses and baby's breath.

Kimberly Olson was her sister's only attendant, and Dan Mattingly, Freeport, was the groom's attendant. Kim wore a yellow dotted Swiss gown and carried yellow carnations and white rose buds with baby's breath. Her headpiece also matched her bouquet.

Before leaving on a honeymoon in northern Michigan, Dawn and Eric were greeted by 50 guests at a dinner reception held in the Northbrook Holiday Inn.

Carol A. Plough — George E. Roby

Carol A. Plough and her bridegroom, George E. Roby, spent a few days at Illinois State Beach Park following their July 16 wedding, but will be taking their honeymoon in December. The delayed honeymoon will be a trip to California.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Plough, Mount Prospect, Carol and George, son of George Roby, Arlington Heights, and the late Elsie Roby, were married in Mount Prospect's Grace Lutheran Church. The 4:30 p.m. service was both double ring and candlelight.

Carol chose a capped sleeve knit gown trimmed in lace for her wedding. Except for the train, she chose identical gowns in aqua for her bridesmaids. Carol wore a matching lace headpiece to hold her fingertip veil, and she carried orchids with lilies of the valley and stephanotis. Her maids carried bouquets of summer flowers.

MAID OF HONOR was her sister, Jane, and bridesmaids were Debbie Michalicka, Stickney, Ill., and Mary Weaver, Arlington Heights. Two 4-year-old flower girls were in blue print gowns sewn by the bride. They were the bride's niece, Tammy McAdams, Stockton, Calif., and the groom's niece, Angela Lyons, Severen, Md. Both carried baskets with mixed summer flowers.

Best man was the groom's brother, Rob, and ushers were his brother, Kevin, his brother-in-law, John Lyons, Severen, and the bride's brother, John.

A dinner reception for 180 guests was held in the Cabriolet Restaurant in Libertyville.

The new Mrs. Roby, a teacher at Lake in the Hills School in Algonquin, is a 1970 graduate of Wheeling High and also of Western Illinois University. The groom, a 1970 graduate of Hersey High, studied at Harper College and is now with L & W Industries, Arlington Heights.

Mr. and Mrs. George E. Roby

How Hairdressers Keep Abreast of Latest Hair Trends

Meg Welch, owner of Hair Directors, Inc., Arlington Heights, meets this challenge by engaging nationally-known guest artists to train and teach her staff the newest hairstyles and latest hair cutting techniques.

The guest designer must be qualified in every aspect of the beauty profession.

Exnon, European hair designer and instructor who will conduct a class Aug. 10 for the Hair Directors' staff, has trained with Vidal Sassoon and worked throughout Europe before returning to the USA to demonstrate his concept of hair designing.

He conducts more than 50 seminars a year and is a judge for all major hair dressing awards. He also does the makeup and hair styling for many internationally-known models.

Workshop training and education is the most in depth, and beneficial programs of this type allow the instructor to show his methods and techniques as well as to observe and work with each hairdresser individually.

Learning to work as a group harmoniously is an essential part of a stylist's education. Monthly staff meetings enable both management and staff to voice opinions and share views, thus eliminating a communications gap. Group discussions are very exciting. With an enthusiastic group, a discussion usually turns into a workshop with each stylist eagerly awaiting her turn with the scissors to show and share her ideas.

It is most important for a hairdresser to be aware of the condition of the client's hair and to be able to advise her on how to take care of it. To be able to do this, the stylist must know a great deal about the hair structure and the products she recommends. Some manufacturers offer excellent "product knowledge classes." A hairdresser interested in her profession will take advantage of these programs. Illustrated magazines and other visual aids are also helpful.

The Hair Dressers Association meetings and general seminars are beneficial, but nothing is as effective, encouraging or as exciting as having a well-known hair designer — a super star, if you will, tell you, "You've got it!"

Sox surrender first place; Cubs shelled

ARLINGTON, Tex.—The 43-day joy ride is over.

That's how long the White Sox, a team most picked for fifth place, proved nearly everyone wrong by staying in first place — but no more.

Losing 10-7 to the Rangers here Friday night, coupled with Minnesota's wild 12-11 victory over Detroit earlier in the evening, the Sox fell one-half game behind the Twins.

IT IS THE first time since July 1 a team other than the Sox leads the American League West.

Sox pitching failed to hold leads of 3-2 and 6-4, and a five-run eighth inning for the Rangers now just 1½ games behind the Twins, proved to be the game-winning rally.

Trailing 6-5, the Rangers sent nine men to the plate in the eighth and used the three-run home run of ninth-hitting Keith Smith to provide the eventual winning run. Smith's blast, off reliever and loser Lerron LaGrow, was the first in the rookie's major league career.

Randy Wiles took over for LaGrow and yielded the final run before retiring the side. Francisco Barrios started for the Sox and lasted Six innings, leaving in the seventh after Mike Hargrove's homer made it 6-5.

DAROLD KNOWLES, 5-1, picked up the victory in relief of starter Dock Ellis and reliever Adrian Devine. Ellis lasted until the sixth when he was shelled by back-to-back homers by Richie Zisk and Oscar Gamble. They put the Sox ahead 3-2.

Devine came in for Ellis and an inning later was hit for three runs when Jim Essian singled, Alan Bannister was hit by a pitch, Jorge Orta tripled in two runs and Zisk doubled in Orta.

Knowles finally retired the Sox in the seventh and gave up a harmless run in the ninth when Essian singled and eventually scored on Bannister's sacrifice fly.

Texas, which scored in five of its eight turns at bat, opened the scoring in the second inning when Bump Wills doubled in Dave May. In the fourth, the Rangers made it 2-0 when Hargrove's infield out drove in Wills from third base.

A TWO-RUN double by Jim Sundberg in the sixth put the Royals back on top 4-3. After the Sox came back to lead 6-4 with their second three-run inning, Hargrove's homer inched Kansas City to within a run.

The loss was the Sox third straight and it kept alive the possibility they could be as far down in the standings as fourth place if things continue to go badly in the final two games of the series.

Right behind the top three teams in the division are the Kansas City Royals, who trail the Twins by two games.

Steve Stone, 12-7, is scheduled to throw for the Sox in tonight's game against the Rangers' Bert Blyleven, 10-10. Jack Kucek will pitch for the Sox in the final, taking Wilbur Wood's place in the starting rotation. He will face Nelson Briles.

Sox manager Bob Lemon indicated prior to Friday's game Wood was being sent to the bullpen to work himself out of the troubles he has had his last several starts.

Phillies deal dose of pain in 10-3 loss

by ART MUGALIAN

Tim McCarver, the Babysitter, gave the Cubs something to cry about Friday at Wrigley Field.

The wailing could be heard at the very bottom of the NL East, to which the slump-ridden, bump-ridden Cubs seem to be heading.

Philadelphia's 35-year-old retread catcher singled twice and homered twice to help his "baby," Lefty Steve Carlton, record a major-league-high 17th win as the Phillies lengthened their lead over the Cubs to four games with their ninth straight victory, a 10-3 pasting.

"Until the other night, I hadn't started a game that Carlton didn't pitch," said McCarver after the game. "As a matter of fact, I've caught every one of his games all the way back to the beginning of last year."

The batterymates weren't the only bad news for the Cubs. Local product Greg Luzinski hit his 30th homer of the year, with two on, and the Phillies tied a team record with six HRs altogether.

McCarver and Carlton were the Focus of attention, though. "We get a lot of kidding about it from the rest of the team," McCarver continued. "Our nickname is the Waa Brothers — you know, like waaaaaa, like a baby cries."

The personal catcher for the winningest pitcher in the majors leagues takes the ribbing good-naturedly. "We've got good rapport on this club," said McCarver. "I guess it's easy to say that when you're winning. Winning kinda breeds that."

McCarver's first home run, in the second inning, began a personal ordeal by fire for Cub ace Rick Reuschel, who hadn't lost all year in Wrigley Field. Reuschel, now 15-5, surrendered a two-run homer to Carlton, of all people, later in the second, and then gave up consecutive roundtrippers to Luzinski and Jay Johnstone in the third.

That was all for Reuschel but the Phillies managed two more home runs — by McCarver and Tommy Hutton — off Pete Broberg, the first of two Cub relievers. Broberg pitched well, though, striking out seven in six innings of work.

But Broberg was the day's only bright spot for the Cubs, losers of three out of the last four games and quickly slipping from contention in a division that suddenly has the Cubs outclassed.

Manager Herman Franks was at a loss for words later, saying only that "everybody has days like Reuschel had."

BUT FRANKS WAS beginnig to mutter to himself after two more of his regulars decided that their injuries were too serious to play with. Jerry Morales sat out with an "Astroturf knee" and Ivan DeJesus complained of a sore throwing arm where he was hit by a pitch last Saturday.

"There's not much I can do when they say they're hurting," Franks moaned before the game, sending out a lineup that included Greg Gross in center and Mick Kelleher at shortstop.

But it wasn't a lack of hitting punch or ineffective fielding that pushed the Cubs off to a bad start in this four-game showdown with the Phils. Rather, it was the uncharacteristic performance by Reuschel after 11 straight victories at Wrigley Field this year.

"There was a summer-type breeze, a beautiful day to play baseball," said Luzinski, who is enjoying his best season ever. "I like swinging in this park."

LUZINSKI'S HOMER, which followed two cheap singles by Larry Bowa and Mike Schmidt, landed about halfway up the bleachers in right-center. The eight MPH southwest wind may have been a slight factor.

The wind was a definite aid on McCarver's first blast, which came down in the basket in right, just out of Bobby Murcer's reach.

"It was just a routine fly ball that the wind caught," said McCarver, who admitted he was only joking when, before the game, he had promised teammate Jerry Martin three hits. "The second one I got all of."

CARLTON WENT THE distance and allowed eight hits, including a two-run single by George Mitterwald in the second when the Cubs responded to the Phils' three-run inning with a two-spot of their own.

But, helped along by a four-run third inning, Carlton cruised until the eighth when two walks and a single by Murcer produced another run.

, "Steve couldn't get his rhythm down," explained McCarver. "This ball park is conductive to good hitting with the wind and the close porches and everything. It's hard to pitch here — it's a hitter's park."

Arlington coasts past Galesburg in state tourney

by DON FRISKE

GALESBURG — For the first time in a long while, Arlington coach Lloyd Meyer was able to breathe easy in the ninth inning Friday night. His team was coasting to a 12-1 rain-delayed, opening-game victory over the host team here in the state finals of American Legion baseball.

After a week of late rallies and extra-inning affairs, it was a good thing for Meyer that his players had built an early lead.

He promised them that he would chew tobacco for the first time if they made the trip to Galesburg. Although he would take only a small amount, it was still enough to choke a novice if too much excitement occurred.

MEYER SAID he'll do it again out of superstition when Arlington plays tonight at 8 p.m. They will face the winner of the Barrington-Rock Island contest, which was played late Friday night.

The lopsided victory was also good for the attitude of the team because Meyer was able to use all of his players.

"That helps team morale," he explained. "It won't win a ball game, but it helps in the long run."

Pitching is the big factor when play reaches the state level. Although Meyer believes his team has depth in that area, he may not need it as much as the clubs that move into the loser's bracket.

IF ARLINGTON wins tonight, they will be in the final matchup Monday against a team that will have to beat them twice to take the title away from its defenders.

Meyer was able to use three pitchers Friday. Kevin McBride worked the first six innings, and the big right-hander continued his success in post-season play.

McBride allowed only one earned run on two hits while striking out six and walking two. Doug Harth and Jim McDonald combined to pitch hitless ball in the final three innings.

The Galesburg coach was forced to go with his second pitcher because he had used his best starter in a 4-1 win over Nokomis Friday morning. They scored three runs in the ninth to win it.

JEFF STEVENS struck out 16 Nokomis batters in nine innings to collect the victory, but he was in leftfield against Arlington.

"Nokomis probably didn't have many strong hitters," Meyer said. "But 16 strikeouts is 16 strikeouts, no matter who you are facing, so we were fortunate."

In true Meyer fashion, his team scored more runs (12) than hits (10). Arlington got a big bonus from the two Galesburg pitchers who walked 10, hit one batter and threw four wild pitches.

But there were some timely hits for Arlington. Catcher Gary Kempton hit two triples in the first two innings to drive in three runs. Mike Mayerck hit a bases-loaded single to score two more in the second and Frank DeSimone belted a long triple to right center that brought in one runner after it hit high off the outfield fence.

With a 42-9 season record, Meyer has decided to start Dennis Drolet tonight. If Arlington wins, Bob Huber will probably get the starting job in the title game Monday.

THE GREAT golf club controversy has spread to the women's ranks where Jo Ann Washam compares club heads.

Groovy clubs causing stir

"Inadvertent human error" was cited as the reason for the problem with the golf clubs disallowed for the current PGA championship in Pebble Beach.

Allen Hansberger, president of the Ram Golf Corporation which manufactured the clubs at 1501 Pratt Ave. in Elk Grove Village, said the problem stemmed from the custom grinding of some clubs made for touring professionals.

The specifications for grinding the clubs called for grooves in the clubface of 35-1000ths of an inch in width, the size allowed by USGA rules

However, Hansberger explained: "In tracing the inaccuracy on these particular clubs it was found that while the specifications conformed to USGA rules, the clubface was inadvertently ground a fraction less than the specifications."

Consistent Littler leads PGA by 2

by IRA MILLER

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (UPI) — Gene Littler, the man they call "The Machine" for his reliable consistency, strecthed his string of bogey-free holes to 36 with a 3-under-par 69 Friday and took a two-stroke lead after two rounds of the PGA Championship.

Littler, one of the select group of 15 players who have won more than a million dollars on the pro golf tour, had a total of 136, eight strokes under par for the 6,800 yards of seaside terror that make up the Pebble Beach Golf Links.

He made birdies at three of Pebble Beach's four par-5 holes and was the only player in a starting field of 141 professionals in this, last of the year's four major events that make up golf's Grand Slam, to reach the 36-hole mark without a bogey.

JERRY McGEE, a journeyman whose victory two weeks ago at Philadelphia was only his second in a decade on tour, slipped into second place at 138 with a second round 70.

"So many things can happen on this golf course that I wouldn't be comfortable with that lead unless I was on the 18th green of the final round," said Littler, a 47-year-old California native who has been playing competitively at Pebble Beach, amateur and pro, for three decades.

He birdied the 502-yard second hole from 8 feet, the 516-yard sixth from 1½ and the 548-yard 18th, the famed horror by the sea, from 15 feet. Other than that, it was mostly a routine Littler round that could have been much better since he missed four birdie putts of eight feet or less.

"I didn't play quite as well as yesterday, but I got plenty out of the round," Littler said.

Littler had just one moment of difficulty Friday, when he pushed his 2-iron tee shot at the 202-yard 12th into a tree and it landed on a flattened-out gopher mound.

"When I saw it, I was ready to take a four (bogey) and go to the next hole," Littler said, but he hit a marvelous shot to within 10 feet of the hole and sank the putt for par.

Jack Nickaus, a frustrated runnerup in both the Masters and British Opens this year, shot a 71 and shared third place at 140 with comebacking Lanny Wadkins, who had a 71 of his own and complained bitterly about the pin positions.

"I'm near the lead, and I don't have to do any heroics tomorrow — although I'd like some," said Nicklaus, a winner of four PGA titles and a record 16 major championships overall, but none since the 1975 PGA.

FOUR PLAYERS were next at 141 including Tom Watson, who had to play with mostly borrowed clubs for the second day in a row while he awaited repairs on his own set.

Watson, the worlds best player in 1977, suffered one serious lapse when he "fell asleep" and took four from the fringe at the 16th green, had 73. Others in the 141 group were Al "59" Geiberger, who won this title in 1966, Charles Coody, the 1971 Masters champ, and Joe Inman. Geiberger shot 70 in Friday's mild, mostly overcast weather, Coody 71 and Inman 69.

Gil Morgan shot 68 and was tied at 142 with longball hitters George Cadle and Fuzzy Zoeller, who — playing together — both fell back when they made double-bogey 5 at the 209-yard 17th hole. Cadle had 73 Friday and Zoeller 72.

Jerry Pate, the rookie sensation of a year ago, Tournament Players Championship winner Mark Hayes and comebacking former Masters champ George Archer were at 143. A large group at 144, even par, included Lee Trevino, Johnny Miller, Don January, Billy Casper and Lou Graham.

Herald tourney tees off

Wickes Furniture will be at the 28th Annual Paddock Publications Inter-League Handicap Golf Tournament at Buffalo Grove Golf Course Sunday to defend the title the team won last year at Hilldale Golf Course.

The champ will be one of a record number of 44 area twilight league first place teams entered in this year's tourney which is being held at Buffalo Grove for the second time in three years.

The four-man teams will be broken up and paired by handicaps for play Sunday. The lowest handicaps will tee off beginning at 10 a.m. on tees No. 1 and No. 10. The rest of the field will follow and be on the course by 12:30 p.m.

Heading the list of prizes is the large traveling trophy awarded to the winning team. Other prizes include: individual trophies for the members of the first, second and third place teams; golf passes for the members of the fourth place team; a dozen balls for the low gross and net scorers; and a $100 cash award for a hole-in-one.

In addition, each player will receive a packet of six imprinted golf tees, a tournament bag tab and a complimentary golf towel.

Martial arts exhibition Sunday

The world famous Do Ve Tae Kwon Do team, comprised of 7-9 year-old black belts, both male and female, will give a demonstration Sunday at Arlington High School's Grace Gymnasium, 502 Euclid, Arlington Heights.

In a 2:30 p.m. appearance, 18 children will demonstrate the martial art of Tae Kwon Do, considered by self-defense experts to be the most demanding as well as the potentially most deadly of the popular Oriental fighting methods.

The demonstration, sponsored by the Arlington Heights Tae Kwon Do Academy, will also feature 7th degree Black Belt Su Cho, co-editor of Tae Kwon Do Illustrated magazine, and two American-born Caucasian Black Belts.

Tickets for the demonstration are at $3 for adults and $2 for children. They may be purchased at the Arlington Tae Kwon Do Academy, 14 N. Vail or at the Book Store, 5 W. Campbell, Arlington Heights.

Lords of baseball hold summer talks

Kansas City, Mo. — A proposed change in the inter-league trading period, penalties for tampering and performance bonuses will be the primary topics of discussion this week when the lords of baseball gather for their annual summer meeting.

Representatives from the 26 teams plus the two league and commissioner's offices will be in Kansas City Aug. 17-18 for an abbreviated version of the week-long winter meetings.

The key topic will be the inter-league trading deadline, traditionally the post-season period beginning five days after the end of the World Series and ending with the close of the winter meeting.

A second period was adopted last winter which allowed inter-league trading from Feb. 15-March 15. But it has been proposed that the second period be changed to run from March 1-April 1 to give teams more time to evaluate players during spring training.

NCAA pushes playoff bid proposal

GREENSBORO, N.C.—The NCAA executive committee Friday pushed up by a year the Division I basketball committee recommendation that only the 16 conferences with the best five-year tournament records get automatic spots in the annual basketball playoffs.

The action takes effect with the 1978-79 playoffs.

Twenty-two conferences had automatic spots this past season and that number will remain the same for next year's playoffs.

In each of the four basketball regionals the executive committee rules that four conferences would be seeded, rather than the recommended two, and that the two leading independent teams would be seeded next March.

Tom Jernstedt, NCAA director of tournaments, announced the 1977-78 playoff schedule with eight first round games on Saturday, March 11, and eight on Sunday, March 12.

U.S. cities present Olympic bids

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. — Officials from New York, Los Angeles and New Orleans will present their bids to host the 1984 Summer Olympic Games during a two-day meeting of the U.S. Olympic Committee's site selection committee next month.

Former Olympic decathlon champion Bob Mathias, now director of the Colorado Springs Olympic Training Center, Thursday said members of the selection committee already had visited the three cities to review plans and inspect locations. When the USOC decides on a United States city, the proposal will be presented to the International Olympic Committee.

The meeting Sept. 23-24 also will be the first time the USOC's governing body has inspected the 28-acre training center since it was selected in June. Another Olympic training center has been set up at Squaw Valley, Calif., and a third is being considered at Lake Placid, N.Y., site of the 1980 Winter Olympics.

Rangers expecting coaching change

NEW —YORK — The New York Rangers are on the verge of announcing that Jean-Guy Talbot, formerly coach of the Quebec Nordiques in the World Hockey Association and currently a Ranger assistant coach, will replace John Ferguson as coach of the National Hockey League team.

Talbot sat on the bench severaltimes during the 1976-77 season to direct the club as Ferguson was apparently prepping the former NHL defenseman as his successor. Ferguson will retain his role as the Rangers' general manager.

Should the move go through as expected, Talbot will be announced as the new coach in an Aug. 22 news conference.

The 45-year-old Talbot, the first full-time assistant coach in the history of the Rangers, was signed on at the June, 1976 league meetings.

Bears owe rough Raiders

by BOB GALLAS

Few Bears are looking on tonight's game in Oakland as a grudge match, but they still remember last year's hookup with the Raiders, who beat the Bears 28-27 in a game laced with controversy, then went on to eventually win the Super Bowl.

The majority remember Bob Thomas' 31-yard field goal attempt hitting the upright and bouncing back with 15-seconds left in the game. Many more remember Roger Stillwell's 39-yard return of a Raider fumble for a touchdown, a touchdown nullified by an inadvertent official's whistle.

But the Bears won't be out to get even.

"YOU GET those back during the regular season, not the preseason," emphasized coach Jack Pardee. "But when you play the defending Super Bowl champs, you do get up for the game, regardless of when you play."

The Bears, who have bypassed preparation for their first two preseason contests in order to concentrate on revamping their own offense, spent time this week studying Oakland's unique four-linebacker defense, but Pardee still contends the Bears are primarily interested in getting their own act together, before worrying about a preseason foe.

"The teams we play over the next several weeks do many things similar. We've been getting into some of the things they do, but that's about it," explained Pardee. "We are a lot farther ahead this week than we were last week," said Pardee, referring to his club's preparations.

The Bears will have their hands full. The Raiders opened their preseason schedule Monday with a 40-0 drubbing over the Houston Oilers.

THE BOB AVELLINI-Mike Phipps quarterback duo, which will again split halves with Avellini opening, will face one of the more fearsome defenses in the league.

"It's a defense spearheaded by safety George Atkinson, who gained national attention over the off-season with his slander suit against Steelers' coach Chuck Noll, who labeled Atkinson as one of the "criminal elements" of pro football. Akinson hit Pittsburgh receiver Lynn Swann from behind and away from the ball in a game last season, giving Swann a concussion.

The Bears will probably send a rearranged offensive line against the Raiders. No. 1 draft choice Ted Albrecht will open at guard while Jeff Sevy will move over to left tackle for the first time, a move that may become permanent if Lionel Antoine's ailing knee doesn't recover enough for him to play full time.

Already short on running backs, the Bears may have to rely more heavily on Walter Payton, who missed Wednesday's practice session due to a bout with the stomach flu.

Larry Schreiber is sidelined with a pulled hamstring suffered in last Saturdays' loss to New Orleans and fullback Robin Earl missed three days of practice for a court appearance back in the state of Washington, which had charged Earl with welfare fraud.

Pardee said he didn't know how much Earl would play Saturday, since Earl had missed so much practice time. With Mike Adamle recovering from a torn groin muscle, that leaves Roland Harper, Johnny Musso and Tommy Reamon in addition to Payton to handle the running chores.

Defensively Royce Berry may start in place of Mike Hartenstein at tackle. Hartenstein injured his foot Monday and has missed practice.

Pardee's biggest concern is in the defensive backfield, where rookie Mike Spivey will start at cornerback against the likes of Oakland receivers Cliff Branch and Fred Biletnikoff.

"I hope Virgil (Livers) will be able to play," said Pardee. Livers injured his leg the first day of camp and has yet to play so Spivey has taken over the spot at cornerback. "That's the way Livers learned," said Pardee. "I think we gave up 35 touchdowns that first year Livers was in there."

The game will be telecast live, starting at 8 p.m., on WBBM-TV, Channel 2. It will also be broadcast on WBBM (780) radio.

Carew's slam elevates Twins into West lead

Rod Carew hit a grand slam home run and Mike Cubbage, who drove in three runs, also had a homer Friday night in helping the Minnesota Twins outslug the Detroit Tigers, 12-11, in a game that featured six homers.

In other American League games, Kansas City slipped by Toronto, 9-8; New York won a pair from California, 10-1 and 9-3; Baltimore beat Oakland 6-1; Boston slugged Seattle, 7-2; and Cleveland swept Milwaukee, 2-0 and 5-4.

Carew's fourth career grand slam and his 11th home run of the season gave the Twins a 12-3 lead in the third, but the Twins had to stave off a late Detroit rally that featured home runs by Jason Thompson, Tito Fuentes, Rusty Staub and Steve Kemp.

IN TORONTO, Hal McRae slammed a triple and a two-run homer and Darrell Porter collected three hits and scored two runs to power the Kansas City Royals to a 9-8 triumph over the Toronto Blue Jays.

IN NEW YORK, Chris Chambliss homered twice in the opener and Reggie Jackson blasted a pair of long homers in the second game to lead the New York Yankees to a 10-1, 9-3 doubleheader sweep of the California Angels.

Jim "Catfish" Hunter allowed six hits in the first game and Ed Figueroa tossed a six-hitter in the nightcap as the Yankees ran their winning streak to five games.

Jackson's 20th homer, into the upper deck in right, ignited a four-run sixth inning rally which broke a 3-3 tie in the nightcap. Paul Blair's two-run single capped the inning and Jackson added his second homer of the game for the first of two Yankee runs in the seventh.

Major league baseball

IN BALTIMORE, Doug DeCines slammed his 12th home run and shortstop Kiko Garcia climaxed a four-run sixth inning with a two-run single, enabling the Baltimore Orioles to defeat the Oakland A's, 6-1, behind the two-hit pitching of Jim Palmer for their fifth straight triumph.

Palmer, 13-10, completed his 15th game and was backed by a 10-hit attack as the Orioles registered their seventh victory in a row this season over Oakland.

IN BOSTON, Jim Rice hit his 30th homer and drove in two runs and Carl Yastrezemski also knocked in a pair to pace the Boston Red Sox to a 7-2 triumph over Seattle for their 12th victory in their last 13 games and eighth straight this season over the expansion Mariners.

The victory enabled the first place Red Sox to maintain a game and a half lead over Baltimore in the American League East.

IN CLEVELAND, Pinch-hitter Rico Carty doubled home pinch runner Paul Dade from second base with one out in the ninth inning, enabling the Cleveland Indians to defeat the Milwaukee Brewers 5-4 and sweep their doubleheader.

Dennis Eckersley allowed only one hit — a first inning triple by Cecil Cooper — in pitching the Indians to a 2-0 triumph in the opener.

IN PITTSBURGH — Duffy Dyer singled home Rennie Stennett with one out in the 12th inning to give the Pittsburgh Pirates a 6-5 fight-marred triumph over the New York Mets in the second game to complete a sweep of their doubleheader.

Jim Rooker went 3-for-3 knocked in two runs and scored another while scattering nine hits in the opener to give the Pirates a 3-2 triumph.

With one out in the 12th inning, Stennett singled to left off loser Paul Siebert, 2-1, and stole second. Siebert then intentionally passed Fernando Gonzalez before Dyer singled to left to give Larry Demery, 5-3, the win after four innings of two-hit relief.

The game was tied for the third time in the bottom of the eighth when Omar Moreno singled home Bobby Tolan, who had belted a pinch-hit double with two out.

IN ST. LOUIS, Jerry Mumphrey doubled home pinch-runner Rick Bosetti with one out in the bottom of the ninth to give the St. Louis Cardinals a 2-1 victory over the Montreal Expos. With one out, reliever Will McEnaney walked Ted Simmons and Bosetti ran for him. McEnaney gave up another walk to Mike Anderson before Mumphrey sent a drive to the wall in right field. Al Hrabosky picked up the win in relief.

DUCKS OF A FEATHER sleep together and in this case it's on one foot and with their heads tusked under the left wing. Zoologists say mallards often nap that way to conserve body heat. Dry conditions in Canada have reduced the duck breeding population.

Fewer ducks this fall

This spring's total duck breeding population was down about 4 per cent from 1976, the Interior Department's U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service announced.

Weather on the waterfowl breeding grounds last fall and winter was mild, with record high temperatures and below average precipitation recorded at most stations. The drought continued until mid-May, when extensive rain fell over prairie areas in Canada and the United States. Unfortunately, the rains may have come too late in the nesting season to help nesting waterfowl.

Dry conditions in the important Canadian and U.S. prairie-pothole region resulted in a major decrease in number of breeding ducks there as birds overflew the dry areas. Spring waterfowl populations increase sharply in Alaska and northern Canada because of the overflight.

THE BREEDING population of mallards, traditionally the most numerous species, decreased 5 per cent from 1976 and 7 per cent from the 1956-1976 average.

Breeding population estimates for other species reflect the following changes from 1976; gadwall +5 per cent; wigeon -1 per cent; green-winged teal +6 per cent; blue-winged teal -8 per cent; northern shoveler -11 per cent; pintail -18 per cent; redhead -27 per cent; canvasback +2 per cent; and scaup +7 per cent. The total breeding population of these 10 species was down 4 per cent.

Waterfowl nest throughout North America. However, the prairie-pothole regions of Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba, the Dakotas, Montana and Minnesota normally produce 50 to 75 per cent of the continent's annual duck crop. This area receives highly variable amounts of precipitation, with periodic droughts fairly common.

Consequently, the capability of this area to support breeding ducks also varies markedly. This glaciated landscape, pocked with lakes and potholes, is the key area for waterfowl production in North America.

EXPERIENCE has shown that ducks produce less successfully when they are forced from their traditional prairie-pothole regions to more northerly breeding areas.

During July, duck broods are counted to monitor production success from the breeders surveyed in May. A comparison of May and July pond counts is made to determine an index of water stability.

These waterfowl production counts and habitat assessments are in progres now. The impact of this year's weather and habitat conditions on actual duck production are not yet known.

Steel shot will affect 12-gaugers

Waterfowl hunters who use shotguns bored larger or smaller than 12-gauge are exempt from mandatory use of steel shot this fall.

The steel loads will be mandatory for 12-gauge in areas designated for non-toxic shot. But guns with larger or smaller bores are not affected by the rulemaking, published in the Aug. 2, 1977, Federal Register.

Steel shot is the only approved non-toxic shot and it has been manufactured in 12-gauge only. Therefore the Service has decided that in the waterfowl hunting season beginning in the fall of 1977, shells other than 12-gauge loaded with lead or other metals can be used to hunt waterfowl in steel shot zones. The rule permits use of toxic shot for the 10-gauge as well as all other gauges except 12-gauge.

APPROXIMATELY 85 per cent of all waterfowl hunters use the 12-gauge shotgun. The ruling states that the hunter who is taking waterfowl in a designated steel shot zone with 12-gauge shells loaded with toxic shot in his possession will be in violation of the regulation. Waterfowl hunters possessing these loads in other gauges will not be in violation.

The Service points out that this exemption for gauges that have not been manufactured in steel shot will be reviewed again prior to the 1978 hunting season to determine whether it should be continued for that season.

The Service has proposed that in the fall of 1979 no further exceptions be made based on gauge. These exceptions lessen the effectiveness of efforts to reduce lead poisoning among waterfowl using the zones.

Lake trout surveys start

A survey of lake trout in Lake Michigan being conducted by the Illinois Dept. of Conservation may help decide future catch limits for both commercial and sport fishermen.

Currently, commercial fishermen are prohibited from taking lake trout and sport fishermen are limited to three a day.

Illinois Department of Conservation Lake Michigan fishery biologist Harry Wight has been in search of the bottom-hugging lakers since Aug. 1. Each day he heads a couple of miles offshore in a commercial fishing tug with 800 feet of gill net ranging from 2½ to 6 inches.

BY MARKING FISH with a sonar device, Wight can usually differentiate between lake trout, which prefer the bottom, and coho salmon, which are about the same size but swim nearer the surface of the water.

So far, using the sonar, lake bottom charts and water temperature he has caught 258 lake trout. Wight wants to catch at least 750 but has been hampered by west winds that have blown in colder water than the 50 degrees normally preferred by lake trout.

Wight plans to plot a mortality rate of about 25 per cent and with mortality rates where catch limits have been recorded for the same periods of time. Just what the mortality rate on a given body of water can be without hurting the population is difficult to determine without closely observing that body of water over a period of years, he said.

By using different sizes of gill nets, Wight hopes to get all ages of lake trout. Lakers tend to school together in age groups, a factor that must be overcome in catching a diversity of fish by age.

PREVIOUS STUDIES of Lake Michigan have indicated that there has not been any natural reproduction of lake trout for several years, but hatchery-reared fish have thrived in the lake, Wight said. If there is ever to be any natural reproduction, sufficient numbers of a large breeding population must be protected.

Besides the mortality rate, Wight is monitoring growth rates for fish to determine whether they are getting enough alewives to eat. By doing this he can be sure that he does not allow more fish to be stocked than can be supported by the lake.

60 million sportsmen hunt or fish

One in five Americans holds a fishing or hunting license and they spent a record $318 million last year to get them, the Interior Department said.

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Director Lynn Greenwalt said 60 million Americans bought state hunting and fishing licenses in 1976.

"Both figures are record highs and they show that Americans continue to find hunting and fishing major pastimes," Greenwalt said.

HE SAID THE number of hunters and fishers probably is larger than department figures show because some states do not require licenses for ocean fishing, or for children under 16 or the elderly.

The number of license holders increased by 500,000 over 1975 and state sales of license plates was up $23 million.

California led the nation in fishing licenses with 5.8 million sold. Michigan was next with 1.6 million, followed by Wisconsin, Missouri, Oregon, Tennessee and Texas.

'Incentives for oil drilling lacking'

Given adequate tax incentives, independent operators who explore for oil could double their drilling rate, an Oklahoma producer spokesman said Friday. E. L. "Bud" Stewart, executive director of Energy Consumers and Producers Assn. of Seminole, Okla., testified at the close of a week's hearings by the Senate finance committee into th tax portions of President Carter's energy program, which the House approved last week. "His program is woefully weak in providing incentives for new production," Stewart said. But Carter's program was vigorously defended Friday by energy sec. James Schlesinger, who told a CBS television interviewer the Senate may well "move back toward the administration's position" on taxing low-mileage cars. The House approved a tax on such vehicles, based on their fuel efficiency and starting with the 1979 models that come out next year. Carter had proposed a stiffer tax, starting this year.

Chrysler wildcat strike ends

Wildcat strikers agreed Friday to end their unauthorized week-long strike at the Chrysler Corp. engine plant that forced the automaker to put 16,000 workers on layoff or half-shifts. By a voice vote, members of United Auto Workers Local 372 decided to end the strike. They removed picket lines from the plant gates where they had been stationed since Monday. Chrysler said work at the 4,500-employe plant would resume on the third shift Sunday night.

Dollar shows gain over week

The dollar, recovering from a six-week slump, made sizeable gains against Continental Currencies Friday and showed over-all gains for the week. Gold fell. In London the dollar gained two points on sterling at $1.7139 against $1.7381 and was stronger than at the start of the week. On the continent, the dollar advanced to 2.3255 marks from 2.3140 in Frankfurt and went to 2.4188 Swiss Francs from 2.4107 in Zurich. The dollar rate in Paris was 4.9113 francs up from 4,8965 and in Brussels it closed at 35.80 against 35.65. In Amsterdam a dollar cost 2.4530 guilders compared with 2.4450 guilders Thursday. It advanced almost one lira in Milan to 882.85 from 881.90. Gold closed 50 cents lower in Zurich at $144.875 and 25 cents lower in London at $145.125.

United to seek 1.8% fare increase

United Airlines said that it will file with the Civil Aeronautics Board to match Eastern Airlines' filing for a 1.8 per cent fare increase for the 48 contiguous states. United's filing would be effective Oct. 1. The company said the fare increase is necessary because of increased costs.

Unemployment insurance meeting

Unemployment insurance laws and regulations represent a rapidly increasing financial burden on public as well as private employes in Illinois. Effective Jan. 1, 1978, all public employes — such as municipalities and school districts — face mandatory U.I. coverage for the first time. To help public employers through the myriad of U.I. forms and regulations, the Illinois State Chamber of Commerce will sponsor day-long seminar to brief governmental units on all aspects of compliance with U.I. laws and guidelines. The session to be repeated six times in various locations throughout the state, will run from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. Chicago sessions include: Aug. 22, 23 and 24 meetings at the Chicago Marriott Motor Hotel.

Telemed reports record earnings

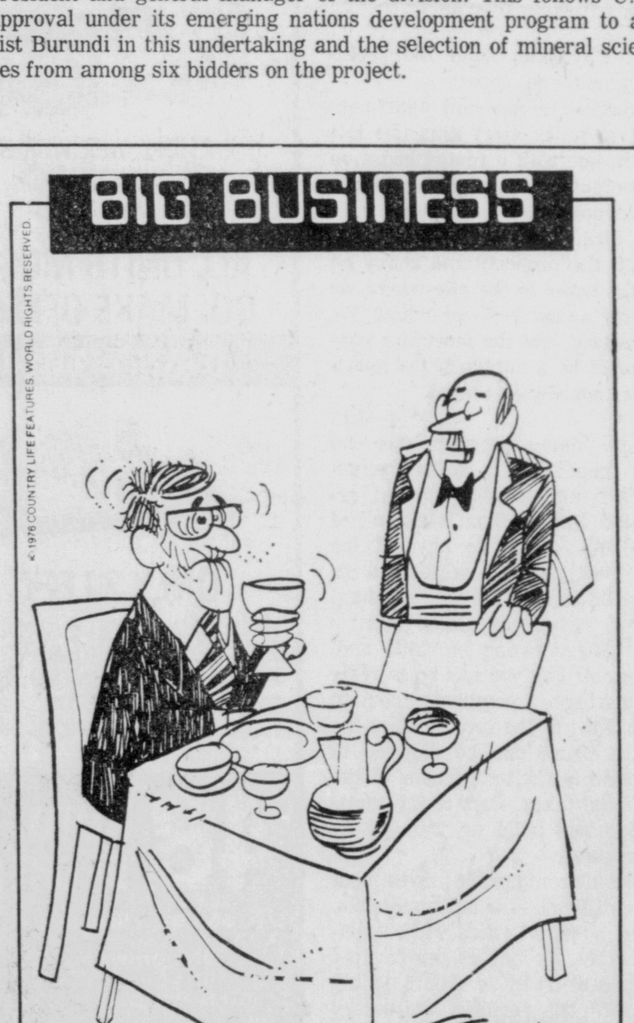
Telemed Corp., Hoffman Estates reported record revenues and earnings for the year ended March 31, said Jack Henn, president. Henn predicted improved first quarter fiscal 1978 revenues and net income results. Revenues reached a record $11,430,619, which represents a 51 per cent increase over last fiscal year. Net income increased 22 per cent to $1,436,222 compared to $1,176,785 for the previous year. Earnings per share rose from 34 cents to 38 cents, which takes into account 355,522 additional average shares outstanding during fiscal 1977. These results reflect a change in method of accounting for leases.

Motorola buys a California firm

Motorola Inc., Schaumburg, announced that is has acquired for an undisclosed amount of cash a controlling interest in the Tegal Corp., located in Richmond, California. Tegal manufactures gas plasma reaction systems used primarily in semiconductor processes. Tegal had sales of less than $1 million for the fiscal year ended Nov. 30, 1976.

UOP granted U.N. contract

The Mineral Sciences Division of UOP, Inc., Des Plaines, has been awarded a $150,000 contract by the United Nations for a detailed metallurgical study of nickel-bearing ores in the central African Republic of Burundi, according to W.M. Swanson, vice president and general manager of the division. This follows U.N. approval under its emerging nations development program to assist Burundi in this undertaking and the selection of mineral sciences from among six bidders on the project.



"Sour enough?"

Tastee-Freez out to scoop success with new family restaurant chain

Those small town summer days at the neighborhood ice cream stand: they seemed to last forever.

But the times are changing. The folks at Tastee-Freez International, Inc., who helped to popularize the carry-out ice cream and hot dog stands that sprang up along the highways during the 1950s, are seeking a new image and higher sales to hungry consumers.

Small towns remain the best market for Tastee Freez soft ice cream, and the summertime crowd is always welcome, says Tastee Freez president George N. Mitros.

Dramatic change in American consumers' lifestyles, however, is influencing the Tastee-Freez way of doing things. A new look, streamlined service and a varied menu mark the chain's new Big T Family Restaurants open.

Mitros, the man responsible for this change, makes his home base at Tastee-Freez headquarters, 1515 Mount Prospect Road, Des Plaines. Mitros, however, often travels to meetings with franchise owners, to push the expansion.

"THE EXCITING THING is that now we know where we're going," Mitros said. The company's surveys are showing a new pace in American consumer lifestyles, and Mitros says he's to meet their demands.

"In the family of tomorrow, the average age will move up to 32 years," Mitros says. "Now the consumer is richer, smarter and older."

An increasing number of working women and independent activities for children also will shape the food service industry's future, Mitros says.

"AND THERE'S MORE competition," Mitros says. Tastee-Freez International ranks 25th in sales among U.S. food service companies,

"INSTEAD OF 20 million hamburgers sold, I'd rather have 20 million customers satisfied," says Tastee Freez executive George Mitros.

its $309.8 million annual volume well below the likes of McDonald's. "We don't want to compete with McDonald's," Mitros says. "We want to be better."

Tastee-Freez, founded in 1950 by Leo Maranz, has come a long way from its start as a tiny St. Louis carry-out restaurant. The small restaurants later were enclosed and seating was added with what Mitros calls "planned discomfort" in mind; customers were encouraged to come inside to eat, but not for long.

"We had food cooked to order — everything but the kitchen sink," Mitros says. "There was no consistency of name, building or menus."

BY THE LATE 1960s, Mitros says, the need for change from the inside out was apparent. Consumer surveys were taken, plans were debated and new menus were drawn up by management. Standardized service and a training program for all managers at the Des Plaines headquarters were part of the game plan. A coordinated advertising program was launched.

That's how the Big T Family Restaurant concept was born, Mitros says. Tastee-Freez management discussed the proposed transition with its territorial franchise owners. These independent business executives are licensed to use the Tastee-Freez trademark for a limited area. Within each territory, they license individual store owners to sell the company's products.

Many have decided the expanded Big T restaurants will provide the best means to compete for the consumer's food dollar. Tastee-Freez executives are in the third year of the transition to Big T outlets.

GONE ARE THE GAUDY Carnival colors of yesterday's red-white-and-blue carry-out restaurant. The Big T Family Restaurant, has an earthtone exterior with accents of red and blue.

"We've taken Tastee-Freez from a group of hard-working Mom and Pop operators to a more sophisticated franchise business," Mitros says. A varied menu is still featured in the newer restaurants, he says, but now the Big T patrons can expect snappy service as well.

There is a price to pay for modernization. Franchise owners shell out approximately $250,000 to set up a new Big T restaurant from scratch. Mitros says the annual sales volume at one of the new self-service outlets — in the $300,000 to $350,000 range — never could be achieved at a small carry-out stand.

The Big T Family Restaurants lineup includes 142 outlets. Another 39 new restaurants will be opened by the end of this year. Mitros says they aim for increased annual sales at newer outlets, pushing for an eventual $450,000 to $500,000 annual mark.

CHICAGO AREA CONSUMERS might not notice the change until they decide to take a vacation in the Southeast or other regions where Tastee-Freez is stronger, Mitros says. The few Chicago area outlets including a Tastee-Freez in Des Plaines and another in Bartlett, may not convert to the new style.

More than 200 older Tastee-Freez outlets were closed during 1976. Approximately 1,200 of the approximately 2,000 outlets are in the U.S., with the remaining restaurants in Canada, Japan, England and other countries.

Mitros already looks forward to the 1980s, when consumer trends will continue to bring changes in the Tastee Freez style, he says. Some of the Big T restaurants already have begun serving breakfast and Mitros says he expects table service and the sale of beer and wine to be featured at future Big T restaurants.

Success in the fast food industry should be measured by service, Mitros says. "Instead of 20 million hamburgers sold, I'd rather have 20 million customers satisfied," Mitros says.

Louis Rukeyser

EUGENIE-LES BAINS, France — The effort to grow fat on other people's efforts to grow thin has been one of the boom businesses of the last generation. In the U.S. — which often seems to regard itself as the vast waistband — the effort already has enriched, among others, pill-dispensing physicians, exercise-dispensing gymnasiums and diet-dispensing authors. Now comes a new phenomenon: the great international chef who argues convincingly that you can dine like a fat cat — and still grow light as a kitten.

The phenomenon has several spectacular commercial manifestations, but its undisputed fountainhead is the place I have just visited in Eugenie-les-Bains, France: The spa-hotel called Les Pres et Les Sources d'Eugenie and featuring the "cuisine minceur" (diet cooking) of the formidable — but slim — Michael Guerard.

Guerard's "cuisine of slimness" has engendered a best-selling cookbook and been glorified in half a dozen American magazines. This year he won the most cherished gastronomical accolade of his native land — three stars in the Michelin guide — and he has clearly only begun to invade our calorie consciousness; there is talk now of a television series next year with Julia Child.

GIVEN THE IMITATIVE nature of our society, and its emphasis on mass marketing, we can expect to see many different varieties, from mildly authentic to totally spurious, of Guerard's new style of cooking — which attempts to summon great flavors while simultaneously banishing fat, sugar, flour and starch. Already there is great confusion between what Guerard is presenting and the so-called new cuisine.

The "new cuisine," in this trencherman's humble (and hungry) opinion, is a bit of a put-on. It takes an always fashionable, but rarely true, idea ("What we are doing today has never been done before") that suffuses it with an American-style media consciousness that was formerly remote from this branch of gastronomy. The new-cuisine chefs, and especially their uncrowned leader, Paul Bocuse, assiduously market a wide range of products — starting with themselves — from New York to Nice.

And yet, despite the new cliches of the "NEW CUISINE" (the garnished salad of green beans to begin, the poached fish in vegetables and white wine, the undercooked duck with green peppercorns), to accept its self-definition as "the new, lighter French cooking" is to do a disservice both to the truth and to the great chefs who went before.

NO ONE WHO HAS truly explored the world of serious French cooking can accept the myth that it consisted of thick sauces masking natural flavors until its recent rescue by the "new cuisine." The greatest French chefs traditionally started with the best ingredients and sought to enhance and orchestrate their flavors indeed, the best of the last half-century, Fernand Point, was so rigorous about this that his influence is clear on virtually every "new cuisine" menu in France. (And, on the other hand, I have been served heavy pastry crusts and sausages at Boscuse's own restaurant that could torpedo the liver of a healthy whale.)

So the "new cuisine," in reality, is not always so marvelously new as its publicists pretend. But Guerard, with his "cuisine minceur," is a more authentic fairy tale: When he was courting the lady whose family hotel he now adorns, she coaxed him into shedding his chef-like dimensions; he loathed ordinary diet food, as any sensible person would, and so invented something very much better — a genuine contribution to the fat of the land, and its removal.

Two cautions, however: (1) Though it has not been widely publicized, Guerard's Eugenie-les-Bains operation actually downgrades his "cuisine minceur" (reserving it primarily for visitors taking the complete spa "cure") and focuses instead on a more conventional, if thoroughly delightful, "grand menu gourmand." It is the latter, in fact, that won him his Michelin stars. (2) One reason it is possible to lose weight while eating so well is that Guerard practices a secret that you might even be able to figure out for yourself. He serves very small portions.

'Incentives for oil drilling lacking'

Given adequate tax incentives, independent operators who explore for oil could double their drilling rate, an Oklahoma producer spokesman said Friday. E. L. "Bud" Stewart, executive director of Energy Consumers and Producers Assn. of Seminole, Okla., testified at the close of a week's hearings by the Senate finance committee into th tax portions of President Carter's energy program, which the House approved last week. "His program is woefully weak in providing incentives for new production," Stewart said. But Carter's program was vigorously defended Friday by energy sec. James Schlesinger, who told a CBS television interviewer the Senate may well "move back toward the administration's position" on taxing low-mileage cars. The House approved a tax on such vehicles, based on their fuel efficiency and starting with the 1979 models that come out next year. Carter had proposed a stiffer tax, starting this year.

Chrysler wildcat strike ends

Wildcat strikers agreed Friday to end their unauthorized week-long strike at the Chrysler Corp. engine plant that forced the automaker to put 16,000 workers on layoff or half-shifts. By a voice vote, members of United Auto Workers Local 372 decided to end the strike. They removed picket lines from the plant gates where they had been stationed since Monday. Chrysler said work at the 4,500-employe plant would resume on the third shift Sunday night.

On the continent, the dollar advanced to 2.3255 marks from 2.3140 in Frankfurt and went to 2.4188 Swiss Francs from 2.4107 in Zurich. The dollar rate in Paris was 4.9113 francs up from 4,8965 and in Brussels it closed at 35.80 against 35.65. In Amsterdam a dollar cost 2.4530 guilders compared with 2.4450 guilders Thursday. It advanced almost one lira in Milan to 882.85 from 881.90. Gold closed 50 cents lower in Zurich at $144.875 and 25 cents lower in London at $145.125.

United to seek 1.8% fare increase

Unemployment insurance meeting

Unemployment insurance laws and regulations represent a rapidly increasing financial burden on public as well as private employes in Illinois. Effective Jan. 1, 1978, all public employes — such as municipalities and school districts — face mandatory U.I. coverage for the first time. To help public employers through the myriad of U.I. forms and regulations, the Illinois State Chamber of Commerce will sponsor day-long seminar to brief governmental units on all aspects of compliance with U.I. laws and guidelines. The session to be repeated six times in various locations throughout the state, will run from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. Chicago sessions include: Aug. 22, 23 and 24 meetings at the Chicago Marriott Motor Hotel.

Telemed reports record earnings

Telemed Corp., Hoffman Estates reported record revenues and earnings for the year ended March 31, said Jack Henn, president. Henn predicted improved first quarter fiscal 1978 revenues and net income results. Revenues reached a record $11,430,619, which represents a 51 per cent increase over last fiscal year. Net income increased 22 per cent to $1,436,222 compared to $1,176,785 for the previous year. Earnings per share rose from 34 cents to 38 cents, which takes into account 355,522 additional average shares outstanding during fiscal 1977. These results reflect a change in method of accounting for leases.

Motorola buys a California firm

Swanson, vice president and general manager of the division. This follows U.N. approval under its emerging nations development program to assist Burundi in this undertaking and the selection of mineral sciences from among six bidders on the project.

Tastee-Freez out to scoop success with new family restaurant chain

Those small town summer days at the neighborhood ice cream stand: they seemed to last forever.

But the times are changing. The folks at Tastee-Freez International, Inc., who helped to popularize the carry-out ice cream and hot dog stands that sprang up along the highways during the 1950s, are seeking a new image and higher sales to hungry consumers.

Small towns remain the best market for Tastee Freez soft ice cream, and the summertime crowd is always welcome, says Tastee Freez president George N. Mitros.

Dramatic change in American consumers' lifestyles, however, is influencing the Tastee-Freez way of doing things. A new look, streamlined service and a varied menu mark the chain's new Big T Family Restaurants open.

Mitros, the man responsible for this change, makes his home base at Tastee-Freez headquarters, 1515 Mount Prospect Road, Des Plaines. Mitros, however, often travels to meetings with franchise owners, to push the expansion.

"THE EXCITING THING is that now we know where we're going," Mitros said. The company's surveys are showing a new pace in American consumer lifestyles, and Mitros says he's to meet their demands.

"In the family of tomorrow, the average age will move up to 32 years," Mitros says. "Now the consumer is richer, smarter and older."

An increasing number of working women and independent activities for children also will shape the food service industry's future, Mitros says.

''AND THERE'S MORE competition," Mitros says. Tastee-Freez International ranks 25th in sales among U.S. food service companies,

"INSTEAD OF 20 million hamburgers sold, I'd rather have 20 million customers satisfied," says Tastee Freez executive George Mitros.

its $309.8 million annual volume well below the likes of McDonald's. "We don't want to compete with McDonald's," Mitros says. "We want to be better."

Tastee-Freez, founded in 1950 by Leo Maranz, has come a long way from its start as a tiny St. Louis carry-out restaurant. The small restaurants later were enclosed and seating was added with what Mitros calls "planned discomfort" in mind; customers were encouraged to come inside to eat, but not for long.

"We had food cooked to order — everything but the kitchen sink," Mitros says. "There was no consistency of name, building or menus."

BY THE LATE 1960s, Mitros says, the need for change from the inside out was apparent. Consumer surveys were taken, plans were debated and new menus were drawn up by management. Standardized service and a training program for all managers at the Des Plaines headquarters were part of the game plan. A coordinated advertising program was launched.

That's how the Big T Family Restaurant concept was born, Mitros says. Tastee-Freez management discussed the proposed transition with its territorial franchise owners. These independent business executives are licensed to use the Tastee-Freez trademark for a limited area. Within each territory, they license individual store owners to sell the company's products.

Many have decided the expanded Big T restaurants will provide the best means to compete for the consumer's food dollar. Tastee-Freez executives are in the third year of the transition to Big T outlets.

GONE ARE THE GAUDY Carnival colors of yesterday's red-white-and-blue carry-out restaurant. The Big T Family Restaurant, has an earthtone exterior with accents of red and blue.

"We've taken Tastee-Freez from a group of hard-working Mom and Pop operators to a more sophisticated franchise business," Mitros says. A varied menu is still featured in the newer restaurants, he says, but now the Big T patrons can expect snappy service as well.

There is a price to pay for modernization. Franchise owners shell out approximately $250,000 to set up a new Big T restaurant from scratch. Mitros says the annual sales volume at one of the new self-service outlets — in the $300,000 to $350,000 range — never could be achieved at a small carry-out stand.

The Big T Family Restaurants lineup includes 142 outlets. Another 39 new restaurants will be opened by the end of this year. Mitros says they aim for increased annual sales at newer outlets, pushing for an eventual $450,000 to $500,000 annual mark.

CHICAGO AREA CONSUMERS might not notice the change until they decide to take a vacation in the Southeast or other regions where Tastee-Freez is stronger, Mitros says. The few Chicago area outlets including a Tastee-Freez in Des Plaines and another in Bartlett, may not convert to the new style.

More than 200 older Tastee-Freez outlets were closed during 1976. Approximately 1,200 of the approximately 2,000 outlets are in the U.S., with the remaining restaurants in Canada, Japan, England and other countries.

Mitros already looks forward to the 1980s, when consumer trends will continue to bring changes in the Tastee Freez style, he says. Some of the Big T restaurants already have begun serving breakfast and Mitros says he expects table service and the sale of beer and wine to be featured at future Big T restaurants.

Success in the fast food industry should be measured by service, Mitros says. "Instead of 20 million hamburgers sold, I'd rather have 20 million customers satisfied," Mitros says.

Louis Rukeyser

EUGENIE-LES BAINS, France — The effort to grow fat on other people's efforts to grow thin has been one of the boom businesses of the last generation. In the U.S. — which often seems to regard itself as the vast waistband — the effort already has enriched, among others, pill-dispensing physicians, exercise-dispensing gymnasiums and diet-dispensing authors. Now comes a new phenomenon: the great international chef who argues convincingly that you can dine like a fat cat — and still grow light as a kitten.

The phenomenon has several spectacular commercial manifestations, but its undisputed fountainhead is the place I have just visited in Eugenie-les-Bains, France: The spa-hotel called Les Pres et Les Sources d'Eugenie and featuring the "cuisine minceur" (diet cooking) of the formidable — but slim — Michael Guerard.

Guerard's "cuisine of slimness" has engendered a best-selling cookbook and been glorified in half a dozen American magazines. This year he won the most cherished gastronomical accolade of his native land — three stars in the Michelin guide — and he has clearly only begun to invade our calorie consciousness; there is talk now of a television series next year with Julia Child.

GIVEN THE IMITATIVE nature of our society, and its emphasis on mass marketing, we can expect to see many different varieties, from mildly authentic to totally spurious, of Guerard's new style of cooking — which attempts to summon great flavors while simultaneously banishing fat, sugar, flour and starch. Already there is great confusion between what Guerard is presenting and the so-called new cuisine.

The "new cuisine," in this trencherman's humble (and hungry) opinion, is a bit of a put-on. It takes an always fashionable, but rarely true, idea ("What we are doing today has never been done before") that suffuses it with an American-style media consciousness that was formerly remote from this branch of gastronomy. The new-cuisine chefs, and especially their uncrowned leader, Paul Bocuse, assiduously market a wide range of products — starting with themselves — from New York to Nice.

And yet, despite the new cliches of the "NEW CUISINE" (the garnished salad of green beans to begin, the poached fish in vegetables and white wine, the undercooked duck with green peppercorns), to accept its self-definition as "the new, lighter French cooking" is to do a disservice both to the truth and to the great chefs who went before.

NO ONE WHO HAS truly explored the world of serious French cooking can accept the myth that it consisted of thick sauces masking natural flavors until its recent rescue by the "new cuisine." The greatest French chefs traditionally started with the best ingredients and sought to enhance and orchestrate their flavors indeed, the best of the last half-century, Fernand Point, was so rigorous about this that his influence is clear on virtually every "new cuisine" menu in France. (And, on the other hand, I have been served heavy pastry crusts and sausages at Boscuse's own restaurant that could torpedo the liver of a healthy whale.)

So the "new cuisine," in reality, is not always so marvelously new as its publicists pretend. But Guerard, with his "cuisine minceur," is a more authentic fairy tale: When he was courting the lady whose family hotel he now adorns, she coaxed him into shedding his chef-like dimensions; he loathed ordinary diet food, as any sensible person would, and so invented something very much better — a genuine contribution to the fat of the land, and its removal.

Two cautions, however: (1) Though it has not been widely publicized, Guerard's Eugenie-les-Bains operation actually downgrades his "cuising minceur" (reserving it primarily for visitors taking the complete spa "cure") and focuses instead on a more conventional, if thoroughly delightful, "grand menu gourmand." It is the latter, in fact, that won him his Michelin stars. (2) One reason it is possible to lose weight while eating so well is that Guerard practices a secret that you might even be able to figure out for yourself. He serves very small portions.

Antibribery bill almost a certainty by 1978; stiff penalties expected

by GUY HALVERSON

Overseas bribery and influence buying — increasingly recognized as the bane of the U.S. business community — may soon be facing stark, no-nonsense, congressionally mandated criminal penalties.

At issue: how to curb what lawmakers describe as huge amounts of overseas payoffs by U.S. corporations seeking overeas business contracts. According to just one report, 175 firms admitted making payoffs totaling more than $300 million during the 1970s.

Now, Congress and the Carter administration are working flat out to impose stiff criminal penalties for firms making these types of payments. At the same time, the United States, along with a dozen other nations, is seeking an international agreement for next year that would make bribery illegal.

ALTHOUGH THE final legislation may not clear Congress until later this year, or early 1978 (reflecting the administration's preoccupation with its energy package)' some type of antibribery bill now is considered almost a certainty to eventually reach President Carter.

For his part, President Carter has supported making it illegal to pay overseas influence money.

Barring any last-minute shifts in congressional attitudes here, the final bill is expected to impose outright criminal penalties for bribes. In May the Senate passed a bill that would penalize corporate officers with up to two years in prison a $10,000 fine, or both. Also, the corporation itself would be fined up to $500,000. A companion measure is expected to be taken up by the House committee on interstate and foreign commerce in September or October.

The impending congressional action is causing mounting concern here on the part of many businessmen, as well as some economists and busines analysts, about the impact of the proposed legislation on U.S. foreign trade.

MAKING OVERSEAS bribes illegal could have potentially, "far reaching" effects on the ability of U.S. firms to conduct business abroad, argues Rodney Eldridge, a professor of business at George Washington University, who specializes in international trade.

In an opinion shared by many business experts Eldridge says he would not be against legislation outlawing bribery for "high level" government and corporate officials abroad. But at the same time, he says, it is well known that "low level" payments — are often called "grease" or "facilitating payments" — are accepted practices in most third-world nations as well as among many major industrial nations in Asia, Africa, and Latin America.

Currently, neither the Senate bill nor the measure now up for consideration in the House would impose criminal sanctions for these so-called low level payments.

"A number of civil service systems actually run on grease." says a key aide to the House Commerce Committee. "We're not out to cripple U.S. firms doing business abroad. What we're concerned about are high-level bribes....

THE SENATE antibribery bill was adopted May 5 by voice vote. Besides imposing criminal sanctions, the bill would place responsibility for enforcing the bribery ban with the Securities and Exchange Commission. At the same time, the bill tightens corporate accounting standards, while requiring public identification of the name and nationalty of actual purchasers of more than 5 per cent of the stock of a corporation.

The main House antibribery bill is sponsored by Rep. Bob Eckhardt, D-Texas. The bill would impose criminal sanctions along the lines of the Senate measure, but it does not include the provisions on accounting and ownership disclosure.

Meanwhile, many business groups here are rallying around a House bill supported by Rep. Fred B. Rooney, (D) Penn. that would require U.S. firms to disclose overseas payments to the Commerce Depart. Failure to report such payments would be subject to a 1-year jail sentence, a $10,000 fine, or both. The corporation could be fined up to $100,000

Significantly, however, the Rooney bill would not in effect "criminalize" such bribes.

Hobart Rowen

WASHINGTON — The mounting U.S. trade deficit has touched off the first serious economic policy debate inside the Carter administration since the scrap over junking the $50 tax rebate.

No one disputes the fact that the size of the trade deficit is staggering—some $27 billion to $30 billion is a likely range for this year—reflecting primarily huge imports of oil, and secondarily a massive American appetite for foreign goods of all kinds.

The question is what, if anything, should be done about it? At a recent high-level discussion, one administration official who is concerned about the deficit said: "If we don't address this problem, it will cause us trouble."

AND AN OFFICIAL who is not worried about the deficit retorted: "If we do address this problem, it will cause us trouble."

President Carter is uneasy about the psychological impact of month-after-month-record deficit numbers. numbers. He is now studying special reports, done at his request, by Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal, Commerce Secretary Juanita Kreps, and Economic Council Chairman Charles L. Schultze.

The U.S. posture is actually far removed from what Henri Simonet, chairman of the Common Market Council of Ministers, described as an American policy of "aggresive neglect."

SIMONET AND other Europeans cite an interview with Treasury Secretary Blumenthal published in The Washington Post, in which he said he was willing to let the dollar float down further in foreign exchange markets against a stronger German mark and Japanese yen.

But as the D-mark and the yen move up in value, boosting the price of German and Japanese goods in world markets, businessmen and industrialists in those countries put the heat on their own politicians.

In Germany, the anxiety has escalated because of an exceedingly rapid rise in the rate of the mark against the dollar since July 15. "Much of this concern comes down to the Germans' fear that the Volkswagen will lose out in the U.S. market to the Japanese cars," says a U.S. observer.

U.S. CRITICISM of Blumenthal began to surface with speeches by Assistant Secretary of Commerce Frank Weil and Rep. Henry S. Reuss (D-Wis.). Then, Federal Reserve Board Chairman Arthur F. Burns spoke of the need to protect the "integrity" of the dollar.

Burns, highly respected—even revered—abroad, caused some confusion with his remarks. He did not, as one news agency reported, call for the United States to "support" the dollar, which means active, rather than occasional intervention. Later, he said there is no intention at the Fed to depart from present policy, but underlined "so far."

The question Carter is trying to decide is what, if anything, can actually be done about the trade deficit that won't make matters worse. The long-run solution is a substantial reduction is the staggering $45 billion oil bill. The flow of Alaskan oil may save $2 billion to $3 billion this year, but that won't last long.

IN THE MONTHS ahead and through 1978, the prospect is that the United States will still have more than an edge in economic growth over Europe. That means that U.S. imports will continue to grow, and U.S. exports may show no gain.

The danger is that the White House will get politically sensitized to the big trade deficit numbers, and reverse what has been essentially the right approach. The underlying problem is not some trade or current account statistic. The problem is that the oil-consuming world still hasn't found a way of coping with OPEC and its year-after-year enormous current account surpluses. All consuming countries, and that includes West Germany and Japan, have to find a way of dividing up the burden without scratching each others' eyes out.

So far, the West is in disarray on this crucial issue. It ought to be an object lesson (but it won't be) to the oil cartel, demonstrating the havoc it creates by irresponsible pricing policy.

Stocks hit low in slow trading as credit tightens

by FRANK W. SLUSSER
UPI BUSINESS WRITER

NEW YORK (UPI) ——Stocks fell to their lowest level in 19 months this week in slow trading as the Federal Reserve Board continued to tighten credit to counter an inflationary surge in the nation's money supply.

The Dow Jones Industrial Average, which lost 1.38 points last week, skidded 17.59 points to 871.10, the lowest level since it finished at 858.71 Jan. 2,1976. It has lost 133.55 points so far this year.

The NYSE Common Stock Index fell .43 to 53.61 and Standard & Poor's 500-stock index, containing some over-the-counter stocks, lost 6.88 to 97.88.

DECLINES ROUTED advances, 1,142 to 631, among the 2,086 issues crossing the composite tape.

The big board volume of 92,652.740 shares, down from the 95,765,530, was the slowest full-week turnover since 86.1 million shares changed hands the period ended April 1. Turnover during the same week a year ago totaled 76,579.640 shares.

Composite volume of NYSE issues listed on all U.S. exchanges and over the counter totaled 109,145,640 shares, compared with 112,030,280 last week.

The Fed, which has made money tougher to obtain for the past month, tightened credit further Thursday before reporting a $700 million hike in the basic money supply. The money supply has risen the past two months at sharply higher rates than Fed targets.

BECAUSE SHORT term interest rates have risen recently, many analysts predicted the Fed soon would raise the discount rate it charges member banks for loans. Interest rates should climb even further. That belief sparked some selling.

The rest of the news background was mixed.

Early in the week, Treasury Sec. W. Michael Blumenthal sparked some selling when he told the Senate Finance Committee the nation's trade deficit could exceed $25 billion. The administration previously had predicted a deficit "up to $25 billion."

On the brighter side, the labor department reported a 1 per cent dip in July's wholesale price index, which followed June's .7 per cent

Lawyer's advice wise in real estate contracts

Moneywise

by Robert Edwards

I plan to lend a son money interest free to build a $32,000 house. I am giving him the land worth $10,000. The house will remain in my name, although my will leaves it to him. He will pay me for insurance, taxes, and a portion of the cost monthly. How can he claim payments as an income-tax deduction? How much of the $100 payable on the cost can we call interest? How can we avoid gift and inheritance taxes when the house is transferred to his name? No mortgage from a bank will be involved.

—L.D.

You may take the deductions for taxes because you are the owner of the house. Your son cannot take those deductions because he is not the owner. Your gifts of the land and any unpaid balance will be included in a total gift-estate tax compilation later. You can avoid giift and inheritance taxes only on gifts up to $3,000 annually. As stated, your plan won't work. You should investigate the possibility of establishing a real estate contract carrying competitive interest with payments to you. You may then give your son up to $3,000 annually to make the payments. Under those conditions, he could deduct interest and taxes. For more complete details, consult a lawyer knowledgeable in real estate contracts and income tax law. This answer is too brief to cover all details.

I retired last December and plan to work until I earn $3,000 which is the limit without affecting my social-security benefits. I receive benefits from my company's profit-sharing plan. Does the income from the plan have to be counted in the $3,000 I am allowed to earn?

No — only earned income from personal services is counted in applying the retirement test for social-security benefits. Payments from the profit-sharing plan do not count.

We inherited a four-unit apartment building 60 miles away plus two lots next to it, one with a rented house on it. (Numerous details of dollar values, mortgage payments, taxes, insurance follow.) Should we pay off the mortgage, sell the property and rebuy an apartment house in the city where we live, carry on as is — or what? We are concerned that the mortgage payments could be a burden if the apartments are not always rented.

— J.P.

Although many specifics are invoolved, generally I would recommend carrying on your present arrangement. Rather than invest all of your $36,000 savings to pay off the existing mortgage, use those as a reserve against a possible lack of rental income to cover expenses. Note — property is increasing in value and, every year or two you can raise rents while mortgage payments remain constant. Part of the income from the apartment house can be charged to depreciation to shelter portions of the income from taxes. Part of the mortgage payments build up your equity in the property.

Finding a comparable investment would be difficult — if not impossible, since you acquired yours without settlement costs. As long as you can get away once or twice a month to arrange for or perform necessary maintenance, your paid manager should care for routine collections of rents, etc. From your explanation, I would guess your fear of being overextended is unwarranted.

Double bubble soap opera

by Vernon Scott

It takes monumental courage for a beautiful blonde actress to import a woman who looks exactly like herself into the competitive world of show business, but Deidre Hall has done just that.

Deidre stars in "Days of Our Lives" and was instrumental in bringing her twin sister, Andrea Hall Lovell, into the soap opera giving it a double bubble aspect.

So far as Deidre and Andrea know, it is the first time twin sisters have worked together dramatically in a television series.

The girls are mirror twins, as opposed to identical or fraternal twins. But they look enough alike to fool all but close friends and lovers.

"When either of us look in a mirror we see the face of our twin," Deidre explained. "We have duplicate moles on our hips, but mine is on the right side and Andra's is on the left."

Andrea verified this observation with a toss of her pretty blonde hair.

The twins were born in Milwaukee and reared in Leesburg and Lake Worth, Fla. Deidre split for Hollywood to become a model and actress 11 years ago. Andrea attended college and now teaches mentally handicapped children in Tallahassee.

Both are divorced. Aside from being single and looking alike, the twins don't have a great deal in common.

Deidre has assumed the polish and savoir faire of a Hollywood actress. She's relaxed and laid back. Andrea is shy, bashful and happy to let her sister do most of the talking.

The girls were dressed alike until they were 12 years old. Curiously, they were not inseparably close as children. There was a competitive spirit between them with Deidre seeking school offices, beauty queen contests and the like.

"We've become closer as adults than we were as youngsters," Deidre said. "It wasn't a traumatic break when I left for California."

In recent years Andrea has spent her summer vacations visiting her twin, staying with Deidre in her San Fernando valley home. Last year Andrea made a guest appearance on Deidre's "Electra Woman" summer television show for kids.

When NBC decided to incorporate a story line twin for Deidre in "Days of Our Lives" they assumed she would play both roles. The producers were delighted to discover she had a twin.

"I don't think twins have ever worked together on a drama before," Deidre said.

"And not too many twins have ever succeed in show business individually or separately except for Carol Wayne."

Andrea, who had very little to say during a noonday break, spoke up, "I've taught school for six years now and hadn't even thought about acting. I have a masters degree in educational administration and enjoy my work.

"When the opportunity came along to appear with Deidre in the series I thought it would be a good opportunity to make some money during the summer. At the moment I plan to go back to my teaching job.

"But I think I might like to stay and work in show business. I've been going to a private coach for acting lessons. I didn't want Deidre to teach me for fear of picking up her mannerisms."

Andrea is doing beautifully," her twin said. "She has real good instincts. Most of her scenes are played with me."

"It's easier for me to work with Deidre than other members of the cast," Andrea said.

"The others have been friendly and helpful, but Deidre makes suggestions and gives me confidence in myself. We talk about our characters at home but we don't run lines for each other."

Deidre has mixed emotions about her twin's desires to establish herself as an actress.

"In all honesty," she said, "I'm a bit ambivalent about Andrea's acting career. After years of establishing my individual identity it seems strange to have another actress around who looks exactly like me."

Andrea nodded her head sympathetically. Should Andrea become as accomplished an actress as her twin, what's to prevent her from taking roles that might go to Deidre?

Since Andrea's appearance on the daily soap opera, Deidre's agent has been inundated with offers for commercials, television dramas and situation comedies requiring the talents of twin actresses.

"There aren't too many twin girls who can act in this town," Deidre said, smiling. "I'd love to accept some of these opportunities with Andrea. But again, I wonder what effect it would have on me as an individual actress.

"It's a great gimmick but I have to think of the long run."

Andrea said she, too, would like to appear in other shows with her sister.

Laughing, Deidre turned to her twin and said, "Look, when we were younger I was the competitive kid and you weren't. Let's keep it that way."

Mark Hamill

After seeing "Star Wars," we were wondering where we have seen Mark Hamill (Luke Skywalker) before. We have spent many sleepless nights over this, so if you can't answer, we may check into the nearest hospital.

Sleep at last! The stellar hero has had more earthly roles. You may remember Mark Hamill (who's now 25) in "General Hospital," "Owen Marshall," "Room 222," "The Magician," "Cannon," "The FBI," "The Bill Cosby Show," "Headmaster," "The Texas Wheelers" and/or "Eight Is Enough," not to mention several commercials.

Could you please settle a bet for me and my brother? I say that Lynda Carter ("Wonder Woman") was once Miss America, but my brother, of course, disagrees. Who's right?

S.B.

Lynda Carter

Hmmm--there seems to be a fine distinction to be made here. Lynda Carter certainly copped a lot of beauty prizes (she was Miss Phoenix, Miss Arizona and Miss World-U.S.A. a few years ago), but she did not compete to be the Belle of the Boardwalk in the Miss America contest held in Atlantic City. Oh, well, ya can't win 'em all.

I'm just dying to get Valerie Bertinelli's (of "One Day At a Time") address. Would you please give it to me?

M.K.

Try sending your letters to Valerie in care of her agent, Herb Tannen and Associates, 6640 Sunset Blvd., Suite 203, Hollywood, Calif., 90028.

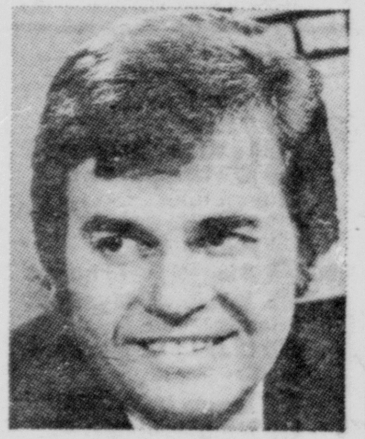
Would you please settle a feud in our family? Is Dick Clark in his 40's or 50's?

D.M.



Dick Clark

If only every problem could be solved so easily! Dick was born in 1929.

Editor's Note . . .

For a living he does illustrations of animals and microscopic life but John Pfiffner's heart and soul is in the basement of his Prospect Heights home where his paintings are stored. Staff writer Debbe Jonak writes about this artist, his life and his work on page 3.

Business writer Lea Tonkin tells Leisure readers how to turn their backyard into the back woods by designing a landscape that will attract wildlife. Lea, who has spent the last several seasons transforming her yard in Crystal Lake into a nature area, tells how to get started on the project, what information is needed and where to seek advice. 'My paintings show the general flavor of the times'

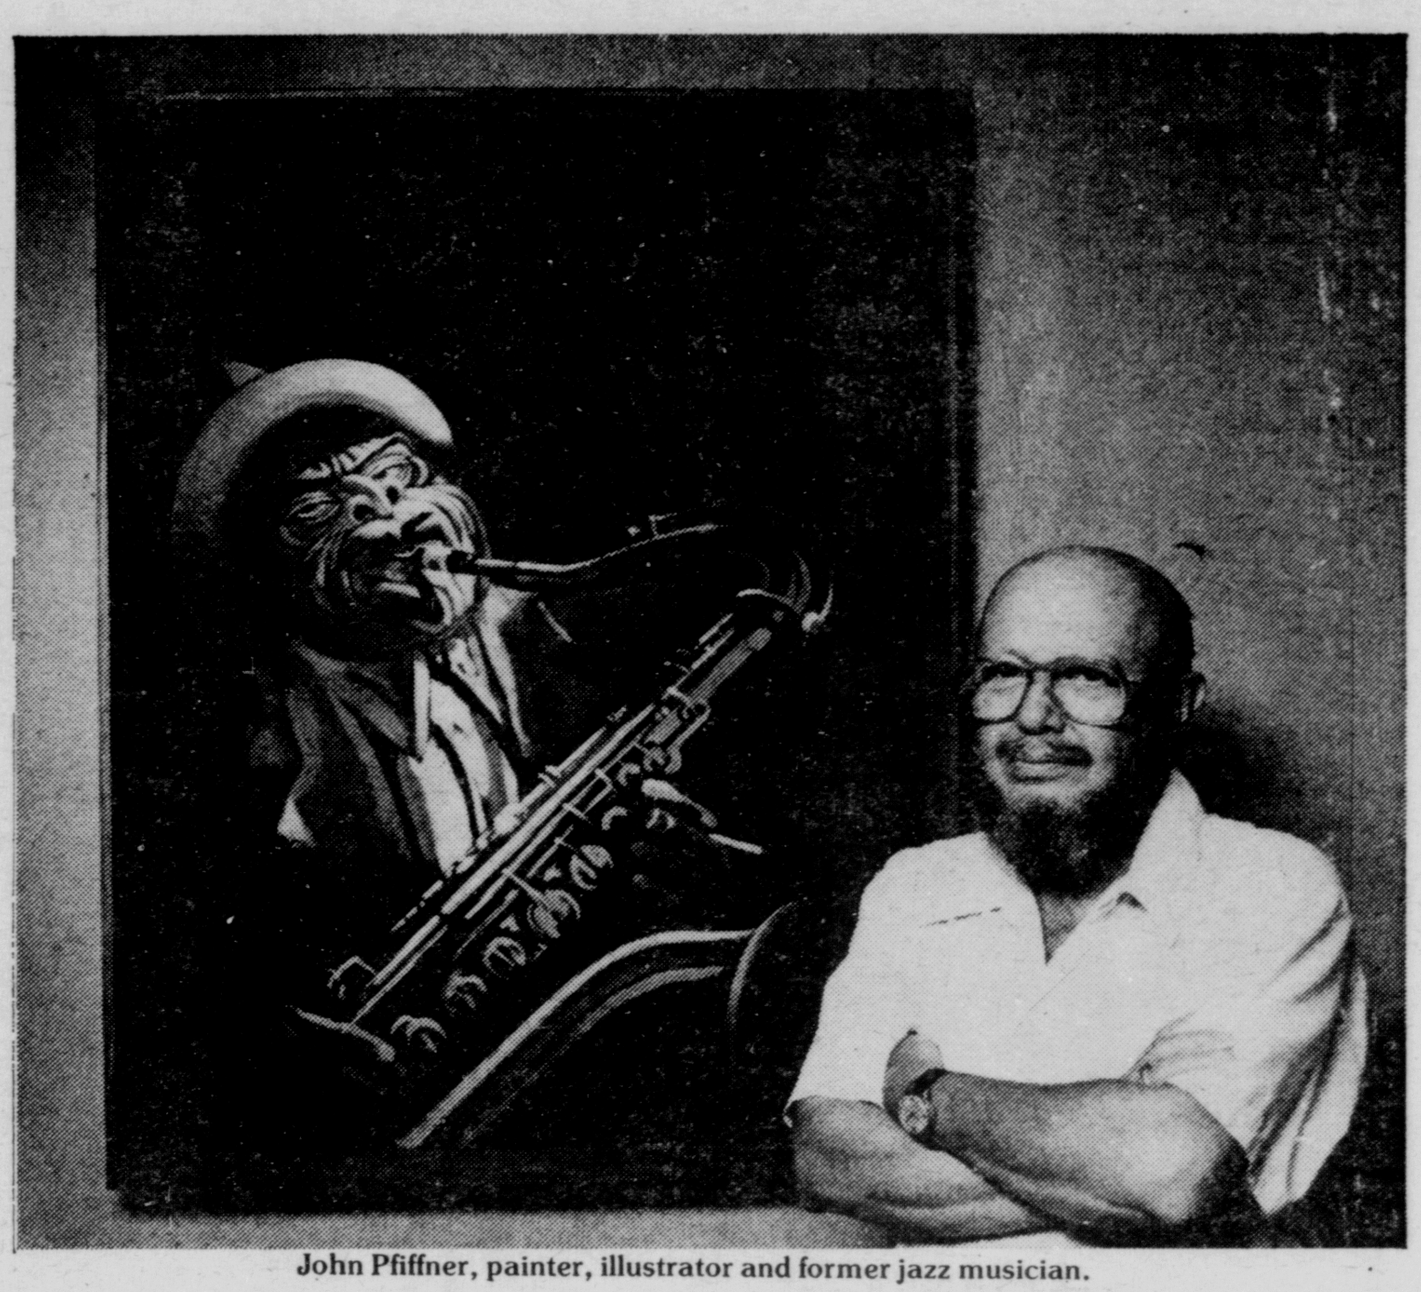
—John Pfiffner



John Pfiffner, painter, illustrator and former jazz musician.

Story by Debbe Jonak

They tell of nights thick with cigarette smoke and the syncopated sighs of saxophones.

They record an era of dreams in the 1930s, one of fear in the 1940s and a time of anger in the 1960s.

The paintings flung in determined patterns across walls, stuffed recklessly in corners and stored two-deep on the basement floors are as much an American history book of the past 40 years as they are a biography of John Pfiffner, illustrator and painter.

"I suppose I'm extremely interested in the direction the nation is going," Pfiffner said as he sat pipe in mouth on his back porch. "My paintings show the general flavor of the times as you pass through them."

Pfiffner, 58, is a short, reflective man with a flaming red bush of a beard who lives with his wife, son and faithful dog at 2 W. Ridge Rd., Prospect Heights.

He is better known for his exacting reproductions of animals and microscopic life forms than he is for the slightly abstracted figures on his canvases.

Pfiffner regularly illustrates for the Field Museum of Natural History in Chicago. He also designs displays for the institution, such as the Animal Kingdom exhibit.

He has illustrated a book on frogs for the Belgium government, a book of animals for Harper and Row Publishers, The Psychology of Life, for the Scott Foresman textbook form and a book of Ornithology.

He said he was the first to draw a three-dimensional DNA molecule, now familiar to college Biology 201 students. He won awards for those and other illustrations in the book "Genetics" by Robert King.

Most recently he illustrated "The Cat: History, Biology and Behavior," by Muriel Beadle, published by Simon and Schuster.

But Pfiffner sets aside illustration as just a creative way of putting meat on the table — something he took on when he became married and responsible.

"The more I'm able to do what I want to do, the more I'll do as little scientific illustration as I can. I'll just paint and write," he said.

"I continue to paint now and I sell a few paintings. But I don't exhibit to sell. I'm not out to sell them — they're a private matter. If I ever had to sell for a living the fun would be lost."

Pfiffner lives comfortably as a free-lance illustrator. He has turned in years of travelling the country as a poor artist for a somewhat middle-class existence.

There's the summer cottage, the landscaped backyard. But there's also the tattered mattress stuffed in a clearing amid dozens of paintings in the basement, where the Pfiffners prefer to sleep during the summer — a left-over from much more off-beat days.

His younger years were as free-form as his house. He wandered about painting, playing in jazz bands and searching for that ever-evasive self.

His paintings record how he grew older and how the nation grew older through the Depression, World War II and the Vietnam War.

The story unfolded as he walked from painting to painting in his home.

Raised in Stevens Point, Wisconsin, he attended school at the State Teachers College and Choinard Art Institute, Los Angeles, before hitting the road.

His early paintings were sometimes cubist, sometimes mirrors of the scenery around him — which changed often in the forties. Mexico, California, New York . . .

"I was always playing piano to make a living. It was the time of life when it was a matter of not knowing if you're going to get this and that. You don't know what the possibilities are, what's going to happen," he said.

He paused for a moment. "It's kind of a shame when life becomes fossilized and you do know what's going to happen," he added finally.

Strong themes began to emerge from

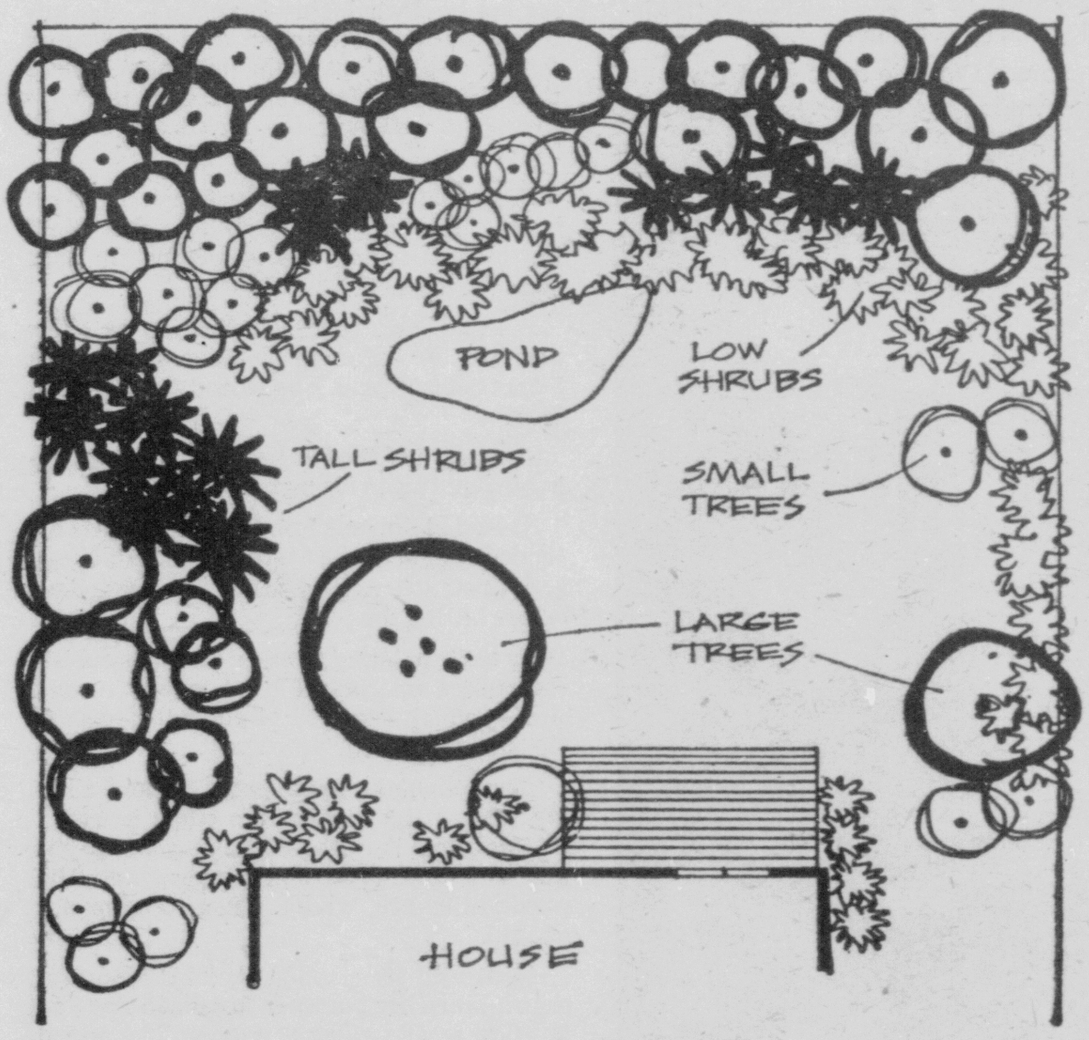
Call of the wild

The animals will love you and the neighbors will envy you when you turn your backyard into a haven for wildlife



A backyard Wildlife plan, as suggested by the National Wildlife Federation, includes food, water and cover for birds and small mammals. Some plantings will attract butterflies, too.

Photos by Dom Najolia
Story by Lea Tonkin

Butterflies drifting lazily from one showy blossom to another . . . the sweet call of a songbird . . . robins flocking to a nearby mountain ash decked out in bright orange berries . . . a squirrel making its rounds amidst a cluster of stately oaks . . . this could be your own small nature sanctuary.

Impossible, you say. The crabgrass is running amok, and that's the only back-to-nature trend you've seen all year. Even the bumblebees shy away from your yard.

Whether you have a small lot or an estate, a backyard plan will ease the transition to a more abundant wildlife habitat. There's plenty of time in the current growing season to begin the makings of a private nature sanctuary, right at home.

"It's definitely a good idea to have a plan," says Tony Fulmer, assistant manager at the Charles Klehm & Son nursery, Arlington Heights and Algonquin roads, Arlington Heights. "If you know where you're going, you can put in a few things this year, and a few more next year."

Begin by boning up on soil conditions in your area, plantings and other landscaping projects which will be attractive to wildlife.

Local nurseries and libraries are good starting points. Talk to experts at nearby nature centers. The U.S. Soil Conservation Service, in Lake Zurich, the University of Illinois Cooperative Extension Service in Rolling Meadows and suburban birdwatching enthusiasts and environmentalists can supply information.

Contoneaster, honeysuckle, viburnums, weigelia, barberry and highbush cranberry are among the shrubs suggested by Fulmer to attract birds to your backyard. Trees which will have berries attractive to birds include mountain ash, crabapples, and hawthorns.

Your list of back yard greenery will be important when you get down to the nitty-gritty of mapping out a landscape plan. Personal preferences, the size of your budget and your yard and soil conditions will have an impact on the final results, Fulmer says.

"One common mistake is to over-plant," Fulmer warns. "people see how little their bushes are, so they plant more." A confused jungle of plants will eventually appear in your yard, if bushes and trees have been clumped too closely.

Homeowners interested in birdwatching can create a backyard habitat suitable for various species of birds and small mammals, according to Ron Gebhardt, district conservationist at the U.S. Soil Conservation Service office, 560 B W. Main St., Lake Zurich.

"Songbirds are often found in older residential areas, because they like the large trees and shrubs," Gebhardt said. "Some like open areas. You can strike a balance between the two."

General information on soil conditions and suitable plantings is available from Gebhardt's office. A free pamphlet called "Invite Birds to your Home" is distributed at the Lake Zurich office.

Once you've researched soil conditions and suitable plantings, you're ready to begin a backyard landscape plan. Start with a plat of survey for your house or a drawing of your lot. The location and size of the house, trees and shrubs, window locations in the house and features which will affect the plan should be included in the drawing.

Wildlife enthusiasts may decide to work out their own landscape plan, Gebhardt noted, or they may call on local nurseries and landscape architects for counsel. For more enjoyment, birdbaths and bushes which will attract birds can be located within view of your house.

You'll gain more than a glimpse of butterflies and birds as a reward for backyard landscaping efforts, Gebhardt says. He counts erosion control, increased land value and pleasant natural surroundings as an added bonus.

For those who'd like a little coaching in the art of designing and creating this backyard bonanza of wildlife, an easy-to-understand pamphlet published by the National Wildlife Federation is just the ticket. There's no charge for single copies of the reprinted "Invite Wildlife to Your Backyard" article from National Wildlife Magazine. You can write to the federation at 1412 16th St. N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036.

More than a million copies of the article have been distributed throughout the U.S. according to Craig Tufts, coordinator of the federation's backyard wildlife program. Although the pamphlet is an introduction rather than an all-inclusive report, it shows what can be accomplished in a backyard as small as 100 by 120 feet.

The NWF backyard wildlife refuge plan is divided into three stages. In Stage I, you start out with a sodded yard. Adding suggested trees and shrubs, you'll have the beginnings of a backyard wildlife habitat.

You'll need to add bird feeders and birdbaths during this early stage. Robins and other ground feeding birds will start to come, perhaps accompanied by cottontails.

"There's an awful lot of plants — both native and exotic plants — that can be used for landscaping around the house," suggests the NWF's Tufts. "They will provide food and cover for birds, small mammals and even butterflies."

"Roadside mowing in many parts of the country has wiped out plants that attract butterflies," Tufts said. "You can actually plant a butterfly garden."

Another hint from Tufts: look for plantings offering wildlife food as well as beauty. Firethorn, honeysuckles, flowering dogwood and shadbush, or juneberry, are among the bushes he favors for berries attractive to birds.

If your backyard already has trees, and shrubs, try to work them into your total plan, NWF suggests. Undesirable plantings may be relocated or removed.

The mature heights of all plantings should be taken into consideration. Varied heights of trees and bushes will give a pleasing appearance. Leave open space in your backyard plan so you will have a good view from the house.

Your enthusiasm, the legal availability of native shrubs and your pocketbook will affect your success in this initial stage of mini-wildlife refuge development.

In Stage II of the NWF plan, it has taken 5 to 10 years for your plantings to reach a fairly mature stage. Now's the time to thin out vegetation if it has become too dense. Flowers and fruits will attract birds and insects and in turn, reptiles and amphibians. A small pond may replace the birdbath. Rabbits and chipmunks may find a home here.

You'll have a long wait to reach the Stage III — approximately 30 to 40 years — if you planted hardwoods and fruit trees recommended in stage one. If mature trees were already in your yard, and you added bushes, you can reach this stage in five to 10 years. Rabbits and squirrels, garter snakes, toads, butterflies and an increasing number of birds may come your way.

The four elements required by wildlife include food, water, cover — as protection from natural enemies, and nesting areas. Be realistic — you can attract a variety of wildlife to your yard, but don't expect every conceivable species to accept the invitation.

Even a small yard or an apartment window feeder can provide good habitat for some wildlife. If your funds are limited, spread out the plantings over several years.

Share your enthusiasm for backyard wildlife. Bring the neighbors in on your plans. Maybe they'll decide to come up with a complementary plan. You'll stand a better chance of hosting wildlife when the surrounding area provides good habitat.

Then get started. A weekend trip to the local nursery or the library, a workable backyard plan, a few plantings, and you're on your way to an exciting backyard experience. §

movie guide

Designed to help readers decide which movies they want to see, this guide includes a listing of movies currently playing in the Northwest suburban area plus capsule summaries and comments. Films reviewed by Genie Campbell are rated excellent, four stars; good, three stars; fair, two stars; and poor, one star.

"New York, New York" — He is a selfish saxophone player, she is a bright young singer in the big band era immediately following World War II. It is an ill-fated love story but director Martin Scorcese rarely allows the jazz-driven pace to falter. Great performances by Robert De Niro and Liza Minnelli among cardboard sets and golden glows that evote the fashions and mood of the 1940s. ★★★

"The Spy Who Loved Me" — Roger Moore returns as 007 in a lavishly budgeted, rousingly constructed comic book come-to-life film. This time, Moore joins forces with a svelte Russian agent to quash Curt Jurgen's plans for world destruction. (PG).

"One on One" — Robby Benson co-wrote and stars in this college basketball story, a kind of "Rocky" on the courts, in which good guys finish first and love conquers all. The story doesn't have to be believed to be enjoyed, and the appealing performances help. (PG).

"Sorcerer" — Big, colorful, but impersonal suspense thriller about four outcasts trucking nitroglycerine through a South American jungle. Roy Scheider gives a strong performance, the visual effects are vividly convincing, and the tension groans to hair-raising proportions. But director William Friedkin forgets to clearly unravel the story as he manipulates your pulse. (PG). ★★

"Star Wars" — Director George Lucas (American Graffiti") pulled out all stops in mounting this space fantasy about intergalactic warfare, and the dazzling filmmaking, technical wizardry and rousing adventure make for one of the most spectacular entertainments of this or any other year. Not a heavy, heady "2001" trip, it aims to entertain, and the sky is the limit. (PG). ★★★★

"The Lake Remake of Beau Geste" — Marty Feldman directed and co-wrote this wildly uneven but funny send-up of Hollywood's Foreign Legion sagas. Essentially a string of gags and set pieces in the Mel Brooks vein, the film starts marvelously but progressively loses steam. (PG). ★★½

CATLOW — Barrington — 381-0777 — "One on One" (PG).

Paintings:

Pfiffner's paintings in the 1940s. Rejected from military service in World War II with a 4F rating, he painted his feelings about it as it raged overseas.

In "Air Raid" a crowd of agonized faces look upward, waiting.

Pfiffner played with various jazz bands during the war and throughout the jazz era. His painting was influenced. A black woman wails into the microphone on one canvas. On another, a black man cradles his saxophone, his cheeks taut as he forces the notes out. Both emanate a sort of nostalgic mystery.

"They were radical people in the way they dressed and the way they talked. They had their own society," he said of the jazz enthusiasts — or beat-niks as they were called then.

"They were a people set apart and they were just as misunderstood by the older generation then as the rock generation is today."

In 1951, Pfiffner left his last jazz band and wanderings to get married and raise a family.

"We had to settle down, didn't we? I got married and had a few responsibilities — the steady job was the thing to do."

He landed a job with Field Museum. "I worked myself to the top spot — the staff illustrator," he said. "There I learned scientific illustration, which has been my bread and butter ever since."

In 1963, Pfiffner decided to try it on his own once more, though, and quit to work freelance.

Though settled down into a middle-class setting, he never really took on the middle-class mindset.

When the Vietnam War exploded the 1960s into student riots, flower children and protest marchers, he found himself a sympathizer. His paintings evolved with the times from jazz themes to war themes.

"I was completely sympathetic to the civil rights proposition. I was one of the first dissenters of the Vietnam conflict," he said. "My painting showed it.

He used the canvas as a protest placard. A frightening soldier with grenade in hand screams from one painting.

In "The Hippie and the Sphinx" two naked flower children loll about in the grass, while a middle-aged couple in the background watch a distant war.

It's Pfiffner's favorite painting. "I don't often like my paintings — this one I like," he said, explaining, "Once I'm done with a painting and I look at it for awhile, I get bored with it."

The youths' oblivion to the war raging behind them expresses their rejection of society's mores.

"The youths are turning away from the myths of the past and becoming themselves as a complete group," he said.

"The Sucker Buck" is a statement on U.S. hypocrisy in the Vietnam era. A passenger pigeon is followed closely by the atom bomb — symbolizing man's potential destruction of himself, just as he destroyed the passenger pigeon.

But the loud cries of the sixties grew slowly hoarse, then silent. The war ended and exhausted reformers stopped screaming about the world's injustices. They faded into society, becoming more involved with self-searching self-potential.

Pfiffner's paintbrush also took on less volatile subjects. Landscapes. Huge close-ups of faces. A large close-up of his own face.

"My ideas about what I want to express change. It depends on the way my philosophy changes. It also depends on the temper of the times," Pfiffner said.

"I'm semi-retired now, I enjoy my life these days. I don't take my life so seriously at all," he said. "I forget the fellow who said, 'Live anonymously and you'll enjoy your life.' "

And so he lives fairly anonymously, semi-retired, in his oil and acrylic castle, his shady, peaceful backyard and the workshop he calls his "Rat's Nest." §

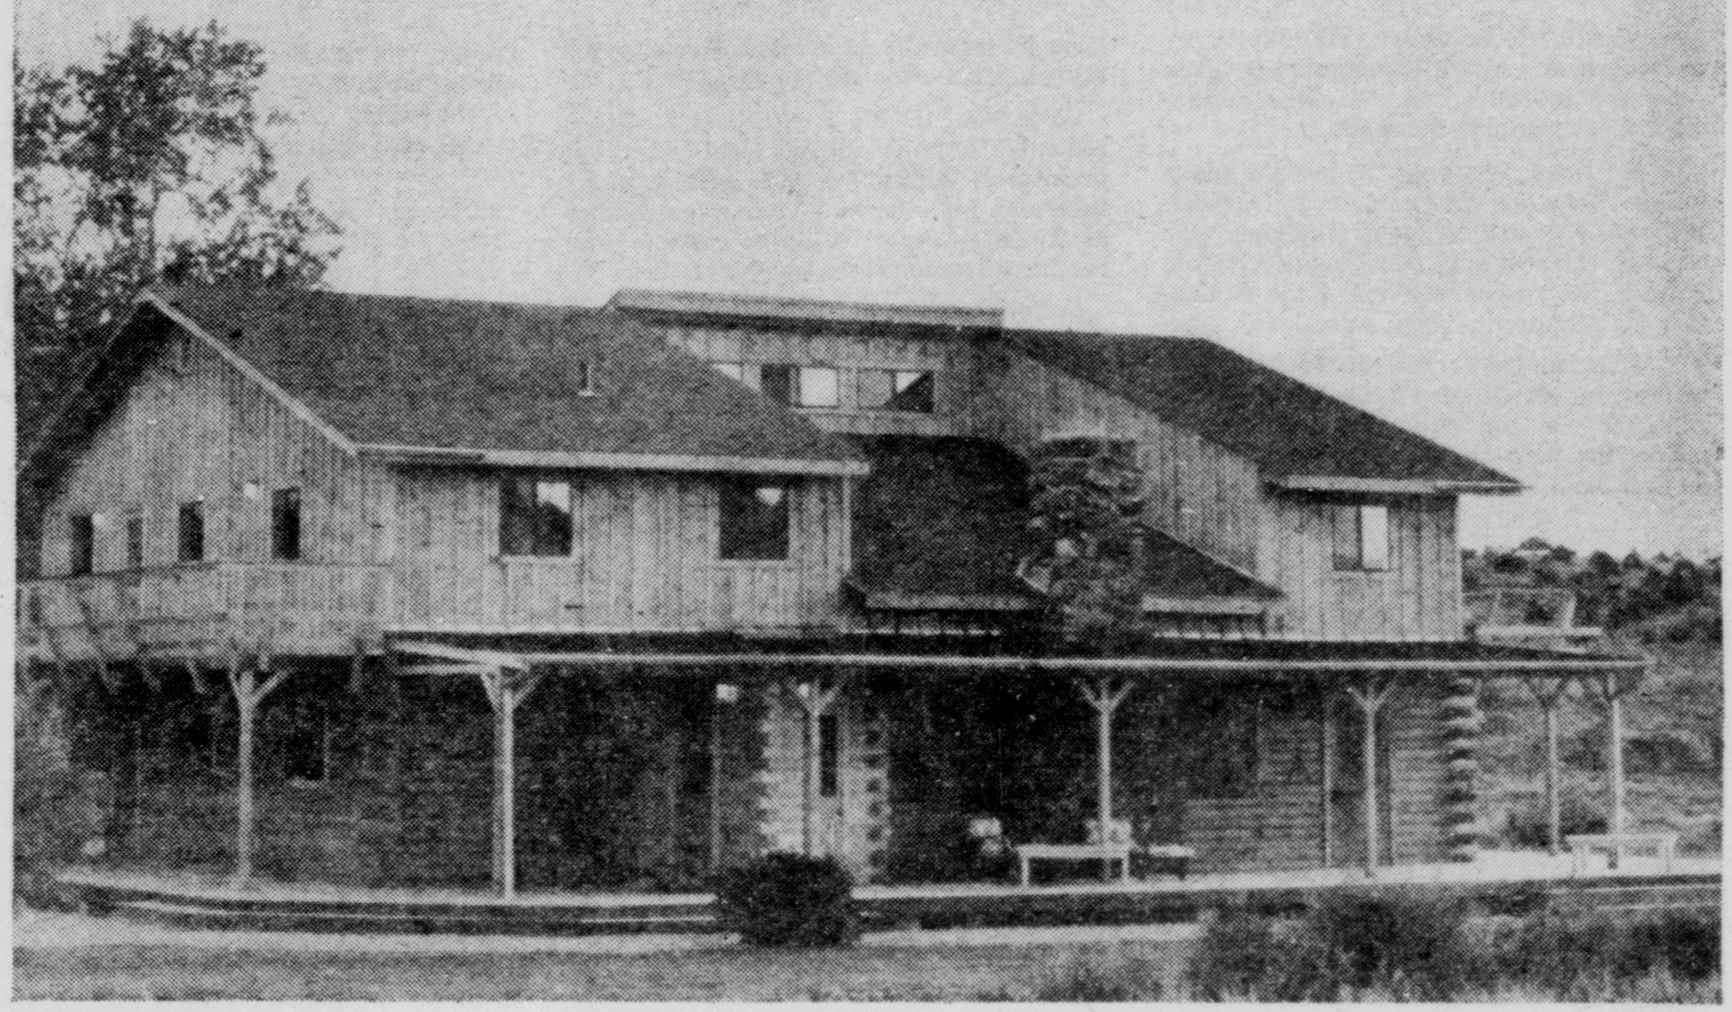
Going 'balloony' in Colorado



by Genie Campbell

Link Baum doesn't know what possessed him. One day while pouring over classified ads for used cars, his eyes strayed from automobiles to aviation and settled upon an ad for a single passenger hot air balloon.

He had never been up in a balloon before, but the original owner was very accommodating. "You fly it — you buy it."

After a few false starts and gentle bumping along the ground, Baum sailed peacefully away into the horizon. He loved it. And he forgot all about the car.

It's lucky for many adventurous vacationers that he did, too. Today, eight years later, Baum and fellow balloonist David Levin, both originally from New Jersey, operate the only hot air balloon ranch in the country — and as far as they know, even the world.

Located on 150 secluded acres in the San Luis Valley near Del Norte, 200 miles from Denver, Colo., The Balloon Ranch, as it is simply and appropriately named, caters to novice balloonists, persons who have never glided in a hot air balloon in their lives, but are game to try and primed for an off beat, memorable vacation.

"The ranch is an adventurous place. We have everyone from film producers to school teachers coming here. People who work inside a lot like to go someplace and do something besides just sit again," said Baum during a recent visit to Chicago.

Open a year the ranch, on the La Garita Creek near the Rio Grande River, also features rafting, fishing, tennis, horseback riding, hiking and bike riding to fill in and around ballooning time.

Early morning and late afternoon are the best times to try ballooning because that's when wind conditions are usually right. Yet with other activities available one will not waste the day even if the weather is not conducive to ballooning.

When Baum bought his first balloon, there were less than a 100 in the world. Today there are almost 700 hot air balloons. Five of those are at The Balloon Ranch.

Upon arriving at the lodge that accommodates twenty-six people at one time, vacationers watch a movie about ballooning to intensify their excitement for the sport. It is rarely necessary. Most are already psyched for the adventure ahead, according to Baum.

The following morning, guests learn how to rig and inflate a balloon. The simple mechanics are explained. Unlike many sports, ballooning can be enjoyed the very first time out. Practice is nice, but not necessary. With a pilot on board, people can sail away immediately.

Most people have little apprehension about going up for the first time because as Baum explains the situation, "We're away from all electrical lines and immediate dangers. It's like the beginner's slope at a ski resort. If necessary, you can bounce around for 5 miles and never worry about getting hurt."

Experienced ballooners are taken on extended trips in the adjoining foothills.

What is so appealing about ballooning?

"It's like making yourself into a cloud," described Baum. "Flying is like imitating a bird. You may feel the sensation of soaring in an airplane but never the gentle feeling of just drifting. There is no sensation of air speed and it is very peaceful and silent. Because the balloon is traveling at the same speed as the wind, you don't hear it. It's as safe as riding in a parachute that's already open," added Baum.

"All you have to do is pull one little cord, the burner throttle, to regulate the lift and descent. You learn to fly by instinct more than you do by instrument."

No special qualifications, equipment or athletic skills are required to balloon. The Balloon Ranch has catered to guests from ages 5 to 74. Familes find it an activity they can share.

Vacationers opting for an eight-day, seven-night package can complete 10 hours of instruction, pass a written exam and receive a FAA pilot certification. It happens quite often. Graduates have even been known to buy balloons of their own.

"We call it going balloony," said Baum who ought to know. Shortly after buying his first balloon he traveled throughout Europe with it — moving it from different sites in a Land Rover. He drew crowds wherever he went, but he did see the Swiss Alps from the best vantage point.

A year later in 1970, in a flight sponsored by Mick Jagger of The Rolling Stones, Baum at 22 became the youngest man to ever cross the English Channel in a hot air balloon. When asked how high he has flown, Baum replied, "10,000 feet or two miles."

Yet his partner, Levin, surpassed that in February, when at a height of 17,000 feet, he piloted the first hot air balloon over Pike's Peak. And head pilot at the ranch, Frank Rider, last year crossed the infamous Bermuda Triangle in a balloon on a course from the Bahamas to Florida.

Baum expects the popularity of vacation ballooning to mushroom much like the sport of river rafting. In both instances, nature is spotlighted.

"Here (referring to Chicago) everything is so tightly packaged and packed together. The world is only as high as the tallest building. One loses perspective where things are and how they relate. When you're able to fly above it all, you see things better. You begin to see patterns on the ground. You notice things you never would have before," said Baum.

The Balloon Ranch is open 9 months out of the year, closing only from Feb. 15 to May 15 when strong winds make ballooning impossible.

And believe it or not, winter ballooning does have its advantages. Extended trips are possible because less gas is consumed in winter and cooler air offers more control. There is no chill factor present because one moves with the wind, and therefore doesn't feel it.

And you don't have to wake up as early. In summer the best weather conditions for ballooning are at sunrise and sunset. In winter one is able to balloon a greater part of the day.

Cross country and alpine skiing are also available at the ranch in winter, along with ice skating and snowmobiling. Beginning this winter the ranch will offer a special "learn to ski, learn to balloon" package week utilizing the nearby skiing facilities at Lake Tahoe.

Lodge rates are quite reasonable though ballooning, like many sports, does not come cheap.

Three days with two nights of lodging (all meals included) is $70 per person based on double occupancy. A two-day introductory course in ballooning for groups of two to six is $75 per person. Private lessons are $190 an hour and the complete certification course is $800.

Ballooning just one pastime in Green Lake, Wis.

So you like to be active. You like to try new sports and activities and practice up on some old favorites. And you like a little change of scene once in a while.

Green Lake, Wis. may be just the place for you. Whether your game is golf, tennis, sailing, or scuba diving or enjoying "far out" experiences such as riding in a hot air balloon, this resort area near Fond du Lac, Wis. is packed with things to do.

You can tour the Fruit of the Woods Winery where you can sample Wisconsin cranberry wine, or you can enjoy a luxurious full-course breakfast or dinner on the Yachts of Fun excursion boat, or you can hire a know-it-all fishing guide who will cook up the best clam chowder you've ever tasted.

Lake trout fishing is excellent at Green Lake this summer and one local restaurant proprietor, Alfred Peck, is getting many takers on his offer to give one free dinner at Alfred's Supper Club to anyone who catches a 10-pound lake trout or better.

Golfers can play the state's oldest course, Tuscombia, one of the state's newest courses, Mascutin, or one of the country's most challenging, Lawsonia Links at Green Lake Center.

Sailing is big in this resort area and the Green Lake Marina, as well as Green Lake Center, has sailboats for rent. Tourists who need some sailing tips can get them merely for the asking, from some of the "old salts" on the lake, such as Bob Rogers, co-founder of the Green Lake Sailing School, Joe Norton, sailing instructor, or Pete Weinreis, one of the nation's few sail manufacturers.

Weekend

If sailing through the air is more your style go over to Green Lake's Heidel House Resort where hot air balloon pilot Dick Dehn, a licensed aeronaut, provides a ride and commentary on his seven-story tall "Majestic 1". The ride takes visitors above Green Lake, Little and Big Twin Lakes, Lake Puckaway, the Puckeann River and the Fox. The balloon is launched at sunrise and twilight and the ride lasts a minimum of one hour. Guests may help with the balloon inflation. Each flight is FAA weather briefed, insured and includes a full ground chase crew and two-way radio communications system. Cost is $85 a person or $125 for two.

Over at Green Lake Center, another resort in the Green Lake area, summer attractions range from arts and crafts classes in ceramics and copper enamelling to touring the grounds via bus or tandem bikes. You can get accommodations here in a hotel, cabin or old estate home and camping is also available.

"Yacht's Of Fun" excursion cruises on Green lake depart at 1:30 p.m. daily from Heidel House dock for 90-minute public tours. Cost is $3.50 adults and $1.75 for children between age 3 and 12. On Wednesday evenings at 8 p.m. a five course dinner with Cornish game hen as the entree, is served on board. Cost of the two-hour dinner cruise is $11.50. A Sunday brunch cruise, costing $7.85, departs at 9:30 a.m. Sundays through October 12. Reservations are suggested since a maximum of forty people are admitted for these meal cruises.

Reservations for the cruises and balloon rides may be made by contacting the Heidel House, Illinois Avenue, Green Lake, Wis. 54941, phone 414-294-3344.

Information on other attractions in the Green Lake area is available from the Green Lake Chamber of Commerce, Box 78 J, Green Lake, Wis. 54941.

Green Lake is about a 2½-hour drive from the Northwest suburbs. Take I-94 through Milwaukee, continue north on Rte. 41 to Fond du Lac, and then west on Rte. 23.

Hotels are overbooked in Portugal

Since the 1974 revolution disrupted Portugal's tourist trade, the government has been begging international travel agents to send back foreign travelers with their hard currency.

The result has become the classic dream-turned-nightmare.

During the first two years, the agents ignored the government's pleas. But this summer they have responded with more enthusiasm than the government really wanted and the starvation experienced by the southern Algarve's resort hotels has today turned into a severe case of indigestion.

Tourists by the tens of thousands with "confirmed bookings" are daily flocking to the 100 miles of beaches. Some of them are not getting the reception they anticipated.

For the hotel keepers, made overly cautious by two years of empty beds, accepted extra bookings as a safety net. Unfortunately, this time the cancellations did not materialize and some hotels have three to five times more guests booked than they can accommodate.

"Overbooking" — a newly coined Portuguese word — has reached the crisis level and is expected to get worse.

The government has called for an official inquiry with fines for offenders and urged the Portuguese to avoid their beaches so more rooms will be available for foreigners.

The national association of travel agents has warned the hotels could be courting diaster with their overbookings — for the contracts they signed with charter groups carry penalty clauses if agreements are not met.

A spokesman for the group said the biggest culprit was the state-run Torralta complex, which recently told twenty-four foreign agencies that their groups would have to be given alternative accommodations. A German company countered with the threat of a law suit for $200,000 while a Swedish company diverted charter flights to neighboring Spain.

Torralta's troubles were multiplied by militant workers sporadically cutting off lights and water to the high rise buildings. They were demanding immediate payment of back wages the complex had been unable to pay due to the lack of tourists.

Many of the guests, who had to climb up to ten floors to reach their rooms, did not appear to support the workers' cause. One frustrated German demonstrated his displeasure by punching a hotel receptionist in the nose. Others simply checked out and went home.

As the problems mounted, the national hotel association worried the penalty clauses could be the last straw for the financially strapped tourist industry.

"If things go this way, by October the hotel industry will be bankrupt," association president Oliveira Santos said.

For the government, a setback in the tourism revival would be a body blow. It is depending heavily on the estimated $500 million plus to be spent by tourists to bolster its revolution-shattered economy.

But no matter what the future might bring, the showing so far this year has been spectacular. For even as the overbooking scandal brewed, the government announced that in the first five months that foreign tourism jumped 51 per cent to 400,000 visitors. (UPI)

Mule trains take park visitors to the bottom of Grand Canyon.

Leave car home when visiting national parks

by Murray J. Brown

If you are among the millions of Americans who will visit our national parks this year, why not leave your car at home and go by train, bus or bike.

Michael Frome says you will get more enjoyment out of your visit if you do. Frome is one of the country's foremost authors on the cnivronment, a long-time dedicated conservationist and a special champion of the national parks.

He feels that heavy auto traffic and pollution have already endangered the natural values that the parks are designed to preserve for future generations.

The National Park Service says nearly 270 million visitors — which includes repeaters — were recorded in 1976. Nearly 280 million are predicted in 1977.

"Autos for years seemed to give us freedom and independence but when they create traffic jams and other problems in the parks, the experience of serenity in nature that visitors expect is seriously diminished, if not destroyed," he said.

He said that alternatives to private transportation have proven successful.

"They help conserve fuel — save money, too — while protecting the park environment and allowing everyone to have a better time."

Frome highlights car-less travel in the 1977 edition of the "Rand McNally National Park Guide," which he has authored for the past 11 years. The updated illustrated soft-sided book covers all 300 areas of the National Park System, including natural, historic and recreation units.

According to Frome, 1970 marked the beginning of a new chapter in preserving the parks, with the introduction of free shuttle-bus service in the most congested areas of Yosemite National Park in California. Two years later free open-air tram bus tours were started in the Shark Valley section of the Everglades National Park in Florida "so visitors could better observe aquatic birds, alligators and other wildlife at close hand."

"Similar shuttle systems have been extended to a number of other parks since," he said. "They prove more liberating than restrictive. More wildlife is visible because there is less traffic to frighten it away. No bus passenger need miss seeing it, whereas drivers of private vehicles frequently do because of the demands of driving.

Frome said that buses pass in each direction ten to fifteen times daily on a regular schedule in Alaska's Mt. McKinley National Park and visitors may disembark at any point along the route "confident they will be picked up later."

At Grand Canyon, Arizona, the "Hikers Special" leaves every morning for trailheads along the West Rim, returning every evening.

"One of the most unusual shuttles operates at the Lyndon B. Johnson National Historic Site in Texas, carrying visitors on a one and one-half hour trip past Johnson's birthplace, the family cemetery and ranch house and through the ranch. Then it connects with a horse-drawn wagon ride from the boyhood home to the settlement where LBJ's grandparents lived in the 1860's," he said.

Frome said "fortunately" national parks are now developing bike routes instead of highways. Private cars have been prohibited from the east end of the Yosemite Valley and only bikes and shuttle buses may use the roads. Similar restrictions might be necessary in other areas, he said.

He noted that a number of national parks — including Grand Teton, Wyo.; Mesa Verde, Colo.; Glacier, Mont.; and Grand Canyon — have bike rentals available.

"And in many instances," he added, "it is not even necessary to drive to the parks." For instance, he said Amtrak's Empire Builder stops at the west and east gateways to Glacier National Park; the Southwest Limited operates to Flagstaff, Ariz., from which there is daily bus service to the Grand Canyon, and the San Joaquin runs to Merced, gateway via bus to Yosemite.

Where the trains don't go, buses almost always do, Frome said. Continental Trailways and Greyhound have budget-priced passes valid for unlimited travel for periods from one week to one month, making it easy to plan one's own independent tour to national parks all over the United States, he said.

"However one reaches the parks, the main thing is to slow down and absorb the natural wonders at leisure," Frome concluded. "Take in the free films and lectures at visitors centers and join the guided walks.

"But avoid trying to see everything on a single trip — save something for next year." (UPI)

More American tourists are bound for Panama

Despite the controversy over the future of the Panama Canal, American tourists continue to come to Panama in record numbers, according to Jose Rogolio Arias, Jr., general manager of Panama's tourist bureau.

Arias said more than 100,000 American visitors are expected in 1977, the seventh consecutive year the country will enjoy an increase in tourists from the United States. He said figures already are running nearly 9 per cent over 1976, which saw a 10 per cent increase over 1975.

Reservations being taken for Moscow Olympics

Deposits are now being accepted for reservations at the Moscow Olympic Games, according to E. Wallace Lawrence, III, President of the Russian Travel Bureau, Inc.

"Interest in the 1980 Summer Games is mounting at an enormous rate," Lawrence said. "To acquaint interested U.S. citizens with the opportunities open for travel to the Moscow Games (July 19-August 13, 1980), the Russian Travel Bureau has published a special Olympic Newsletter with full details of the scheduled events and tour opportunities."

This Newsletter, available free of charge, serves a dual purpose as it also includes a "participant survey" to determine such things as desired length of stay in the Soviet Union, type of accommodations, other cities besides Moscow to be visited, and the Olympic events to be seen.

"Data from this survey," Mr. Lawrence explains, "is being supplied to Intourist, the Soviet agency for foreign tourism and to the Soviet Olympic Committee, to assist in coordinating all arrangements for American visitors."

Copies of the free Olympic Newsletter can be obtained from the Russian Travel Bureau, 20 East 46th St., New York, N.Y. 10017. Tel. (212) 986-1500.

Pan Am birthday flight over North/South Poles

Pan American World Airways will mark its 50th anniversary on Oct. 28 with a special Boeing 747 flight that will carry 150 passengers over both the North and South Poles.

The flight will originate in San Francisco and will fly over the North Pole to London, and then to Capetown, South Africa. From Capetown the aircraft will fly over the South Pole to Auckland, New Zealand, and from Auckland back to San Francisco. The total distance is 26,642 statute miles, and the estimated flying time is 48 hours, 40 minutes.

The flight, subject to government approvals, will come on the 50th anniversary of Pan Am's first flight. On October 28, 1927, a Pan Am Fokker F-7 trimotor aircraft lifted off a dirt runway at Key West, Fla., and flew 90 miles to Havana, Cuba, in a little over one hour.

Passenger reservations for the anniversary flight are available to the public through Pan Am offices or travel agents. Fares for the special trip, subject to government approval, are $3,333 in first class and $2,222 in economy.

The polar flight will be monitored by the National Aeronautic Association, the United States representative of the Federation Aeronautique Internationale, which governs world aviation speed and distance records. Pan Am will seek to beat the record set between November 15 and 17, 1965 by a Boeing 707-320 cargo jet which flew the polar journey in 62 hours, 27 minutes, and 35 seconds, making four stops along the way.

Passengers will be treated to a wide range of inflight services, including full meals and snacks on each sector, 24-hour bar and refreshment service, a selection of movies, and games and contests provided by four separate inflight service crews. The entertainment will include a fashion show, a strolling musician, a magician, and a hairdresser for the ladies.

The anniversary flight will make transit stops of about two hours each in London, Capetown and Auckland. The longest leg of the journey will be between Capetown and Auckland, with 7,523 miles. Other sectors include San Francisco-London, with 6,358 miles; London-Capetown, with 6,152 miles, and Auckland-San Francisco, with 6,607 miles.

Your rights as an airline traveler

What are your rights as an airline traveler? Chances are, they're greater than you think, especially if you've got a confirmed flight reservation. The Travel Department of the Chicago Motor Club-AAA has put together the following tips for air travelers.

If you've got a confirmed flight reservation on a regularly scheduled airline and are denied boarding because that flight has been oversold, you are entitled to compensation.

Here are the specifies which entitle you to compensation: If the denial of a seat was due to reasons other than U.S. government requisition of space, or substitution of an aircraft of smaller capacity; or if the airline can't reroute you to your destination so you get there within 2 hours of your originally planned arrival time on domestic flights, or within 4 hours on international flights (Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and U.S. controlled Pacific islands are considered "domestic destination"); and if you have complied with an airline's specified check-in and reconfirmation procedures and hold a valid ticket.

Your compensation can range from a minimum of $25 to a maximum of $200. The exact amount of compensation which a "bumped" passenger may receive is goverened by the value of the flight ticket.

Bear in mind that you are not obliged to accept the compensation offered. If you do accept the compensation, however, your case is closed. If you reject the compensation, your redress is through the civil courts.

The case of foreign airlines is special. Generally speaking, they are subject to the same time and eligibility conditions for paying "bumped" passengers as are domestic carriers, but only when the passenger who is denied boarding has made reservations for the flight in the U.S., its territories, possessions, or Puerto Rico; and is boarding an international flight which is destined for a point in the U.S. or taking off from a point in the U.S. for a point under foreign jurisdiction.

If your flight is cancelled, delayed, or experiences irregular operating conditions, you are not eligible for compensation.

Of course, all of this bother can be ignored if you manage to stay on the flight you want. To avoid getting "bumped" — arrive at the airport early. Allow yourself sufficient time to check in and get to the gate.

If you have any complaints about airline service or your treatment, contact that airline first. If you aren't satisfied with their response, write the Consumer Adocate of the Civil Aeronautics Board, Washington, D.C., 20428. You will receive a review of your complaint.

Scene: Office of the Sales Manager of the major mattress manufacturing company.

Sales Manager: What is this terrific new idea of yours?

Product Engineer: It's a new mattress with a board in the middle. It makes the mattress harder than — I mean it makes it very hard.

Sales Manager: Sounds good.' We could call it the "Board-O-Pedic." The public wants hard mattresses today. We've been spending enough money telling them this for the last ten years.

Product Engineer: We do use a little foam padding, but with the board in the middle, you hardly feel the padding.

Sales Manager: Have you tried it yourself?

Product Engineer: Sure! I used it for three nights and it almost killed me. But it's harder than any of our competitors are making so it should sell.

Sales Manager: Maybe we should call in the "Upholstered Board"?

Product Manager: I don't know — there's a little company called Schaumburg Mattress Factory that makes fun of these hard mattresses. They tell their customers they shouldn't sleep on these "Upholstered Boards."

Sales Manager: How do you know so much about the Schaumburg Mattress Factory?

Product Engineer: That's where I bought my mattress and man, is it comfortable!!!

Fallaci: Interviewer of the powerful

by Louise Sweeney

The phone rings. Once. Softly. She is curled up on the hotel couch talking into a tape recorder, the instrument she has used to devastate kings, prime ministers, revolutionaries, and Henry Kissinger.

She stops talking. There is a long pause while she glares at the phone as though it were a cobra. Finally, she gets up, approaches it stealthily, then pounces on it. A carefully edited, brief conversation in her throaty, revved up Maserati-race-car of a voice — then "ciao."

Back to the interview, in which this ultra-disciplined journalist, Oriana Fallaci, admits she rarely answers the phone:

"It can ring for hours and I don't move, I let it ring." She lets nothing interfere with the solitude, the concentration of her work: "It is like being a monk that gets free of all the unnecessary things."

The subjects of some of her interviews wish they'd let the phone ring off the hook when she called. Henry Kissinger, while at the height of his powers as Secretary of State, said giving her the interview in which he described himself as the lone cowboy of American diplomacy "had been the stupidest thing of my life."

The Shah of Iran flinched in mid-interview when he discovered she was on his own country's blacklist. Her interview in which India's Indira Gandhi called Pakistan's Zulfikar Ali Bhutto unbalanced so incensed him that he summoned her for his own interview. That interview in turn disturbed Mrs. Gandhi so much, claims the journalist, that it delayed a proposed peace settlement between India and Pakistan.

Who is this woman in whom kings and world powers confide? She is a Florentine, a socialist, a feminist, the daughter of an Italian anti-Fascist and leader of the resistance in World War II, a woman tiny as a child, strong as iron.

She's been called perhaps the most powerful journalist in the world. How does this brilliant and provocative writer, who sees power as "an inhuman and hateful phenomenon," feel about her own power?

"Where did you see this power of mine, did I overthrow any government?" she storms. "Did I make Mr. Kissinger lose his job? Did I stop people from buying oil from the Shah of Iran? Did I resolve the war in Vietnam? Did I convince the people that (head of the Palestine Liberation Organization Yasser) Arafat was not sincere? Was I able to explain to the Americans that Zionism is unbearable? . . .

"My work as a journalist has only value as the words of a historian that tells things."

Many of her most newsmaking encounters are compiled in her recent book, "Interviews With History," (Houghton Mifflin, $4.95) but it is promotion of her latest book, the novel "Letter to a Child Never Born," (Simon and Schuster, $6.95) that brings her here. The novel is a passionate, poetic, and judgmental account of the pregnancy and subsequent miscarriage of a feminist journalist — and is not, she stresses, autobiographical.

Midway through the interview, after she has instinctively slowed down and glanced at my tape recorder a minute before it needs to be changed, she growls, "You don't want to talk about this book, do you? I am here for this book."

She is told, "I'm interested in hearing anything you have to say about the book, but you're the mystery. I have read the book, but I've never read you."

Oriana Fallaci, who admits to having been interviewed even more than she has interviewed, always eluding the interviewer, permits a few almost subliminal glimpses of herself.

"I am very extrovert person locked inside herself. My third sister says: 'Oriana is an open book — you know when a person is clear, everybody understands, we say she is an open book. . . .' " There is one of the dramatic pauses she specializes in . . . " 'an open book — written in Chinese!' " And you caught that. It's the person who has done it. The journalist comes after. Everything is a consequence of the person.

"Even if I get excited or shout something (as she did at a former director of the Central Intelligence Agency, William E. Colby), and it seems that I'm revealing myself, I'm not revealing myself. And I know any second what I'm doing. I am always at the window watching what I am doing. And I know myself very well. Very well," she says, rolling her Vs and Rs.

"People do not like me very much. Usually those that I interview, they like me . . . I know that I look cold to you, eh? I look a cold woman."

She is reassured she doesn't, because, in fact, it is like interviewing a bonfire, talking to this impassioned woman. But she says two or three times that people usually don't like her, that it is a great grief to her, as a feminist, that women writers especially tend to do her in when they write about her.

She herself says: "I am not a fake . . . I am the least frivolous woman you can know,"

DYNASTY by Robert S. Elegant (McGraw-Hill Book Co., $10.95).

Reviewed by Joanne Van Wye

Wealth and political power are the traits of the Seeklong family which has its roots in both the Far East and the Western world.

The family's long struggle to bring harmony between these two antagonistic worlds on both a political and personal level is the theme of Robert S. Elegant's new book "Dynasty."

"I dreamt East and West could be united in harmony and in love," Lady Mary says of her marriage nearly 70 years earlier to Charles Seeklong. Lady Mary, now the matriarch of the Seeklong family, implores her family to carry out her vision as they gather in Hong Kong to celebrate her 90th birthday.

Elegant traces three generations of this powerful Chinese-European family and chronicles more than a century of the tumultuous history of modern China in his latest book.

Jonathon, founder of the House of Seeklong, was the illegitimate son of a Chinese woman and Irish man. He used his cunning and ambition to build a commercial empire and found the Seeklong dynasty. His achievements were recognized by a knighthood and permission to be the first Chinese to build on The Peak, an exclusive section of Hong Kong.

This same type of daring and cunning is characteristic of Sir Jonathon's daughter-in-law Lady Mary, the protagonist of the story. The daughter of an insignificant bandmaster in Her Majesty's Army, Mary arrived in Hong Kong in 1900 when she was 20.

She finagled an invitation to the Governor's Ball for Prince William. With the motto "If you're being foolish, go the whole hog," Mary went to the best dressmaker in Hong Kong to get a dress for the ball.

She was snubbed at the ball until the Royal Prince took notice of her and asked for a dance. That event catapulted Mary from an outcast to the belle of the year.

A year later she married Charles, eldest son of Sir Jonathon. They had four children, Jonathon, Guinevere, Charlotte and Thomas in the first four years of the marriage. When Mary said that was enough children, Charles looked elsewhere and finally took a concubine. This led Mary into a sexual liaison with her brother-in-law Harry, and James was born although his parentage was kept secret. Charles and Mary later had another son, Charles.

The cultural and spiritual differences of the parents and the historical changes taking place in China led the six children on divergent paths scattering them across three continents and into different political arenas.

Jonathon, the eldest, was groomed to take over the family's commercial enterprise but died unexpectedly in a plane crash.

Thomas and James both became soldiers like their "Uncle Harry." Thomas was a Nationalist general totally committed to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek while James followed Chou En-lai and became deputy political commissar of the Communists People's Liberation Army.

Charles, the youngest son, become a Cardinal.

Both daughters married, Guinevere moving to the United States only to return to Hong Kong during World War II to be killed in a poorly constructed bomb shelter and Charlotte moving to Europe after the death of her first husband.

The political events and wars that ravaged China during the 20th Century divided the Seeklong family.

Thomas and James, almost inseparable as youngsters, found themselves meeting as enemies in 1944 as the Nationalists and Communists discussed how to work together to fight the Japanese while still plotting against each other for control of China.

Even more tragic was the assassination in 1939 of Harry Seeklong. After years of fighting the Japanese, Harry in 1939 decided to follow his leader Wang Ching-Wei and became prime minister of the newly formed Sino-Japanese Provisional Government of the Republic of China. Days later he was assassinated by his own son James, "for China's sake."

It was another 31 years before James, attending Mary's birthday party, admits to his family that he killed Harry only to be told he had murdered his own father.

Shaken by the news James, who had been involved during the party in delicate negotiations with the U.S. Under Sec. of State decides to stop haggling to avert the war Lin Piao wants to liberate Taiwan. In exchange for U.S. disengagement from Taiwan, China agrees to better relations, trade, access to China's oil reserves and further negotiations.

Lady Mary can now rest in peace knowing that the improved relations between East and West for which she had so long yearned are possible.

Elegant, for 25 years Hong Kong bureau chief for the Los Angeles Times, provides an intimate insight into Modern China in "Dynasty," his ninth book. The book is full of Chinese culture, tradition and history.

Sections of the book are overwritten and tend to drag, especially the war years, but still "Dynasty" is a compelling saga of one family's struggle during a fascinating period of Chinese history.

Witty, sensible introduction to 'prime of life'

WELCOME TO THE MIDDLE YEARS by Robert Taylor, M.D. (Acropolis Books, Ltd., $10.00).

Reviewed by Bernadine M. Rechner

For generations, middle age has been the bane of our American youth culture but Dr. Robert Taylor challenges that concept and his message is worth our attention.

Taylor's book, "Welcome to the Middle Years," is sub-titled "A Doctor's Guide" and extols this period of personal development. It offers insight and advice on a variety of middle age concerns, and while it is not an in-depth study, it is a witty, fast-reading overview of the emotional and physical aspects of the prime of life.

It is, of course, impossible to define exactly when middle age begins. Dr. Taylor, a family physician from New Paltz, New York, says only that "finally, at age thirty or forty, you've found an image that fits you comfortably, a personality you can feel at home with. And, you settle into the middle years." An age of rebellion, a second adolescence, it is, Taylor says, a time of change, both mental and physical.

His book discusses sexual activity during the middle years, looks at the facts and fallacies of menopause and addresses skin and hair problems, proper diet, physical fitness, harmful substances (drugs, alcohol and tobacco) and the compulsion to work. He explains in detail the recommended annual physical examination.

There is an interesting section on seven organic "Diseases of Maturity" — what they are, what causes them and how they are treated — and on the mental problems of the age — anxiety, depression, hypochondriasis, the empty nest syndrome.

Traces of chauvinism appear in the section on marriage and may irk the reader. Though Dr. Taylor is apparently trying to overcome it, it seems he has not really decided which side of the equality fence he chooses; his solutions to identity problems of women tend to be cosmetic and designed to re-attract the male.

For instance, his prescription for the wife whose husband has a wandering eye is "a trip to the beautician, a new hairstyle, a crash course in cosmetics. Next, some new, with-it clothes — not expensive but in style."

The liberated woman, Taylor says, needs to "realize that personal liberation for you can upset the basis of a marriage founded in years of habit. Unless you're ready to risk that marriage for the principles of Women's Liberation, go slow."

Dr. Taylor does advocate compromise, even counseling if it is needed. But, in urging the "left-behind wife, the intellectual freeloader, the dutiful doormat" to catch up by "putting herself first," his good advice is coupled with scorn for the traditionalist woman who followed all the rules society decreed for her.

"Welcome to the Middle Years" takes a more sensible, less contradictory view of divorce, remarriage, aging parents and adolescent children. It talks about the rewards of middle age and suggests that plans for retirement be made during this period of our lives.

The book is simplistic and superficial but that is both its strength and its weakness. It is easy to read, can be picked up and put down as time permits, and entices, rather than taxes, one's mental faculties.

It is a good introduction to the subject of middle age and therein lies its strength. Scattered throughout the volume are numerous references to public and private agencies where more information can be obtained and, for the reader who wishes more comprehensive knowledge, there is a list of 47 other books, including four by Dr. Taylor, which touch on aspects of middle age.

All in all, "Welcome to the Middle Years" is worth a couple of your reading hours.

Fallaci:

one who cares nothing for fashion, food, or comfort, only for her work.

She says her Italian publisher calls her "Mastino," the mastiff, because when she clamps her jaws onto a book she won't let go.

She, who was nearly fatally wounded in Mexico covering the 1968 Olympics, has lived like a war correspondent.

"I am a woman of many defects and maybe few qualities, but one quality I have — and I'm sure of it, and I shout about it. I am brave. I am courageous . . . I am not only physically courageous. I am courageous with life. Because life has always been very tough with me. Very nasty. Very difficult."

She wears her memories around her neck: a collection of gold pendants and chains that clink and chink like temple bells as she talks. They were gifts from the two people she calls co-conspirators, the two people she loved most in the world and lost last year: her mother, Tosca Fallaci, whom she nursed till the end, and the man she loved, "possibly the most courageous man of our time," Greek resistance hero and poet Alexandros Panagoulis.

He was killed in a political assassination last May. "I am now alone totally. He died. My mother died. So you have a very lonely person in front of you, and just because she's courageous, she survives."

"Listen" — Fallaci often says "listen" in her compelling, dusky voice — "Listen to this: I am a novelist, a writer that has been rented to journalism. . . . Interviews are constructed as a piece of theater with a story inside. . . . That's the secret of those interviews. There is a beginning, a development, and an end. I am a narrator, and they are narrated as pieces stories."

"That's why my journalism is different," she says, quoting the editor of Europeo magazine, for which she has written for the last 21 years: "People want to copy you as a journalist, but they cannot because they are not writers. They are not narrators. They do not conceive of the story."

ARIES (March 21-April 19): The birds have eaten your bread crumbs, Ari, so like Hansel and Gretel, you can't go home again. Since retreat is impossible, stick firmly to your chosen path even though it's rocky and rough. On last day, you are saved by a good samaritan. No, she doesn't live in a "gingerbread house"!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): "Stompin' at the Savoy" was never like this, Taurus, you are really shaking the rafters. Ask no questions and do not hesitate. EVERYTHING you do now is right on! That humming you hear may be a friendly motor. Check it out..

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A venture a day may keep the doldrums away, Gem, but it also leaves plenty of loose ends. Take time out this week to tie a few things down. A tete-a-tete with a friend in a powerful position opens your eyes. Look and learn!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Time circles for you Moonbaby, like a lazy hawk in the desert sky. Wait for the present ebb and flow to stabilize before making decision. End of week finds you in solitude with a tiny acorn of an idea. Hold it carefully, it could grow into a mighty oak.

LEO (July 23-August 22): Lucky Leo, you've hit the jackpot again, and through no design of your own, as usual. Your warmth and energy ignite those around you. On last day, you and a new friend head up, up and away like a roman candle.

VIRGO (August 23-September 22): Life is not just a "land of eternal sunlight," Virg. Upon everything, a little night must fall. Use the intermission between acts this week to catch a few needed winks.

LIBRA (September 23-October 22): Like a moth to the flame, you are attracted to that which could harm you, Lib. Pull in your wings and look for a familiar place to land. One who really loves you has a softer but safer glow. On last day, you feel toasty!

SCORPIO (October 23-November 21): Remembering can sometimes be painful, Scorp, but it is often the only path to real discovery. Look back over past events. Somewhere in all the confusion is a glimmer of truth. Today a glow worm, tomorrow a torch.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22-December 21): Suit-up, Saj, it's time for you to be a Super-Hero again. Few are called, and still fewer answer, but you always save the day. Take care of one who is new. On last day, head for nearest phone booth and call someone special.

CAPRICORN (December 22-January 19): The fields are green, the sun is dancing and so are you, Cap. You love this time of year, when the earth unfolds its riches. Sow a few oats of your own. Now! Before the season fades and passes, share the splendor of the grasses. On last day, you're ear to ear with a friend.

AQUARIUS (January 20-February 18): A wolf in sheep's clothing will try to tempt you away from your firm resolve, Aquari. Hold fast. Listen to the silences and you will understand that the words are false. On last day, you do something daring and outrageous . . . and love every minute of it.

PISCES (February 19-March 20): You have been "a-slippin' and a-slidin', and a-creepin' and a-hidin' " for a LONG TIME now, Pisces. The hour has arrived to straighten up and take care of business. What you put your time and money into now will be future gain. "Jack" STILL needs to work once in awhile!

BEGINNER'S CORNER — Hint and explanation: Watch out for stalemate!

The United States will be represented by a brilliant young team in the upcoming World Student Team Championship to be held August 5-22 at the University of Mexico in Mexico City.

Although students under age 27 are eligible, the US team will average less than 19 years old! Yet it will have an average USCF rating of 2372!

The team members, listed in the order of their ratings, are Yasser Seirawan of Seattle, Washington, age 16; Nicholas DeFirmian of Santa Barbara, California, age 19; Kenneth Regan of Paramus, New Jersey, age 17; Jonathan Tisdall of Syracuse, New York, age 17; Danny Kopec, a student at Edinburgh University, Scotland, age 23; and Ronald Henley of Houston, Texas, age 19.

It is, nevertheless, regrettable that such young chess stars as 8th-rated U.S. player Saul Rogoff, International Grandmaster Larry Christiansen, World Junior Champion Mark Diesen and winner of the European Junior Championship, Michael Rhode, have declined to play.

A match between a US team including these players and the top Soviet team we can expect to show in Mexico would be a dream event.

The Bureau of Engraving and Printing will issue a souvenir card in conjunction with PURIPEX '77, the silver anniversary Philatelic Exhibition being held Sept. 2-5 in San Juan, Puerto Rico.

The card depicts, on the left, a block of four 3-cent Puerto Rico stamps issued in 1937 as part of the U.S. Territorial Series. The adhesives feature the Governor's Palace (La Fortaleza) which is the oldest executive mansion in the hemisphere still used for that purpose.

On the right of the card is San Juan Gate where, in early times, arriving dignitaries were greeted and escorted to the Cathedral to give thanks for a safe journey.

The souvenir cards are $1.50 each and may be ordered by mail from "PURIPEX '77 Souvenir Card, Bureau of Engraving and Printing, Washington, D.C. 20228." There is a limit of five cards per customer for the first 30 days after release on Sept. 2; for the next 60 days cards may be purchased in unlimited quantities. The card will be withdrawn from sale on Dec. 1, 1977 or when stocks are exhausted.

Damaged first day covers may be the result of return addresses which are placed by the collector too low or too far to the left of the envelope, a U.S. Postal Service study has determined.

Operators of letter sorting machines have only one second to read the last three digits of the zip code and they are trained to look to the right of the envelope. If the zip code is not readily visible in that short a time, the envelopes get shunted off for manual sorting later. This often results in a second cancellation being applied to covers.

To avoid this, Gordon C. Morison, Director of Customer Programs, said collectors should place their address to the right of the envelope and at least 5/8 of an inch up from the bottom.
